Players Will Dramatize 'Papa Is All' in Brown

"Papa Is All," a comedy in three acts, will be presented by the McPherson College Players in Brown Auditorium tonight and tomorrow night at 8.

The comedy, by Patterson Greene, is about a Mennonite family, the Aukamps. Papa is a burly, tyrannical, evil father who in the name of religion suppresses the simplest pleasures and recreations of his family.

Papa Aukamp is played by Peter Ford, junior from Rochester, Minn.

Mama Aukamp, both gentle and sturdy, is meek, not from fear of Papa, but from deeply rooted religious convictions. Sue Warrick, senior from Limon, Colo., plays the part of Mama.

The daughter and son, Emma and Jake, remain "worldly;" that is, they are not yet Mennonite. Dell Ann Larsen, freshman from McPherson, is Emma, and John Harrison, junior from Beloit, is Jake.

Sonja Smith, a special student from McPherson, plays the part of Mrs. Yoder, a busy-body neighbor who lets Mrs. Aukamp know all of the latest gossip.

The Pennsylvania State Policeman, Brendle, is played by Edwin Mohler, senior from McPherson.

The construction of the set was directed by Michael Begole, senior from McPherson, and James Weaver, junior from Edwardsville, Ill. They were assisted by members of the Advanced Play Production class.

Michael Begole, stage manager for the production, is assisted by Donna McBride, sophomore from Fredericksburg, Iowa.

Maccollege Government Lacks Initiative to Represent Students

America's first land-grant college vaulted into the headlines last spring when it was announced that the Board of Regents of that institution had voted to discontinue the compulsory Reserve Officer Training Corps program on a three year trial basis.

What the headlines failed to acknowledge was that the driving force behind this decision was not the Iowa State faculty, administration, or Board of Regents, but an alert, aggressive, young man named Dick Gimer backed by one of the strongest student governments in the Midwest.

Shortly after the election, Gimer and the other members of the student senate rolled up their shirt-sleeves and began fighting for the elimination of the ROTC program against formidable opposition. They submitted their proposition to officials in Washington, D. C., to the faculty at Iowa State, and personally argued their case to a successful conclusion before the Board of Regents.

It seems to me that we at McPherson College could take a serious look at what happened at Iowa State, and resolve to make our student government the active, driving, viable organization that it ought to be—a group which is more than a committee on miscellaneous affairs, but one which is capable of fulfilling the needs of the student body.

It is difficult to ascertain whether our Student Council is weak due to its organizational structure or because of the limitation of its power. It is probably a combination of both.

I feel the Student Council took a big step in the right direction last week by establishing a committee to change the electoral procedure of that organization.

The committee's proposed revision requires that every candidate for the Student Council must petition and can actively campaign for the position. In addition to the class representatives, eight members will be chosen at large on a plurality basis.

Here is a plan that makes sense. It eliminates the "high-school" system of voting currently in use, i.e., selecting the king and queen from every class to serve

Student Council Considers Possible Election Changes

By Roger Emmert

Main item of business at the regular student Council meeting Feb. 28 concerned a possible change in the Student Council Constitution regarding the selection of Student Council members.

There is some feeling that there should be greater competition for Student Council positions so that the Council will act with its fullest capabilities.

The president has selected a committee to meet and bring a recommendation to the next meeting for any changes that should be made. This could mean some changes in the procedure of the upcoming elections.

The matter of the Student Council setting up a used book sales service was dropped because of the seeming inadequacy of the present system and because of the complexity of setting it up and making it work.

Student Council received a letter from a radio station in Wichita concerning a beauty contest. Since the matter was presented to the student body last year and no response was shown, it was decided to drop the matter this year.

Student Council would like to remind the student body that Sunday noon is still a dress-up meal as specified in the Growl. Student cooperation would be appreciated in this matter.

as Student Council representatives, and greatly enhances the possibility of electing students who are genuinely interested in student government.

In addition, it will, I hope, promote a greater divergence of opinion among Council members and give the off-campus group of students a greater voice in the Student Council.

