Lehman To Leave Mac; Will Go To Southwest

Miss Della Lehman, head of the English Department, takes a few minutes out from her busy schedule of classes and public appearances to paint a few more strokes on her current picture.

Doing more painting is one of the things Miss Lehman has planned for her retirement. She will be leaving McPherson College June 1.

Prof. Della Lehman, head of the English Department, has announced her resignation from McPherson College after teaching 31 years.

Her plans are indefinite but she would like to do tutoring or teaching night classes in Arizona. Mainly she is planning to do different things at different places.

Former Manchester Teacher

She came to McPherson College in the fall of 1927 to teach speech and dramatics on a year's leave of absence from Manchester College. But she liked it so well that she stayed here.

Now she is teaching literature and French. This semester Miss Lehman is exploring a new field of teaching for her in a history of art class.

She graduated from Manchester College, North Manchester, Ind., in 1921. She then taught for five years, taking one year out for her Master's degree at the University of Southern California before coming to McPherson.

Enjoying Teaching

"The best part of teaching has been the opportunity to know a constant stream of interesting young people." She has liked it also because of the interest and challenge of students who dare to speak for themselves rather than to just accept some one else's opinion.

Miss Lehman has been interested in more than teaching. She gives public play readings, book reviews, and speeches on topics of literature and travel.

She is also interested in art. She enjoys examining old masterpieces as well as trying some oil and water color paintings of her own.

Interested In Politics

Miss Lehman has taken an active part in politics in Kansas because, as she believes, "All people should be interested in government and one cannot separate government and politics."

She feels that politics can be better only if it is worked at actively at the grass roots.

After observing more than thirty years of college students, Miss Lehman commented that students have not changed much. They are certainly no worse, she thinks, but they do have greater problems now.

Pondering With The President . . .

Bill and John Talk

By Dr. D. W. BITTINGER

"Bill, I hear that the trustees are coming to the college for their annual meeting again. What do they do, anyway?"

"John, you ought to know that. They're the governing body operating the college."

"Do they own the college?"

"No, the college is really an independent corporation. In effect, it belongs to the people who have contributed to building it in the past."

"Who does that include?"

"Well, John, that's a hard question. There are thousands of people who built it. Some of them are still living, but many of them are dead."

"When old Sharp Hall was built, they tell me, they had contributions made whereby anyone giving as much as one cent had some claim to ownership in the building, since they were 'selling' bricks in the building at a penny apiece."

"Some people gave a dollar, some gave fifty cents, thus putting 100 or 50 bricks in the building."

"Well, where do the trustees come in?"

"Each district of the area which is called the Western Region elects one trustee to represent them. Then, these trustees elect a few others, and the alumni elect a trustee."

"These people act for all the others, including the several thousand alumni and all the church people, in setting the policies of the college."

"Can they do this by meeting only once a year?"

"Yes, they can set the major policies. They have an Executive Committee of trustees who live close to McPherson, and these meet about once a month, or even more often if necessary to determine the policies of the college in between the main meetings."

"Where do the president and the faculty come in?"

"They're the ones who carry out the wishes of the trustees. Oh, they have some authority regarding policy on their own, of course, but the major policies are determined by the trustees and thus through a representative form of control by the people over the en-the region."

"Who are these trustees?"
"In the main, they're just our fathers and mothers. My father is one of them."

"What will be their chief problem this time? Will they raise tuition?"

"They will try hard not to raise it. What they would like very much to do would be to lower it. What they will be able to do is up to them to decide, but here is their problem."

"Last year McPherson College operated at a net loss of about $17,000. This means that the tuition which the student paid, the money which was given by alumni, by church people and by individuals, and the money which came from industry and from foundations, all lumped together, was not sufficient to pay for the general operating costs of the college."

"The student pays, usually, about half of what it costs to educate him. The other half must be secured from other sources, including gifts."

"If there is a bad year in the area and the gifts are less than had been anticipated, naturally there is an operational loss."

"For the last year or two there has even been a loss on dormitory operation. Dormitory costs may seem high to students, but by the time repair of the dormitory, the maintenance, upkeep, and utilities are paid, the costs are more than the receipts through rent which the student pays."

"Another thing the trustees will face at that meeting is the low faculty salaries. If they were able to raise the faculty salaries more nearly to what they ought to be, then the operational loss of the college would be still greater."

"So, you see, the trustees have hard problems confronting them."

"Any advice any of you have to give to them, or to the administration, will be appreciated."

Macollege Students Present Three Act Opera, 'Martha'

"Martha", a three-act opera, will be presented in the McPherson Community Auditorium March 7 at 8 p.m. by the McPherson College Music Department.

The first scene of Act I takes place in the Royal Gardens, where Lady Harriet Durham (Barbara King) holds court, tired of the luxuries of her life and annoyed with the attentions which her cousin Sir Tristram (Bob Dell) showers upon her.

When she discovers a Fair is being held in nearby Richmond, she and her companion, Nancy (Norma Watkins), decide to disguise themselves as country girls and go there with Sir Tristram as their escort.

