Year Abroad Program Offers Study In German University

Students interested in spending one year of their college education abroad studying in Germany may want to investigate the Brethren College Year Abroad plan.

The plan, shared by the six colleges of the Church of the Brethren, is open to sophomores with a working knowledge of the German language.

Emotional stability and intellectual initiative are also considered.

Students will study at Philipps-Universität, Marburg-Lahn. It is the oldest Protestant university in the world and was attended by such persons as Boris Pasternak and Oleg Gasset.

Dennis Hubbard, who last year attended Maccollege, is participating in this year's program.

Marburg is one of the most picturesque and colorful cities of Germany. It is but a few miles from Schwarzenau, the birthplace of the Church of the Brethren.

Students will live in German homes part of the year and in university housing facilities for the remainder of the year.

Anyone interested may see Dr. Wayne F. Geisert, dean of the college, for details.

Cultural Program

Series Bonus Features Gregg Smith Vocalists

Gregg Smith, director of the Gregg Smith Singers, and a twenty-three voice choir will present a bonus Cultural Series program tomorrow night in Brown Auditorium.

Gregg Smith Singers will appear at Brown Auditorium, Dec. 1 at 8 p.m., as a bonus number in the current McPherson Cultural Series.

Conductor and founder, Gregg Smith, is thirty years old and has composed several choral compositions already published. He recently was awarded a three-year contract from Schirmer's and Lawrence Gould for a Gregg Smith Choral Series.

Gregg Smith organized the group six years ago and since then they have received invitations to premier works of American composers and to pioneer in the presentation of Krenek, Schonberg and Ives.

In America, they have appeared in the Los Angeles Music Festival three times with Stravinsky conducting, in Chicago's Grant Park Series, in the Monday Evening Concerts in Los Angeles, and on tour to audiences as widely different as filmdom and farmdom. The group has been invited to Europe three times beginning with the Brussels World Fair in 1958, and including appearances at Music Festivals in Edinburgh, Darmstadt, and concerts in Stockholm, Hamburg, London, Vichy, Frankfurt and the Salzburg Festival in 1961.

"They looked like refugees from a college prom," reported Time Magazine of the Gregg Smith Singers at the Darmstadt Contemporary Music Festival, Germany, 1961. "But the music they performed was as difficult as any being written."

After listening to them soar through Schonberg, Krenek and Ives, Darmstadt Director, Wolfgang Steineke, paid a rare tribute. "The group was the best of America."

Conductor Smith arranged his 12 male and 13 female singers across the entire width of the stage in an arc that gave breadth and transparency to the group sound.

At full strength, The Gregg Smith Singers now number nearly sixty. White, Negro, Japanese, Hawaiian and Chinese singers are all represented in the group.

Holders of series tickets will be admitted free to this bonus number in the Cultural Series. For this concert alone, admission for others will be one dollar.

Tense, breathtaking action, combined with clashes between personalities and bits of humor, will be featured in "The Miracle Worker," a production of less than two hours.

Students may see "The Miracle Worker" either Thursday night, Dec. 6, or Saturday night, Dec. 8.

Scenes capturing the struggle between Annie Sullivan, the blind Helen Keller's teacher, played by Connie Andes; and Captain Keller, Helen Keller's overprotecting father, played by Peter Ford, contribute to the action of the play.

Helen Keller, a vicious child played by Carol Lunkley, is not past slugging her teacher with her doll for a piece of cake.

Stage manager for this project is James Ockerman, Hollansburg, Ohio. Assistant stage manager is John Miller, Waterloo, Iowa.

Working on lighting is James Weaver, Edwardsville, Ill.; Lowell Yoder, Conway; David Peters, Des Moines, Iowa; and Dennis Emmert, Adel, Iowa. Properties are handled by Sonja Smith, McPherson, and Linda Coulson, Maravia, Iowa.

Grade Seekers Stress Averages, Produce Narrowness of Interest

The improvement in the quality of American undergraduates is confronting the selective colleges with a growing paradox, according to a recent article in the Christian Science Monitor. Since more and more students enter college ready to tackle advanced academic work they qualify earlier for advanced study.

But this acceleration, some educators say, has tended to produce both a narrowness of interest and a subservience to the demands of the curriculum.

Students have become grade conscious as they know the necessity of high grades to enter graduate school. Thus, in many cases, broader aspects of education have been neglected.

Although intellectual ability is still stressed colleges are seeking more and more beyond their mere test scores and grades for such qualities as imagination, creative thrust, inventiveness, and curiosity.