Another idea which has more merit than I originally assigned it, is that of publishing a statement of policies and goals by each presidential hopeful.

Perhaps it would be advantageous to ask each candidate for such a platform, keeping in mind that the character and ability of the candidate is usually more indicative of the program which will be achieved than the platform itself.

But organizational reform is not enough. Unless that Council is granted some real authority, qualified individuals will not waste their time seeking an office so they can nod their heads for an hour every Wednesday night.

It's time to eliminate the vague generalities of The Growl, and decide just what the function of this group is and what specific power it possesses.

Can it decide how to utilize the Student Union or is this power reserved for the Student Union Board? Should it be represented in the planning of new campus buildings so that provisions for a student snack bar or walk-in bookstore aren't "accidentally" overlooked?

In short, let's write down on paper just what the Student Council can and cannot do and decide once and for all if it really has enough significant power to be called a "student government."

The Senate at Ames proved its ability to represent Iowa State students last spring. I hope that someday the Maccollege Student Council will be strong, active, and important enough to represent its students in a similar way. WMB

Brahs: Corps Exists For three Purposes

"The Peace Corps would have been formed even if the Communist movement did not exist," stated Stuart Brahs, program officer for the Peace Corps, when he visited the campus last Tuesday.

"It was formed for the purpose of (1) fulfilling a need for middle-level manpower in the emerging nations, (2) developing a situation where ideas and aspirations could be freely exchanged between United States citizens and those of other nations, and (3) incorporating into our culture something of the essence of other cultures through the return of volunteers."

Asked whether the formation of the Peace Corps was accelerated by its political connotations in the election of 1960, Brahs replied that the effect of the election, although hastening the establishment of the Peace Corps by "five or ten" years, was only a more rapid development of a desire that was already prevalent in the country.

He added that several universities had conducted studies on the feasibility of such a program and these were used by the President's task force in establishing the Peace Corps.

Brahs commented that 9000 volunteers will be in the field by 1964 and that almost half of them will be in Latin America—"partially because of the great demand there and also because Washington officials feel that we have too often neglected our neighbors to the South."

In discussing the motivation for joining the Peace Corps, Brahs indicated that although the reasons are varied, most volunteers have a humanitarian rather than a religious motivation.

He added that those who are primarily religiously motivated usually work through mission programs of their church.

Reader Suggests Unsigned Letters Not Be Printed

Dear Editor,

It seems to me that freedom of speech, if extended, also entails a responsibility for such speech. I would suggest that any letter to the editor of the Spectator not be printed if permission is not given to divulge the writer's name.

To whom it may concern, Whoever wrote the reply to Jim Weaver's letter last week forgot to sign their name before dropping it in the Spec mailbox. I cannot publish the letter until I know the identity of the writer. WMB

Oriental Offers View Of Malay Peninsula

By Peter Tham

At the southeast corner of Asia, lies a blissful peninsula—so Florida-like that we frequently compare Palm Beach to the soft golden sand along the sunny beaches of our Malay Peninsula.

This tiny strip of land, no larger than England without Wales, has a population of seven million. If America is known as the melting pot of the West, Malaya is undoubtedly the melting pot of the East.

Its population is comprised chiefly of Malays, Chinese, and Indians.

After 170 years of British rule, it attained full nationhood in 1957. As the government was handed over through peaceful negotiation, strong imprints of English characteristics dominate the whole national outlook: it is a monarchy, and by rights, it inherited the British-styled parliamentary system.

The economy of the nation depends almost wholly on agriculture and natural resources. Being a major producer of natural rubber and tin ore in the world, the Malayan economy is thus stabilized.

Now we enjoy the highest standard of living in southeast Asia. Recently, large foreign capital, especially American investment, has been pouring in steadily to help accelerate industrialization.

The national language is BAHASA MELAYU—Malay; however, the English speaking population is so large that English is also an official language.

As a nation at its infancy, the Malayan culture is growing slowly through assimilation of cultures from the Malays, Chinese and Indians, although British cultural influence is not an unimportant factor in the evolution of the Malayan culture.

