plete story of her stay in the warehouse.

Also in the play is Mr. Dussel, played by James Ocherman, freshman from Hollansburg, Ohio. Mr. Dussel, also running from the Nazis, came to stay a few days and remained through the rest of the play.

Daryl Standafer, sophomore from Worthington, Minn., plays Mr. Kraler, the outside contact for the group.

Goodrich And Hackett
This two act production is dramatized by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett. The story has won the Pulitzer Prize and also the Critics' Circle Award.

Ronald A. Rubser is stage manager for the play. Positions are still open for lighting, sound and property crews.

therefore the image of a typical McPherson College student is that of an industrious, perseverant, and fundamentalistic chap, naive in the ways of the world, of art or philosophy, and completely ignorant of subjects as the philosophy of art.

This view may or may not be true, but it is to be encountered with some frequency on several levels of social contact.

Perhaps others know better than any student or body of students, but it is my own considered opinion that the college years is a period of life when an individual can shake empty traditions and their funky limitations, if he wishes, and find a capacity to fulfill a place to play, so to speak, be it center, forward, or quarterback; and that the faculty should greet student initiative with something other than bland indifference or open hostility.

Offensive Plays

McPherson had a total of 61 offensive plays to Bethany's 59 plays, and lost 34 yards in scrimmage, to their 27 yards.

Keim Relates Experiences As Student In Germany

In order to describe my year as an exchange student in Germany, I will try to briefly illustrate a few memorable experiences of that year.

After several days in Paris, I went to a Goethe Institute in Germany where I studied German 33 hours a week for seven weeks. In the Institute were 88 students representing 37 nationalities.

Greatly in need of a rest after such concentrated studying, five of us students took a nine-day vacation trip through Denmark and Sweden staying overnight in youth hostels.

In October, I worked in a refugee camp which was quite depressing in its drab loneliness. Physical and spiritual labors were made bearable only by rewarding smiles of appreciation or a grateful touch.

Classes began in Goettingen, ment learned in elementary logic, one arrives at this formula: People who frequent night clubs wear coats and ties; Mac students wear coats and ties; therefore, Mac students must frequent night clubs. This is sheer idocy!

Reality

Mr. McGarvey, in his attempt to ridicule "conformity," has lost all sight of reality. He has attempted to hold up his wish to "non-conform" (as opposed to not conforming) as the true way to "follow the example of one who wore the clothes of a carpenter."

He has attempted to show that, in order to truly follow Christ, one must adopt a specific uniform. Again, idocy!

The following of Christ is not a physical thing that is shown in the way one dresses (excluding, of course, the clergy of certain sects.) Christ did not order Peter to trade in his old fisherman's garb for a carpenter's apron.

Neither does He expect 20th century Man to wear the robes and burnoose of the Nazarenes of 2000 years ago.

He has also implied that, by wearing less-casual clothing, the students hold Emily Post and Dale Carnegie up as not-so-minor deities.

The fact that perhaps a person in college should know how to handle his utensils in public is but an actual show of respect to those around him.

Christ was raised as an orthodox Jew, and his knowledge of and use of proper Jewish table manners did not decrease his love

Nov. 2, where I began to live the life of a typical European student: much study, a minimum of sleep and food, and many long involved discussions.

During Easter vacation, I worked in a hospital in order to earn enough money to allow me a four-week tour with a student group of Austria, Yugoslavia, Greece, Egypt, and the Sudan.

Included in the tour were a five-day stay at Athens, Easter dinner at the foot of the pyramids, sailboat trips on the Nile, a picnic beside the Red Sea at the Suez Canal, and visits to mosques and bazaars in Cairo.

At the close of the tour I returned to Goettingen and exhaustedly began my studies once more.

The second semester ended July 23, at which time I traveled to Berlin for a stay of eight days. Before sailing from Rotterdam, Aug. 7, I visited briefly with Werner Kruse's family and climaxed the year with a sight-seeing tour of Amsterdam.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Lois Keim, senior from Peoria, Ill., recently returned from a year's stay in Germany where she was last year's McPherson College exchange student to Germany.)

of God one iota.

If Mr. McGarvey had chosen to take an honest tack and say "I don't want to dress up for meals because I'm uncomfortable in a coat and tie," or "...because I don't want to conform," or "...because I haven't got a coat and tie," his attempt at satire might have been successful. But he did not, and it was not.

The best way for a Christian to improve the present world (and apparently this is Mr. McGarvey's aim) is to meet it on a modern level.

For nearly half a century, bearded and be-robed folk have borne signs in New York that the world was coming to an end. It has not.

And for nearly as long, men in modern dress have declared—and proven—that man may find salvation in a Christ who is timeless and un-costumed. And men have found salvation in Him.

Sincerely,
Michael C. Begole

Mac Professor Represents Area At Elgin Session

Paul Sollenberger, assistant professor of music theory and string instruments, attended a Music and Worship Committee meeting as a representative from the Western Region. The meeting was held at Elgin, Ill., Sept. 15-16.

One representative was present from each region for the yearly meeting. Purpose of the committee is to take an overall look at the music and worship programs in our churches.

Representatives cannot serve more than two terms of three years each.

Professor Sollenberger is chairman of a sub-committee which is on a special study of instrumental usage in churches. Gerald Pence, LaVerne, Calif., is chairman of the entire committee.

Members of the committee, who are constantly conducting various surveys, meet only once a year for an official meeting.

Reports on the following topics were given and discussed: anthem evaluation, instrumental usage, encouragement of creative writing of texts and/or music, how architecture is related to choir placement, and how music is being used in children's work.

Evaluation of the annual conference music program was discussed, and recommendations were made for choir director and conference music director of next year's conference.
