American military leaders in general are now realizing the value of higher education for men in service. It is for this reason that colleges and universities all over the nation are accelerating their schooling program.

accelerating their schooling program.

Various educational and military authorities have repeatedly stressed the importance and advisability of college students remaining in school as long as possible. Military leaders are claiming that college trained men must continue to be furnished for the selective service to be able to produce successful results. This means that a certain percent, at least, must be trained so that they have received their degree by the time they have reached the age of twenty.

McPherson college is now instigating a plan wherein a student may attend summer school and in three years time receive his degree. This is accomplished by having a summer session of ten weeks in length in which ten credit hours may be obtained. Anyone finishing high school this spring may start to summer school, and by the spring of 1945, may graduate with a degree.

Of particular notice will be the fact that because of the shortage of trained men in scientific fields, along with a need for mathemeticians, classes in science and mathematics will increase in number.

Not only is there a shortage of scientists, but also men in nearly every field that the American colleges and universities can teach. College trained men should and will continue to fill the leading positions in fields now open to them by the present

The Student Advertiser

The Student Advertiser

No better advertiser of a school can be obtained than the student himself. No school, regardless of enrollment, faculty, administration, name, or otherwise, can obtain new students if the present students are not satisfied with the school. Nothing speaks better for a school than to find its students enthusiastic in their recommendation for that school.

To turn this around, no student should be willing to be satisfied with merely attending a school, but if he likes the school, should do all that he can to see that others attend. To each student of McPherson college could be asked this question, "What are you going to do to help the school which you are attending?" Does this school mean enough to you that you are willing to conscientiously recommend McPherson college to those who plan to attend some college next year?

With the continuation of the drafting of students now in school, enrollment will become more and more a problem. A greater attempt must be made to get students to attend school here.

Being considered is the possibility that some sort of organi-

Being considered is the possibility that some sort of organization of students could be made wherein each student participates in the getting of new students to school here next year. Perhaps such an organization could accomplish a great deal in getting new students to come to McPherson.

Seeing this need, however, each individual student should feel that he has a definite responsibility in obtaining new students for McPherson College whenever possible.

Is A College Newspaper Justified?

With the possible shortage of paper, the question of the newspaper arises, "Does the college newspaper play a role in activities important enough to justify its continuation?" Nearly every college and university in the United States has its own news organ. It may print a daily, weekly, biweekly, or even monthly publication, but each has its newspaper. From this, one can readily see that a great deal of paper is used solely for college newspapers, and that if their news organs were deemed unnecessary in war time, the result might be unfavorable.

Infavorable.

It is admitted by many small school newspapers that they, the newspapers, do not inform to any great extent, but only remind the student. The question then arises, "Does the Spectator play the part in campus activity that it should? "Do students actually want a newspaper or do they feel that it is worth what must be put into it to make it a success? We will not attempt to answer that. We can say only that in all probability, the majority of students would "howl" with discontent at the discontinuing of the Spectator.

On most campuses, working on the college newspaper gives a mark of recognition, of ability. It is considered an honor to be able to work on the college publication. In all probability, the larger the school, the greater the desire of students to report for the school paper.

The college newspaper should, and probably does to a cer-

The college newspaper should, and probably does to a cer-tain extent play a role important enough to justify its con-tinued publication in that it is dealing with a select group of people who are to be tomorrow's leaders. In spite of this, there is the possibility that college newspapers will be discontinued.

The President's Corner

Recently I was asked to write for publication an article on the subject: "God's Role in This War." I submit the following as my ideas on the subject and assume full responsibility for its theological and philosophical implications.

GOD'S ROLE IN THIS WAR

theological and philosophical implications.

GOD'S ROLE IN THIS WAR

During these days of terrific social, economic and spiritual upheaval many are asking the question: Where is God? or why does God permit this war? In answering the first question I do so by saying, God is on His throne and is enriching the minds and hearts of any and all who are willing to receive Him. He has not withdrawn from His universe and has not repealed any of His promises. In answer to the second question I should answer it by saying, God is not permitting this war as implied by the questioner but rather I should say He is enduring this war and must be deeply disappointed at the crueity and sins of His human creation.

A viewpoint I find it impossible to accept is that proposed by some that God is using Hitler and his Axis powers to punish the Christian peoples of the allied nations. Personally, I believe this concept is an insult to a God of love, mercy, and righteousness. We deserve punishment, but I cannot believe that God would use a means that even we weak Christians would not justify if we were in His place. There are too many inconsistencies in such a concept of God. Why should so many innocent children and youth suffer and so many brutally wicked adults go free? As I see it, we are being punished by our own stupidity and unwillingness to have done those things that would have avoided this world catastrophe.

God's role is to endure and keep His love and mercy alive and available for His children to possess and use to His glory and humanity's good. On His love and mercy alove is there hope for peace and brotherhood and not on His wrath and vengence using such ruthless and brutal men as those in charge of the Axis powers to destroy His children and their institutions.

W. W. Peters.

and much more interest is sure to arise as the students express their views on this important question.

The Senior play, "A Family Por-trait," thought by many to be too large an undertaking for an organi-zation not strictly interested in draration not strictly interessed in dra-matics, is finally beginning to take shape and promises to be a good play, it was announced this week by Ronald Orr, president of the senior class. Although extreme difficulty was experienced in casting so heavy a play, and available material for scenic effort is rather limited, Paul Dannelley, who is directing "A Fam-ily Portrait," expresses confidence that the final performance will be a finished one.

Second Half of Game Rough, Voth High Scorer For McPherson

The McPherson College second team lost its final game of the season the Bethel Reserves last Friday night 34-28.

It was a well played game until the second half when the game began to get rather rough. It became a virtual football game. With good officiating the game would have been very interest-high scorers of the game collecting 11 and 10 points respectively. G. Voth was high pointer for the Canines getting a total of 9 points. McPherson played without two of her players because of inelgibility, again as they did at Bethany on Transfer like. Tuesday night.
