We Are Still Waiting For Spark From Heaven

By Harley Stump

By Harley Stumpi Matthew Arnold, the British Victorian poet and scholar, wrote, in 1853, his poem entitled "The Scholar Gipsey." The poem based upon an episode which was related in Glanvil's "Vanity of Dogmatiz-ing" (1661.) is constructed around the following tale. A young scholar in Oxford University discovered that it became, necessary for him to leave the univer-sity because of poverty. He subsequently joined a band of gypsies and learned much of their secret and imaginative lore; of their ability to construct a joyful experiencing of life even in the face of adversity. He later told his scholarly friends from the university that as soon as he had learned the total secret he would reveal it to all humanity. Now, centuries later, Arnold imagines that he sees the young scholar's ghost roaming the hills sur-rounding Oxford. "Still nursing the unconquerable hope. Still clutching the inviolable shade" "And waiting for the spark from heaven to fall." In a very real sense, this becomes the life story of enserv storiort and expedue. The Roact of Truth hea

In a very real sense, this becomes the life story of every student and scholar. The Book of Truth has never been exhausted; we search and learn what we can; we ever continue to search for new and greater recelations which will give us true joy in life. We are still waiting for the spark from heaven to fail to fall.

How Big Are We? By D. W. Bittinger

This is an age when we measure most things by bigness; bigness of college, bigness of bombs, bigness of appropriation.

But what about the bigness of our real concerns? On a college campus it is very easy to be almost unaware of national and international decision-making which is shaping the world, or which may even end the world as we know it.

What is happening in the U.N.? Shall Red China be seated? Shall two Chinas be recognized? Shall two Germanys, East and West, become realities?

Is Federal aid to education dangerous? Is such aid essential if education is to keep abreast of other "aided" programs? Should scholarship aid be easier to obtain for scientific studies than for studies of human or social welfare? Major decisions are being made in these areas. I do not hear them being discussed very much by
