

Birthdays Bring Beards

Kansans Review History In Centennial Celebrations

By Marilyn Rhinehart

Kansas marked its 100th birthday as a state on Sunday, Jan. 29. On that date in 1861, President James Buchanan signed the official proclamation admitting Kansas into the union as the 34th state.

Throughout the rest of this year the Sunflower State will be celebrating its Centennial with parades, historical displays, and special events in every city and town.

An obvious example of the spirit of the loyal Kansans is the traditional growing of beards. (It seems we have some patriotic males on Mac campus, too!) Perhaps these scratchy symbols induce Kansans to review the fascinating history of the state.

The past of Kansas was filled with famous figures from Coronado and Pike, the first white men to set foot on these plains, to Wild Bill Hickok, Wyatt Earp, and Bat Masterson, who tamed Kansas cow towns in fact, as well as in current TV fiction.

However, the truly great figures of Kansas have been the unsung heroes—the common, hard-working pioneers who settled and stayed in spite of tornadoes, blizzards, droughts, dust storms, and grasshoppers.

The determined efforts of these early pioneers have turned bare, wind-blown plains into the waving fields of grain and prosperous towns and cities that Kansas boasts today.

Whether we be native plainsmen or college-day Kansans, let us join in wishing the state of Kansas a Happy Birthday in her centennial year.

For The Latest In Style—Become Broadminded

Being broadminded seems to be the current fad especially among youth on the college campus today. It is in vogue to be unprejudiced, open-minded to all ideas, and liberal on basic issues.

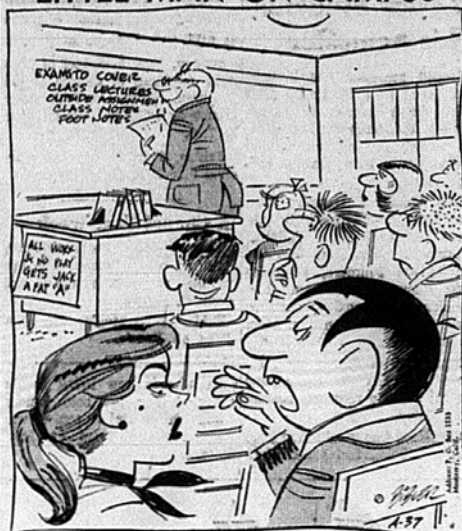

An attitude of fairness and equality is fine, but what has happened to the college student who felt strongly about something and was not willing to concede to conformity?

People today of all ages are becoming wishy-washy liberals. They prefer the middle of the road in politics. In religion, ecumenics encourage a unified church. We are reverting to teenage ideas—we would rather die than be different from our group.

It is the refreshing exception today to meet a person who is an individual in his thinking and believes his own ideas strongly enough to stand up for them. He is the rare person who does not smile tolerantly when new or unusual ideas are brought forth. Instead, he examines and evaluates them and chooses a path to follow and a cause to support.

I would rather meet a man who disagrees with me and says so than to talk all day to one who doesn't care.

Letters To The Editor

Prof Makes Reply To 'Tormented'

Dear Editor:

The letter from the "tuition tormented" contains valid concerns which are deserving of some replies.

Firstly, since the letter was written "as a matter of principle" and "not as a matter of any personal prejudice," I am confident that it was merely an oversight that omitted the favored athletes; the honor scholarship students, and the student teachers (who will eventually receive gratuitously one-half of their loan) from the privileged list.

Concerning the ministry there is another side. This vocation along with teaching in small church-related colleges has been unique in the professional world in that only here do many leave a job, college and graduate studies, and then accept a job paying less than the one forsaken in the first place.

However, this is changing, and increasingly ministers and professors are receiving more adequate salaries. As this happens, they must take the initiative to resist the many special privileges which people have given them for years to compensate for their poorer salaries.