When competitive scholarship is placed so high that students strive for a perfect grade point average above everything else, is it really an improvement in the quality of college students?

When grades and a college transcript become so important that the student feels he must copy test papers, release confidential information, or cheat in any way to obtain a grade, then too much emphasis are placed on them.

Students also refuse to take many college courses which may contribute to personal enrichment because higher grades may be obtained in less-challenging regular courses. This prevents many grade conscious students from taking difficult electives outside their major field. The grade rather than the practical knowledge one could receive is considered first.

Human quality cannot be judged by lists by which students are scored. As the semester continues it should be a challenge to every student to establish his own criteria in personal values.

Which will mean the most to you? A high grade point average at any cost or a well-rounded college experience filled with interesting creative learning which would really benefit you now and in future years?

BSCM Leaders Discuss Political Forces With Over 140 College, University Students

By Robert Hess
Over 140 students from 17 colleges and universities participated in the BSCM conference held at McPherson College over the Thanksgiving recess.

The conference offered a vital opportunity for Brethren students from non-Brethren colleges and universities to share their thinking with students attending Brethren schools.

After getting acquainted, the students were introduced to the conference theme through the showing of two films: "Russia," picturing private life behind the Iron Curtain, and "What Price Freedom?," which pictured a naive American who accidentally stumbled across the Iron Curtain.

The next day an excellent presentation of the history and nature of communism was presented by Dr. John M. Swomley, Jr., associate professor of social ethics and philosophy at Saint Paul School of Theology Methodist, Kansas City, Mo.

Dr. Swomley dissolved the present stereotypes and built a new picture of our relationship to communism.

In Swomley's next presentation he defined terminologies and to some extent placed at opposites Christianity vs. Communism, socialism vs. capitalism, and democracy vs. totalitarianism.

It seems, however, that is possible to find in our world any combination of these, and that all can and indeed are existing in every possible combination.

In the evening, Robert Love of Wichita presented a flowery picture of the actions and interests of the John Birch Society. He was questioned very pointedly following his presentation by a trio of experts including one who has openly been called a communist by the Birchers.

Shortly thereafter, Dr. Swomley and Mr. Love engaged in a heated discussion over personal beliefs.

The next day Dr. Swomley was well prepared to speak about the anti-communists. He discussed the Birchers and many other right wing groups which now exist. In the afternoon, Ralph Smeltzer made a comparison of the communists and the anti-communists.

In Swomley's final address, he challenged the youth and adults of our Christian nation to educate themselves to the problems involved, to become acquainted with the communist movement and the anti-communist movements. He stated, "We have the power to change the threat of communism - to take ourselves out of this position."

The conference closed with a worship service in which those who were present were challenged anew to meet the threat of communism with Christianity.

Comments seem to indicate that this BSCM conference was the "biggest and best," thanks to all who helped make it a success.

16 Kottler Ceramic Pieces On Display In Art Center

In Friendship Hall, during the months of November and first part of December, is a ceramic exhibit of 16 pieces by Howard Kottler of Columbus, Ohio.

Howard Kottler received his Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts degrees from Ohio State University.

In 1956, he was awarded the Ellen Scripps Booth Memorial Scholarship at Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills, Mich., where he received his Master of Fine Arts Degree in ceramics and sculpture.

The following year, he was the recipient of a United States Government Fulbright Grant for study in Finland, where he worked at the Arabia Ceramic Factory and studied weaving at the KOKE studios.

At present, he is teaching at the Ohio State University. He has exhibited in both regional and national shows and is represented in the permanent collections of the Cleveland Museum of Art, The Art Institute of Zanesville, and The Dayton Art Institute.

The pottery on exhibit is for sale and those interested may contact Mrs. Cara Lou Ellwood, ceramics instructor.

Christians Refuse To Fade Behind Iron Curtain

Since Dale Ockerman, speaker in Chapel last Tuesday, has spent considerable time in Europe, he has first-hand information about the Christians in Europe. While in Brethren Volunteer Service he worked in Austria in refugee placement work.

Also while in BVS he directed two training units at New Windsor, Md. After his term in BVS he pastored a Brethren Church in Rodney, Mich.

Ockerman then spent three years in Europe studying and working. He was in Prague, Czechoslovakia, for a month with church leaders. He worked with them both in conferences and out of conferences.

The way to tell that the Eastern Christians are really concerned and genuinely sincere in their beliefs, according to Ockerman, is not through dramatic stories that they tell, but through their sincerity.

