Those Rising Costs . . .

By Dr. D. W. Bittinger

Recently, the trustees announced that tuition costs would need to go up next year. The rise is comparable, or somewhat less, than tuitional raises in our sister colleges across the nation.

As far as I have been able to converse with students at McPherson and elsewhere about this, this raise in cost of an education has been generally accepted as inevitable.

If our buildings are to be warmed and lighted, if our teaching equipment is to be kept up-to-date, our library is to have new volumes, and our teachers to meet living costs educational costs will have to keep pace with other costs.

Here in the Midwest educational charges have fallen somewhat behind similar charges in more populated areas. Both in the east and the west tuitions run nearly one half higher than in most of our schools. In some schools they are two or three times as much.

Let us compare a few cost and income increases across the years:

When I was in college I bought a new Ford car for about $400; at the same time I paid more than $400 for a year of college.

The car now costs at least $2,500; the year of college costs about $1000. (Without the car!)

When I finished college and took a job my income was $100 a month—$1200 a year. Students now begin at $3500 to $5000 a year. Increase in educational charges have not kept pace with that income advance.

All educators and trustees hesitate to advance educational costs. They wish that all youth who have the desire and the ability might find it possible to get an education.

But education, if it is not to "fall on its financial face," must face the financial facts of life. Charges in tax institutions and in church institutions must rise or the institutions will close.

But the student who believes an education is what he should have will find a way to get it. This is his investment in the profession he will follow and the life he will lead. What he invests in that will be well invested.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

Mac Library Adds 1960

'Encyclopedia Americana'

"The Encyclopedia Americana," 1960 edition, is one of the recent additions to McPherson College Beeghly Library.

The new edition is complete in 30 volumes, but there is an increase in pages over previous sets. Many pictures are included in this edition. There are 320,000 index headings.

Among other books added are The Holy Barbarians by Lawrence Lipton. This is the first complete and unbiased survey of the beat generation and its role in our society. Mr. Lipton calls them "holy barbarians"—holy in their search for self and barbarian in their total rejection of the so-called "civilized" standards about them.

A Hog on Ice by Charles Earle Funk. Did you ever wonder why you say "bring home the bacon wild-goose chase, and Philadelphia lawyer?" Mr. Funk, a famous dictionary editor, traces the origin and development of the pungent and colorful phrases we all use.

Social Service in Hawaii by Margaret M. L. Catton. This book will be an illuminating experience for caseworkers everywhere, especially in areas where there are problems of racial minorities.

Hawaii has encountered Polynesian mores and Oriental philosophical and religious concepts which resulted in mutual adaptation.

The Molecular Basis of Evolution by Christian B. Anfinsen. As an effort towards achieving a greater understanding of the fundamental forces underlying the whole process, the book proposes a biochemical approach to the study of evolution.

Mollie is the Journal of Mollie Dorsey Sanford in Nebraska and Colorado Territories, 1857-1866. Mollie tells her reaction to the transplanting from city to pioneer life and triumphant survival of rattlesnakes, blizzards, Indians, and bitter hardships.

For the first time in history, there are more Americans who own homes than those who do not.

Leadership Qualities Needed As Student Elections Near

By Dennis Hubbard

Beginning early next month, elections to determine the members of next year's Student Government will be held. The right to vote in these elections is open to all regular enrolled members of the student body.

What is exactly at stake in these elections? Are the results really important to the student body?

To answer the first question, the most important stake in the elections is the quality of the Student Government next year. The quality of Student Government is determined by several factors; (1) the general willingness of the elected officials to accept their responsibilities and carry them out with efficiency, logic and dispatch; (2) the initiative and tact with which these officials meet new problems; (3) the degree of true leadership displayed.

In short, a quality Student Government is a vibrant group of people who have the happy combination of zeal and plain common sense. The representatives seeking your vote should be considered carefully to see if they fulfill these qualifications.

As to the second question, the results of these elections are of great importance to the student body. Who else suffers if the Student Government turns out to be a dull sparkless, illogical organization incapable of adequately fulfilling its responsibilities?

Popularity is certainly a desirable quality. But it should not be allowed to sway your judgment when you start choosing your Student Government next month.

Response to the idea of sending in letters to The Spectator for the gripes of the students and improvements around campus has been very poor.

Someone has said that the reason that no letters have been mailed, is because they fear the faculty will censor the letters before they are published.

