On The World Scene

Khrushchev Becomes 'Good Guy' Again

By Beverly Judge

Premier Khrushchev sent letters earlier this week to President Kennedy and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan requesting 18-nation summit talks on disarmament.

In Khrushchev's proposal for disarmament talks for next month and in the unexpected release of U-2 flier Francis Gary Powers for Soviet spy Rudolf Abel, the Russian leader has again taken the role of "good guy" in the world.

Using propaganda to its fullest extent, Moscow conveniently failed to mention that the United States and Russia were merely swapping spies in the Powers-Abel case.

All of this has placed Kennedy in a position where the wrong move might cost the United States in world opinion and thus give the Communists added fuel.

Nations and individuals will need to evaluate carefully the events and become aware of the possible implications of the wrong decision.

It we watch closely we may even see another switch of character in the Khrushchev portrait.

Nations Fail To Prevent Building Of Berlin Wall

By Lois Keim

At the end of World War II, in 1945, it was decided that Berlin would be governed by Russia, England, France, and the United States. Whenever any important decisions were to be made concerning the city, the delegates from the four ruling nations would meet to discuss the problems.

On Aug. 10, 1961, these delegates again met. The Russian member declared that in three days, on Sunday, Aug. 13, a wall would be built dividing the city to prevent the already increasing flow of East German freedom seekers from getting out of hand.

Millions of Refugees
The United States representative knew that if the U. S. did something to prevent the building of the wall, it would have literally millions of refugees to deal with.

How could the U. S. possibly handle the problem? Nothing was said. United States dignitaries knew of the situation, but still nothing was said.

All of Germany waited tensely for the blow they were certain was to come—but what would it be...

Sunday, Aug. 13, the wall—solid stone, seven-feet high—was built through the city.

What would the U. S. do? Sunday evening came and went without a comment from Washington.

TV Programs Will Center On Colleges

Television programs of interest to college students have increased in the past months.

Most recent examples of this trend are the programs "Meet the Professor" every Sunday at 1:30 p.m. and "Championship Debate," appearing every Saturday at 11:30 a.m. on local stations. "Championship Debate," the most recent of the college centered TV shows, features top collegiate debate squads from across the nation. The teams debate the question, "For and against federal support to schools."

Debates held each week on this program will culminate in a national TV Debate championship at the end of the current school year.

"College Bowl," a TV program featuring college teams competing on questions based on academic studies, has also held the interest of college students. The program appears each Sunday at 4:30 p.m. on local area stations.

A life of ease is a difficult pursuit.

Ullmann's Concert

Audience Responds Warmly

By Marvin Blickenstaff
Assistant Professor Of Piano

An appreciative audience responded warmly last Saturday evening to the recital presented by concert pianist Theodore Ullmann.

Mr. Ullmann chose a program with representative compositions from piano literature over the past 250 years.

The large work of the evening was Haydn's grand E-flat sonata which culminates that composer's output for the piano.

Grandoise Character
The artist successfully projected the grandiose character of the first movement, the singing melodic line of the adagio and the intensity of the closing section.

This sonata gives us an interesting insight into the relation of the three Viennese classicists. The strong, virile character of Haydn serves as a prototype for the intense emotion yet to appear in Beethoven.

Mozart's music in contrast is exemplary of classical restraint.

Interestingly enough, it was Mozart, not Haydn, with whom the young Beethoven wished to study. Mozart's early death caused Beethoven to seek out the composer of his sonata as a mentor, but neither of them was satisfied with the relationship.

Bach's Prelude
Bach's D major organ prelude and fugue in transcription by Eugene d'Albert opened the program. The music of Bach lay untouched for a period of nearly 100 years before Mendelssohn began his monumental efforts toward a Bach revival.

Liszt also joined the crusade and performed Bach in concert, especially the large organ works which he transcribed for piano.

Musical Genius
This practice was continued by some of Liszt's students, among them d'Albert and Busoni. The modern concert goer is not in the same dilemma as his 19th century counterpart. We are convinced of Bach's position as one of the great musical geniuses western man has produced.

But how sorrowfully seldom do we have opportunity to hear the legitimate Bach stringed keyboard repertoire in concert. Controlled: Technical Facility

Everyone recognized the fact that Mr. Ullmann was in command of a brilliant and controlled technical facility. One could underscore his exceptional agility in octave passages.

That technique alone, however, is an insufficient vehicle for musical expression became especially clear in the Brahms Intermezzo.

Yet in certain passages from Beethoven's Andante Favori and the Haydn sonata the artist did display a warmth and sensitivity in his projection of melodic lines.

As an audience, we should train ourselves to be more objective regarding stage appearance and focus our attention on the performance itself.