Publicly, the Christians behind the Iron Curtain will not mention any of the difficulties they are having, but in private conversations, they indicate some of the problems they encounter.

The situation for the churches vary somewhat in the countries where the churches are located.

According to Ockerman, the most difficult place for Christians behind the Iron Curtain is in East Germany.

In spite of this, there are dedicated Christians living the Christian life before their countrymen. He cited one incident of the courage of the East German Christians.

When the Berlin Wall went up, a Christian publisher and his family happened to be vacationing in Austria. He and his family debated on whether to stay in the West or return to East Germany.

They were even offered money to stay in the West, but they came to the conclusion that they were called of God to return. The family felt that they must return to be a witness of Christ to others in East Germany.

East German pastors needed to consider this in deciding whether or not they would stay. He stated that the East German pastors, in order to comfort their people, sometimes preach from the Old Testament.

The pastors use stories in the Old Testament about people who were persecuted and who encountered difficulties with their government. The people understand the meaning of the stories and are comforted.

Behind the Iron Curtain, there is a tendency for the young people to stay away from church. Going to church might endanger their chances of a good education and obtaining better jobs.

Therefore there are many older people in the churches; they do not have to worry about jobs.

Ockerman added though, that in three visits to a Brethren youth group in Prague, he could sense that these young people were really concerned. This group was one of the larger youth groups. It had about 15 members.

These young people are going against the trend, although it will be difficult for them in later life. They are all out for living the Christian life before other young people.

It is beginning to sink in to the Communists that Christianity is not going to fade away.

The Eastern Christians compare Communism as a storm which comes in and blows the dead leaves away. Those who had gone to church before because it was the respectable thing to do were blown away and left the church.

Those left in the church are the ones who are concerned and who have the courage to stand up for their beliefs.

Some Russian Orthodox theological students believe the church would be better off with only half the membership it has now; if the ones left were sincere Christians. They would also make the religious instruction more demanding and strict.

The government law in Russia is that persons wanting to be baptized into the Russian Baptist Church or confirmed into the Russian Orthodox Church cannot do so until they are 18 years old.

Christians in Russian think this is a good thing. By the time they are of age to join the church they will be more mature and will be able to understand more about the church and its doctrines.

Also by the time they are 18, they will be more grounded in the faith, thus there is less chance for them to fall away from the church. When they join the church early in life, there is more of a possibility for them to be led astray and be of no use to the church.

Ockerman said the Eastern Christians believe that the communists have come as a judgment from God. Before, the church did not help the poor, was not effective, and supported the status quo. Because of this, God allowed the Communists to come in and have their revolution.

The Eastern Christians are also expecting a spiritual vacuum to develop. The Communists will see that men are still thirsting after spiritual matters.

Even if society is changed, human sin is still a very great problem and does not just vanish. They hope that when the Communists realize this they will be more open to the Christian faith. Christians behind the Iron Curtain say that it is sometimes easier for them to live a Christian life because they know what they are against. There secularism is so explicit and atheism is so prevalent that they know what they have to combat.

But in the West, secularism and atheism is hidden and insidious and Christians often do not even realize that these elements are there.

These Eastern Christians also claim that Christianity can survive under Communism. They say, "Why do you think that where there is Communism, Christianity will just vanish away. We have lived under Communism for 15 years trying to witness for Christ and we're still here."

Dale Ockerman said of these Eastern Christians, "I was challenged again and again to feel how strong was the devotion and the courage of the Christians in the Eastern countries."

Seniors May Receive Fellowships For Study

"Now is the time for graduating seniors to start thinking about graduate school," replied Dean Geisert, when asked about fellowships and grants.

As one means of promoting the progress of science, the National Science Foundation plans to award approximately 3,000 graduate fellowships in science for the 1963-64 academic year.

The Graduate Record Examinations are used widely as prerequisite testing relative to graduate school entrance and are used extensively by the various foundations and scholarship funds as a basic screening device relative to graduate school scholarships.

Student Activities Slated During Coming Weeks

The winter formal will be held Friday, Dec. 14. Christmas recess begins Friday, Dec. 21, at 5 p.m. and ends Tuesday, Jan. 8, at 7:45 a.m.

From The Locker Room

By Larry Morlan

Basketball is upon us once more, and when this paper comes out the Bulldogs will have played their first game of the season. Let's look for a moment at what to expect this year from the Bulldogs.

The probable starting line-up will include Deryl Elmore, Marion Enke, John Tegler, Clem Bailey, and Doug Knehan. All five of these players have deadly shooting ability and on a given night could beat anybody.