The minister will be much better off psychologically when he is paid an adequate salary and gives up special gifts, discounts, and favors. Perhaps, this day has come.

On the other hand if government, industry, and universities increasingly offer aid and scholarships to outstanding students in teaching, in science, in music, and in athletics; then the church, in order to call some of its ablest to leadership, may be forced to offer similar help.

This will not happen at the State University which is supported by the tax money which we all pay; it will occur only at the small college sustained to a sizable extent by the voluntary gifts of

Pondering With The President

Policy Versus Hunger

By D. W. Bittinger

Several million Chinese will starve unless massive help is sent to them immediately. Ships should already be on the high seas loaded with wheat, rice, and other foods. As far as we know, no such ships are on the high seas and no planes filled with food are in the sky.

Who could render this aid better than we? We are acutely embarrassed, or should be, with our food surpluses when hunger exists in any part of the world.

Up to now we are saying that China is not there. Because we disagree with the form of government which has been imposed upon her, we are unwilling to visit her or recognize her. These millions who will die are likely out of accord with the form of government under which they will die. But this will not keep them from dying.

China has weathered many disasters. Millions of her people have died forgotten. Communication was not as easy then as it is now. Those who bury their dead now will not quickly forget in the years to come that we could have helped. Shall policy, perhaps outdated policy, pile up death?

It should be remembered that these people help pay for that part of your education which your tuition does not pay, and they may have a right to aid those who will serve them in the future.

Concerning the arguments of the last part of the letter, it is unfortunate that the authors had not more training in logic; for the illustrations given are not analogous at all.

It is true that students of contractors are not exempted from student union fees, but it is also true that they can purchase lumber, more cheaply than the rest of us when they build their own houses.

The children of farmers do not get a special deal in the cafeteria; but neither do faculty families have some of the opportunities in the obtaining of food which the average farm family has.

My aim is not to criticize any of these occupational groups but to point out that there are often special considerations inherent in every occupation.

Discounts may be questionable, but in principle the free tuition of the faculty son or daughter is the same as the free train ride of the conductor's son, the free pony ride of the farmer's daughter, the free automobile used by the dealer's family, and the free bonuses and discounts given by many corporations and businesses to their employees.

I should point out that it will be many years, if ever, before my family will benefit from these privileges. Unless a miraculous mutation has occurred in their genes, by the time they come to this age, they will be automatically barred because of more rigid academic standards.

My "Republican" nature tempts me to say: "Quit complaining about someone who has a good deal and be proud that you have the 'rugged individualism' to pay your own way. Your very complaining reveals that you want 'something for nothing.' You, socialists!" (Please, don't take me too seriously.)

On the other hand, my Christian nature prompts me to add: "Nevertheless, we must be sensitive to all who are really in need that we may bear each other's burdens, spiritually, morally, yes, even financially."

Our college must constantly attempt to be fairer than we have been and more helpful, so thanks for the letter.

Bulldogs Beat Sterling, Bow To Southwestern

Macollege Bulldogs were defeated, 67-62, by the Southwestern Moundbuilders on Saturday, Jan. 28. The Mac quintet downed Sterling, 95-85, on Monday, Jan. 30.

After leading at half-time, the Mac Bulldogs fell victim to the Southwestern Moundbuilders by the score of 67-62 Saturday, Jan. 28, at Winfield. This was the second meeting of the two clubs. Hindered by problems at the foul line, the Bulldogs found the range on only 40 per cent of their shots, while their opponents connected with 80.8 per cent of theirs. The Mac club found the difference between defeat and victory here, as they were outscored 21-10 on the one-pointers.

However, from the field the Bulldogs played a much better game. They hit 26 buckets for 39.4 per cent, while the Builders dropped in 23 for 31.1 per cent. This was sub-standard shooting for both teams.

Elmore Scores 23

Game's top scorer was Deryl Elmore, who canned 23 points for the Bulldogs. He was followed by Tom Richards with 16 and Stuart Frazier with 10. The Builders were led by Armand Hillier with 16 points.