Those of us who took the opportunity to meet Mr. Ullmann after the recital found him to be most friendly and engaging.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

Pondering With The President

Be Sure To Read

By D. W. Bittinger

In the Feb. 11 issue of the Brethren youth magazine, entitled "Horizons," is a cartoon article entitled "Jules Feiffer on World War III."

This has compiled a lot of punch into a minimum of words and drawings.

The little man in the cartoon suggests that this is the year to hold a pre-centennial for World War III, since there will be no possibility of an after-centennial; no one will be around. He suggests that Life Magazine may help with this as soon as it fulfills its present commitment to the American Civil War.

Be sure to read this little article thoughtfully.

Student Art On Display

Art accomplishments of last semester's art students of McPherson College are currently on display at the south end of Friendship Hall.

Still life, portrayed by charcoal drawings, is the main theme of the works. Free expression in choice of forms and objects was allowed the students in creating these drawings.

Contributors were members of art classes conducted by Darlene Blickenstaff, instructor in art, at McPherson College. Oil paintings of Douglas Kinsey also appear in Friendship Hall for the month of February.

Free Throws Break Tie; C. Of E. Wins 69-67

Two free throws with five seconds left to play broke a tie and gave College of Emporia a 69-67 Kansas Conference victory over the McPherson College Bulldogs last week.

The victory left the Emporia Presbies in second place in the conference with a 11-2 record and McPherson eighth in the 10-team conference with a 3-14 mark.

The game was close all the way. The score was tied five times the first half, and in the last half the lead changed 12 times.

Score Tied

With five seconds remaining to play in the game the score was tied at 67-67. A McPherson player fouled Harold Smallwood with five seconds left and the Emporian made both shots to win the game by a two-point margin.

Smallwood with 25 points and Deryl Elmore, McPherson with 24 were the high scorers of the game.

Height Advantage

College of Emporia hit 41 per cent of it's shots from the field and McPherson hit 37 per cent. Emporia held a considerable height advantage over the Bulldogs.

McPherson hit 17 of 20 attempts at the free throw line and Emporia made 11 out of 20 attempts.

Bulldogs Hand Swedes 70-65 Conference Loss

By Leland Lindell
McPherson Sentinel

LINDSBORG — The McPherson College Bulldogs hit consistently from the field last night to upset the Bethany College Swedes 70 to 65 in a Kansas Conference game.

This was Bethany's second upset loss within a week, having dropped a game to last place Bethel College at Newton last Saturday night.

The loss dropped Bethany one and a half games behind first place College of Emporia, leaving the Swedes in a tie for second place with Southwestern.

Last night Bethany looked like it was back in the groove again against McPherson, hitting 56 per cent of their shots from the field and holding a 45-37 halftime lead. The Swedes cooled off considerably the last half and hit only 20 per cent from the field and McPherson climbed into a 63-63 tie with three minutes left to play. Five free throws and a field goal put McPherson out of reach for Bethany. McPherson hit 52 per cent the first half and 46 per cent the last half.

John Tegeler, a 6-2 freshman, was McPherson's high individual scorer with 21 points. Bob Ahlstedt had 17 and Rick Deines 16 for Bethany.

McPherson's next game will be Saturday night, Feb. 17, against the Friends Falcons at McPherson. McPherson now has a conference record of 4-11. The box score:

IRVIN WAGNER, ASSISTANT PROFESSOR of music, and Dwight Oltman right, look over some of the music before beginning last Sunday's band concert. Oltman, director of music at Ravenna High School, Ravenna, Neb., was guest soloist for the performance.

Oltman Stresses Essentials Of Dedication, Discipline

Dedication to the art of music and disciplining the self to achieve something artistic are stressed as essentials for music teachers by C. Dwight Oltman, '58 Macollege graduate and director of music at Ravenna High School, Ravenna, Neb.

Oltman says, "Too many people approach music apathetically; therefore, they don't achieve much. Music is a great God-given art demanding the best efforts and abilities of the individual."

"It is unfortunate that society stresses materialistic values today. Our real problems are in terms of morality and human relationships. Music can contribute to these two areas. They are more important than other things considered valuable in the curriculum."

Pioneer Age

The mid-west is still in the pioneer age culturally. The people haven't matured musically and artistically, and they fail to realize how it can enrich life, according to Oltman.

"Students are regimented into taking too many trivial things that they don't have time to pursue their vital interests."

Oltman expressed hope for the cultural level of the people as he stated that colleges are expanding their music curriculum and better trained personnel are gradually coming in.

Oltman predicts that this will eventually be reflected in the high school and grade school levels.

Believer In Discipline
"I'm a great believer in discipline," says Oltman. "One cannot