Scene II

Scene II of the same act is at the traditional Fair at Richmond, where farmers come to hire maids. Plunkett (Eugene Snyder) and Lionel (Phil Carr), two young farmers, are looking for a maid to do the work which is needed since their mother died.

Lionel is Plunkett's foster brother, whose father had come to the Plunkett farm as a refugee and died there, leaving his infant son nothing but a ring, which is supposed to be shown to the Queen in case of danger.

The two young farmers are attracted by Harriet and Nancy and hire them. The girls take it all as a game, but when Sir Tristram finally persuades them to leave, they find they are actually bonded in service by law.

The two masters drive off with them, not withstanding Sir Tris-tram's protests.

At Plunkett's Farm

The first scene in the second act opens at the Plunkett's farm, where the farmers and their newly-hired maids, who call themselves Martha and Julia, arrive and encounter all sorts of difficulties.

The girls are embarrassed, they have never worked in their lives; at the same time they fall in love with their masters — and vice versa. After Lionel and Plunkett have gone to sleep, Sir Tristram appears and helps the girls to escape.

Royal Hunting Grounds

The second scene finds them at the Royal Hunting Grounds, where the Queen and her entourage are roaming the forest.

Harriet is separated from the rest of the hunters, sadly thinking of Lionel. Yet when he meets her by coincidence, she saves her face by declaring that she has never seen him before.

Lionel, realizing the game, tries to tell the truth and is arrested. At this dangerous moment he remembers his father's ring, which Plunkett hands over to the Queen.

Plunkett and Nancy tell her that Lionel, who has been freed meanwhile, refuses to talk to her. She begs Lionel's forgiveness and reveals his rank and name (the Earl of Derby) and offers him her hand.

Lionel refuses in pride. Harriet realized that she can only win him by humbling herself.

With the help of the gentlemen and ladies of the court she has a replica of the Richmond Fair built on the Square, and she herself changes back into maid Martha again.

Now Lionel cannot resist any longer, and the opera finale unites two happy couples.

Our Fabulous Faculty

By Glen, Vernard, and Carl
Dear student,

How often do you stop to realize how fortunate you are to be a part of the McPherson College Family? Not only do you enjoy the unique advantages of this warm wholesome fellowship, but it is your privilege to study and absorb knowledge under the guidance of one of the most picturesque faculties in Kansas.

This bizarre group brings to McPherson College the extraordinary advantages of their motley experiences.

For example, heading the English department we have Missed Stella Lehman, B. A., M. A., ABAB, CDCD. She is a renowned world traveler and drama critic who formerly sold bicycles in Tibet but went out of business when she misplaced her entire rolling stock.

Ablly presiding over cell 106 is Prof. Sarah May Flunk, B. A., M. A., Mrs. She attended the KU graduate school and has three degrees, Rough, Rougher, and Roughest. Formerly a saleswoman for the Atlantic Monthly, she now teaches English and literature on the side.

Hung in a prominent place in her office is a certificate of recognition from the Red Pencil Corporation of America. Inscribed on the certificate is this message: "To Our Best Customer."

Rounding out the English department is Prof. Harley Stomp, B. D., BAH. Professor Stomp has a most interesting hobby which he pursues for fun and profit — he has a printing press in his basement. For profits' sake he uses mostly green ink.

Top man in the one-man history department is Dr. Raymond L. Gory, B. C., A. D., Ph. D., Phooey. His recently published doctor's dissertation was on the subject, "The Growth and Development of the Sport of Basketball in the Nebraska Territory and its Significance in the Recent Kansas-Nebraska Act."

The dean of McPherson College is Dr. Wayne F. Geezer, who also teaches in the economics and business administration department. Dr. Geezer has been affectionately called by such nicknames as "Geyser" and "Old Faithful" because of his gushing personality.

Presiding over the McPherson College Rocket Society, Chemistry lab, and geology department is Dr. Werner Von DeCoursey, Pb., Zn., NaCl, H2SO4. Dr. DeCoursey's interest in rocks began in his boyhood when he was a local marble-shooting champ and used agates and crystals in this sport. This interest was almost thwarted when he went to a state tournament where they played for keeps and he lost his marbles.

We don't want to take too much time with this, but in the speech department we have Professor Guooy Haze, who sometimes leaves you in one. We believe our point is well taken.

Note: The views expressed in this column are those of CHAFF and not necessarily those of Harris, Faus, and Foley, who at present are dreading the next faculty meeting.

Lake Junaluska To Host Youth

Lake Junaluska, N. C., is the site of the National Youth Conference of the Church of the Brethren this year. The conference will be held Aug. 25-29.

Prof. Donald Frederick of Macollege will be the choir director at NYC. Lauree Hersch, CBYF Fieldworker in the Central Region, will lead the congregational and group singing.

The cost of the conference per person from the different regions are Southeastern, Eastern, and Central Regions, $35; Western Region, $27; and Pacific Region, $27 (less rebate).

These figures include lodging, meals, grounds fee, insurance and registration fee.

The difference in amounts for the various regions is to make some compensation for the inequalities in transportation costs.

The Pacific Coast rebate is the result of a National Youth Cabinet decision that a portion of the registration fee paid by the three Eastern Regions should be divided among those attending from Pacific Region.