The faculty serves as the advisor to the publication only, not as the censor.

Signatures on the letters may be withheld by request, but The Spectator must reserve the right to have the names on file for legal purposes.

The governor of only one state, was born outside of the U. S. (in J. Hugo Aronson of Montana, Sweden).

Spring Has Come At Last; World Celebrates Arrival

Nature sang her triumphant song of spring March 20 as the sun moved directly over the equator. The farmer's year begins on the first day of spring. All activity is geared toward the new crops. Livestock are taken out to pasture.

The arrival of spring, a symbol of life conquering cold death, is celebrated with quaint and charming festivals in different parts of the world.

In Rome
Centuries ago the boys of Rome carried cowbells of varied sizes from house to house calling for an offering of thanks that winter had departed.

The offerings were sausages, cookies, pies, and cakes which were shared with girls at an evening banquet. After the banquet, social gatherings and dancing were held.

Celebration in February
The Chinese begin their celebration of spring in February with the holiday, Li Chum, meaning spring is here.

Great plowing ceremonies take place in the rural areas. The ox, a Chinese symbol of spring and new life, is most prominent in the festival.

Parades
People, young and old, join the parades carrying small clay images of the ox and flowers of all kinds. There are no spectators. When the processions reach the temples, all clay images are destroyed in hope that their spirits may go to heaven to plead for a prosperous season. After the parades, the people return to their homes to continue the celebration in a family manner.

The Polish farmer dresses in elaborate costumes for the holiday.

Family Prayers
The families gather for prayers before the head of the household sets out to sow the first seed. Usually the priest comes to offer his special blessing over all.

The sowing is done in complete silence by the farmer himself. Even though spring is the most strenuous of the seasons, it is the best loved.

DeCoursey To Participate In Summer Meet

Dr. Wesley DeCoursey, professor of chemistry, has been accepted at the University of Kansas to participate in the summer research program which will be held from June 13 to August 26.

The program is sponsored by the National Science Foundation. Last summer he attended the four week National Science Foundation institute in Indiana which was a refresher course in chemistry.

The 10 week program will provide an opportunity to discuss and study a chemistry problem in which the participant is interested. About 10 chemistry teachers will be in the group. The primary purpose of the program is to improve the teaching of chemistry in small colleges.

Among present state governors, 26 are lawyers, and 26 are under 50 years of age.

Flory Attends State Survey Education Meet

Dr. Raymond L. Flory, professor of history and political science, attended a meeting of the state survey of education. This survey was concerned with the education needs of Kansas.

Similar surveys are held on the elementary and secondary levels. Representatives were selected from state and municipal universities, private four-year colleges, private junior colleges, and public junior colleges. This committee was composed of 19 members.

Floyd Herr, of the State Department of Education, and three employed staff members were also associated with the committee.

These staff members were Robert Keller, University of Minnesota; Nat Evers, Washburn University; and Dean A. L. Pugstey, Kansas State University.

The committee studied enrollments, student migration, enrollment projections, programs, faculty characteristics, physical plant and space utilization, student housing, financial, and financial aids.

The 1000 pages comprising the published reports of all of the committee's studies "contains a vast storehouse of material on all aspects of education," according to Dr. Flory.

Music Class Visits Grade Music Festival

The class in elementary music methods attended the County Grade School Music Festival, Wednesday afternoon, March 16.

The festival was held in the McPherson Community Building. Mrs. Audrey San Romani, associate professor of piano and organ, is instructor of the methods class.

On Monday Dr. Bittinger will be in Chicago for a three-day meeting of the North Central Association. He will return to McPherson for the Booster Banquet on Friday, April 1.

WAA To Hold Annual Banquet

The annual WAA Banquet will be held in the Blue Room of the Warren Hotel Saturday, April 2, at 6:30 p.m. Entertainment for WAA members and their guests will follow the banquet.

Diane Browning is serving as over-all chairman of the banquet and committees are in charge of various jobs.

The decoration committee, headed by Carolyn Fillmore, consists of Delores Lahman, Sue Warrick, Pat Hoover, Violet Oliver, and Marilyn Hanley.

Sherland Ng, chairman, Margaret Cook, and Frances Hutchison are in charge of the meal, and ticket sales will be conducted by Donna Sanders and Irma Wymore.

Gail Fillmore, Billie Mitchell, and Lillian Aotaki are assisting chairman Emille Rowland with plans for the program.