Although the Southwestern squad had four men taller than Mac's tallest, they barely outrebounced the Bulldogs, 36-35. Ivan Prochaska pulled off 12, and the only other senior on the squad, Garth Werner, collected 11.

Third Conference Win

Playing one of their better games of the season, the Macollege Bulldogs pulled out their third conference win as they defeated Sterling 95-85 last Monday, Jan. 30, at Sterling.

With its starting quintet all scoring in double figures, the Macollege ball club took control of the Warriors as they met in their third and final game of the season.

Sophomore Deryl Elmore scored 22 points as the team turned in a well-balanced scoring attack. Following Elmore were Stuart Frazier and Garth Werner with 17 points apiece. Ivan Prochaska hit 15, and Tom Richards dropped in 12.

Hot Shooting

Bulldogs had the hottest night of the season from the field, hitting 51.5 per cent. The Warriors could manage to connect on only 36.5 per cent of their attempts. Having a better than average night with free throws, the Bulldogs dropped in 67.6 per cent.

Garth Werner, senior center, held his position as the team's leading rebounder by pulling down six off the boards. He was followed by Stuart Frazier, who came down with five.

B Team Defeated

In spite of phenomenal shooting from the field, the Macollege B team lost out to the Sterling team 69-60. The Bulldogs hit 61 per cent from the field, but could not balance the score with free throws. They hit only 35.3 per cent from the charity stripe.

Leading the pack was Dennis Wallace, freshman, with 22 points. He was followed by Larry Crumrine with 10.

Bethel Whips McPherson By A Score Of 72-67

After making a strong bid at the start of the second half, the Macollege Bulldogs lost out to the Bethel Threshers at Newton on Wednesday, January 25 by the score of 72-67.

Midway through the first half, the score was tied at 12-12, and Bethel went ahead 30-22 at intermission. The Bulldogs blazed back to lead 48-47 midway through the second half.

Although Mac put the ball up nine more times than did the Bethel crew, the Threshers proved the more accurate ball club by potting 51.7 per cent of their attempts as compared with Mac's 38.5 per cent showing.

Accuracy Below Average

Once again Mac was plagued with ragged free throw shooting. Although they outscored Bethel 13-10 in this department, their accuracy was below average as they hit 48.1 per cent against the Threshers' 71.4 per cent.

Franzie Loopp, six-foot Bethel senior, proved to be the game's gunner as he tossed in 32 points. Twenty of these points were scored in the second half when Loopp hit 90 per cent from the field. Mac's high point man was Deryl

As of January 31, the conference standings are:

Mac To Battle Ottawa Tangle With C Of E

Tonight, Feb. 3, the Bulldogs meet Ottawa on Mac's home court. Wednesday, Feb. 8, the Bulldogs face College of Emporia, the top-rating team in the KCAC.

Tonight Mac's Bulldogs will be meeting the Ottawa Braves. This game should be an interesting one if the last contest of these two teams is any indication.

In their last meeting, the Bulldogs came out on the short end of the score, 67-64. However, the only difference between the teams was the fact that Mac's Bulldogs got off less shots than Ottawa.

Mac hit 45.5 per cent of their shots from the field while the Braves pocketed 41.7 per cent. Had Mac been more on the offensive, the results might have been reversed, and we may see the Bulldogs prove this tonight.

Ottawa's seasonal record shows 5 wins and 5 losses to place them in fourth spot in the conference. McPherson ranks in ninth place in the KCAC with a record of 3 wins and 8 losses.

Bulldogs Meet C of E
Next Wednesday Feb. 8, the Bulldogs will be meeting a top contender for conference championship, the College of Emporia, on their home court at Emporia. In the first meeting of the two teams this season, C of E won 74-62.

C. of E. holds the top position in the KCAC competition with a record of 9 wins and 1 loss.
