Pondering With The President

Eirene—What Does It Mean

By Dr. D. W. Bittinger

The temperature was 95 degrees. It was a moonlight night; the tropical palms murmured musically as the sea breeze swayed their branches.

Then the ocean bed of Agadir, Africa, heaved. The modern hotels of this beautiful resort city in southern Morocco crumpled like match boxes under pressure. The "native quarters," more poorly constructed, stood the upheaval better, but the adobe houses and mosques crumpled. People in the resort section and in the old town suffered and died.

There came an awful suspense when the universe seemed to pause. Then the sea in a vast tidal wave roared over much of what had once been a busy, beautiful city. Those caught in the debris or crippled in the disaster could not escape it. Many were drowned; many bodies no doubt were washed out to sea.

In Morocco there were Brethren, Mennonite, and other service workers. They were there to help needy people. Their project is called EIRENE, which is the Greek word for peace. They have been working there quietly for several years.

At once they hurried to Agadir. Under the 95 degree temperature the odor of decaying bodies nearly choked them, but they kept busy digging out the dead and searching for the wounded. The danger of another tidal engulfment was predicted. Disease, because of the lack of all sanitary measures, also threatened. But EIRENE worked on.

The World Council of Churches at Geneva, Switzerland, flew Kurtis Naylor, McPherson College alumnus and Brethren Representative to the World Council of Churches, to Agadir and assigned to him and to EIRENE the relief work of the World Council.

It was announced to the press that Agadir was a dead city and would remain so.

This is probably not true. The dead may number thousands; some may lie buried in the debris for many months. But Agadir will rise again, probably more beautiful as Morocco's Miami-on the Atlantic, than ever before. Likely there will be better "native quarters" in it than there were before, also. This will be a special concern of EIRENE.

Where suffering is, there the peace makers go irresistibly. And when their work is in progress, or is completed, peace is closer than it had been before. This is inherent in the message and the work of Christ.

This is also inherent in Easter. We have been coming through a lenten season. For some, this meant certain adjustments in the food eaten and in certain behaviors. This may have validity. More valid, however, is the feeling of love and hope within the human heart at Easter time and the conduct of one's affairs all the days of the year.

Is EIRENE important? Is peace-making paramount?

It is if we are to live in spiritual fullness, or even physically, as a race for a much longer period of time.

Easter — EIRENE — "Peace I give unto you." These belong together.

Student Campaigning Most Vigorous In Many Years

By Dennis Hubbard

Mac college students did an all out job of campaigning this year for the Student Council elections. At first, as usual, the campaigns started off slow, but by the middle of the week, signs and speeches were under way.

Candidates used all sorts of gimmicks and slogans this year, as to attract and influence the voters to vote their way.

Signs ranged from those written in foreign languages, to boots and lemons hanging in mid-air. Some candidates even staged a political rally in front of one of the dorms to clear up some of the items in their campaign.

The students did a good, hearty, and all out job of campaigning for their student candidates for office. They showed real interest and concern for their officers for next year, as each backed 'the best' candidate for office.

I am sure that I am speaking for all of the candidates in the race, by saying, "THANKS for your support."

With political interest as keen as it is now, and with the students 'hep' to politics, why couldn't a political party or two be started on campus? The students could become active in both state, national and foreign affairs, and the 'eternal isolation' that surrounds every campus, could be broken here at Mac.

Girl Scout camps throughout the country need college women for camp directors, unit leaders, food supervisors, waterfront directors, and health supervisors. For more information on summer work, the students are urged to contact Mr. Mullen. The college library also has two directories on summer jobs. These are: 1960 Edition of Summer and World Wide Summer Placement.

Admissions To Help Locate Summer Jobs For Students

Mr. Wilbur Mullen, director of admissions of McPherson College, is helping students who are looking for summer jobs.

Summer work opportunities are open to both men and women.

The student is provided with room and board, travel expenses within the state, health and accident insurance, and $200 salary payable at the end of the season.

Participants will conduct vacation schools in various communities and will occasionally help with church services in small communities.

YMCA Camp
YMCA Camp Archibald, Freeport, Ill., needs college men from June 5-July 29, and college women from July 29-Aug. 24.

Salaries vary from $45 - $125 for women, and from $165 - $275 for men.

Stanley Home Products, Inc., Westfield, Mass., offers jobs in selling Stanley products throughout the country.

Scholarship Contest
Included in the program, is a scholarship contest with awards to the seven students with the highest total of sales.

YMCA and YWCA, Estes Park Camp, needs women for office work, stenography, telephone work, and kindergarten assistants.

Library Contains Books Providing Easter Thoughts

Macollege Beeghly Library contains many books of religious significance providing thoughts for this Easter season.

Toward Understanding Jesus by Elwyn E. Tildan, Jr. The author provides the means for understanding and answering the questions asked about Jesus: What was He really like? How was He regarded by His disciples? How did His teachings differ and concur with ancient Judaism? How do these teachings affect our lives today?

Christ in the New Testament by Charles M. Laymon. The book is a study of the portrayal of Jesus as the early church knew Him. Dr. Laymon can help all readers see Christ in His fullness in relation to contemporary Christian experience.

Our Jewish Heritage by Joseph Gaer and Rabbi Alfred Wolf. Every aspect of the Jewish faith from its ancient history, through its lore and ritual, to its position in contemporary life, is discussed by the authors.

The Message of the Scrolls by Yigael Yadin. The facts are now known about the Dead Sea Scrolls of their finding, their acquisition and study, which can help explain the curious and fascinating link between ancient times and the present day.

The Faith of the Christian Church by Gustaf Aulen. This book brings a fresh stimulus to Christian thought. Pastors and theologians seeking to keep up with modern theological trends will find the book of particular value, and laymen, too, with appreciation for philosophy and theology.

The Gospel and Christian Education by D. Campbell Wyckoff. A theory of Christian education for present times is contained in this book. The author shows how to construct a theory of Christian education that is theologically valid and educationally sound with the gospel of Jesus Christ as its underlying principle.

The Mind of St. Paul by William Barclay. A clear and complete guide to the beliefs of Christ's greatest witness, Paul, is presented by Dr. Barclay.

Matthew, Apostle and Evangelist by Edgar J. Goodspeed. Dr. Goodspeed, famous translator of Old and New Testament, seeks to answer, for both scholar and layman, the question of authorship of the first Gospel.

Christology of the Later Fathers edited by Edward R. Hardy. A picture of the forming of historic Christian convictions on the person of Christ in the period of the ecumenical councils is presented in this book. Many of the confusing and complicated thoughts of this period of church history are made clear.

Mr. Zahn answered questions posed to him by the students about the institution. Also he explained to them about the reformatory's educational system and how chapel services are held regularly in the reformatory.

After the visit to the reformatory the class visited the Hutchinson Police Department where a lieutenant took them on a tour of the different departments and explaining them and how municipal courts function.

Work Continues On Building

Spring is here and so are many signs of progress, as work continues on Mohler Hall and Jessie Brown Auditorium.

The basement of Brown Auditorium now has the room partitions, electrical wiring, and some of the window frames in place. The backstage area is taking shape with many of the partitions going up and fuse boxes installed.

In the rear of the building the stair forms are in for the stairway leading up to the balcony. Also the rampway for stage flood lights is now in place.

The roof has been put on the auditorium, being made of a special coated light steel with a strong resistance to the weather. Meanwhile cement blocks and bricks begin to shape up the inside and outside walls of Mohler Hall. Also the stairway to the second floor has been begun like the east entrance northern end door frames.