But since teams can't wait for given nights to win ball games, the Bulldogs will have to come up with something else. Two things to watch for this year are a fast breaking type of offense and a pressing defense.

The fast break will not only enable Mac to shoot more often, but more importantly, it will keep pressure on the opposing team at all times. The pressing defense should enable Mac to rattle opposing teams somewhat and also to get the ball more often.

These two innovations and a few others point not only to an exciting season, but also possibly a very successful one. McPherson will field a vastly improved and determined basketball team this year, so why not also field a vastly improved and enthusiastic cheering section. Follow the team as much as possible at home and on the road. The extra spirit really helps.

McPherson 69, Bethel 54.
Mac is out to avenge that last football defeat and to start the conference schedule off with a win.

McPherson Will Host Administrators Next Fall

Next year the meeting of the Kansas Association of Deans, College Registrars, and Admissions Officers will be held at McPherson College in the fall.

Peace Corps

American Teachers Fulfill Chaucer's Words

By David Anders
Teacher, prospective teacher, retired teacher, the world needs you. Did you know that there are countries asking the United States for teachers? Horace Mann once said, "... education must be open to all."

Here is your chance to serve, teach, and learn. A chance to serve humanity; an opportunity to teach others how to live better in this rapidly growing world; and a great opportunity to learn other peoples' customs, cultures, and language.

From all over the world requests pour into the Peace Corps headquarters — from Chile, Bolivia, Togo, the Ivory Coast, East Pakistan, India, Ethiopia, Somalia, from dozens of other countries with the plea — send us teachers.

Vice President Emmanuel Pelaez of the Philippines told the Peace Corps Volunteers on Dec. 3, 1962, "... slowly but surely you are eroding the boulders of poverty, ignorance and disease

Enrollment Increases In Kansas Colleges

Professor Guy Hayes, director of admissions, stated that there is an over-all 6 per cent increase in college enrollment in Kansas this year.

The over-all increase in the four year private colleges is 5 per cent. Increases in the five state schools is 9 per cent, in the two municipal universities is 1 per cent.

McPherson College had an increase of 12 per cent in enrollment for this fall as compared with the total college percentages.

which block the road to greatness and prosperity..."

The Peace Corps can be a rewarding and meaningful experience whether you are one who prepared for teaching but did not enter the profession, a teacher with experience, or a retired teacher in good health.

Some colleges, universities, high schools, and elementary schools are providing leaves of absence for Peace Corps service.

These schools know that their teachers will come back with knowledge and experience that will make them even more valuable members of their school staff. Some colleges grant credit toward graduate degrees for Peace Corps service.

Every country that now has Peace Corps teachers has already either doubled or tripled its original request.

The list is still growing for teachers on all levels—elementary, high school, and college—and in all subjects.

Why the plea, "send us teachers?"

New nations and older nations as well realize that to unlock their own resources and to bring their societies rapidly forward, they must have education.

These nations have come to a realization that in a democratic society education must be free and open to all regardless of class and social distinctions.

Consequently they are asking the Peace Corps for teachers—people like you.

Sargent Shriver told the American Association of School Administrators, "... when these men and women return from abroad they can well become the best teachers in the school systems of America.

First, they will know their subject; second, they will know foreign countries; third, they will know foreign languages; fourth, they will know the world."

The Peace Corps not only means a chance to serve and to share knowledge and skill as a teacher with people ready and willing to learn, but it also is a chance to learn more about other people, and to increase the ability of a teacher while learning.

Peace Corps teachers must have a college or university degree, a minimum age of 18, sound health, emotional stability, maturity, a willingness to work with other people, initiative, and above all a desire to serve.

Opportunities for experienced teachers are unlimited but opportunities are also great for volunteers without extensive teaching experience. Men and women with liberal arts degrees and with science degrees are also in great demand by many countries.

There is no upper age limit. Married couples are eligible if both qualify and they have no dependent children.

One Volunteer wrote that the faces of the children "are unforgettable—they are the faces of the poor, the deprived, the underprivileged, but they are also the faces of the gentle, the humble, the bashful, grateful—and most of all, they are the faces of the eager, the willing."

The teacher, Nancy Jeffers, went on to say, "... as I stood in the front of my school at the close of the day with the roses in my hand which had been given to me by one of the students, I shed tears of joy because I was so grateful to them for having accepted me with such eagerness. I only hope that I will be able to help them in whatever small way I can..."

Nancy and many others like her are fulfilling the words of Chaucer when he said, "And gladly wolde he lerne, and gladly teche."