Despite its tropical climate, the humid atmosphere guided by the Monsoon from the Indian Ocean and the South China Sea maintains the temperature range between 65 and 90 degrees.

The season alternates between hot and cool. It is no surprise, therefore, that many early immigrants came from China and India.

Singapore, "Pearl of the Orient," is the second largest free port in the British Commonwealth. Because of its vital geographical position, it is the gateway between the Far East and the Middle East.

Essentially, Malaya is pro-Western although its national characteristics are chiefly Eastern. Being in such a position, it is potentially a go-between in the furtherance of mutual understanding between East and West.

Women Drop Final Game Of Season in Tournament

The Mac college Women's basketball team took second place in the Sterling Women's Invitational basketball Tournament, losing to Sterling 49-45 in the finals last Saturday.

Hays took third place by defeating Sterling in the other game.

McPherson advanced into the finals by defeating Hays on Friday, while Sterling advanced to the final game by defeating Tabor.

Mac defeated Hays 38-34 in the opening round of the tournament, with Anne Kruse hitting 21 points. Mac won the game on free throws as Hays had one more field goal than Mac.

In the finals, Mac lost to Sterling 49-45, this time losing the game on free throws. Jean Coleman, from Sterling, led all scorers with 25 points, while Anne Kruse hit for 24 points.

Mac trailed the entire game: 14-11 at the end of the first quarter, 29-47 at the half, and 43-27 at the end of the third quarter. At one time in the third quarter Mac trailed by 21 points.

A furious fourth quarter rally by McPherson resulted in the closeness of the final score. Mac hit for 18 points in the final period, holding Sterling to six.

Mac hit only seven out of 28 free throws for the game and missed 11 free throws just in the final quarter.

Bulldogs First In Field Goals, Free Throws

The McPherson-Bulldogs as a team have moved into first place in both free throw and field goal shooting, according to the latest District 10 statistics.

Mac's cagers are hitting 70 per cent from the free throw line and 46 per cent from the field through 24 games.

In the individual field goal department, Art Hoch holds the number four spot, hitting at a 51 per cent clip. LeRoy Weddle is in a fifth place tie in field goal shooting, hitting 50 per cent.

Elmore also holds down the number five spot in individual free throw shooting. He is hitting 81 per cent from the charity line.

Next week will be the final NAIA District 10 report.

From The Locker Room

By Larry Morlan

Since there are so many different sets of all-Americans announced about this time, I feel only justified in advancing my own choices for all-conference choices for the Kansas Conference.

The first team would include the following: Doug Ade, Bethany; Tom Kinder, Ottawa; Harold Smallwood, C of E; Don Turner, Southwestern; Deryl Elmore, Mac.

The second team would consist of the following: Ken Becker, Sterling; Manly Tubbs, C of E; John Tegler, Mac; Bob Pankratz, Bethel; Clark Hay, Friends.

The third team would be composed of the following: Marion Enke, Mac; Babs Hawk, Baker; Frank Gaeddert, Bethel; John Armstrong, Sterling; Ray Thome, KWU.

I chose these on my own views from games against the Bulldogs.

If you notice an absence of basketball players next Monday, there is no need for alarm.

The basketball team will be gone to Kansas City on Monday, March 11 to watch the opening games of the NAIA Tournament. The boys will leave early Monday morning and will return late Monday night.

Lynn Warner, Mac trackman, recently ran from the Mac college gym to Galva and back. This run, according to a car speedometer, is a distance of 13 miles.

Lynn ran this distance in a time of 1 hour and 29 minutes, which would give him a time of about 6 hours in the present 50 mile fad.

Marion Enke also ran this distance in a time of 1 hour and 35 minutes, only he didn't feel so well when he finished.

Mac Progresses in Social Life Since Opening 75 Years Ago

Since its opening in 1888, McPherson College has progressed and expanded, not only in its educational facilities and educational program, but also in its social aspects.

On Sept. 5, 1888, the McPherson College and Industrial Institute opened its doors for the first time with seventy students in attendance.

The charter of the institution states that the college was founded for the purpose of maintaining an institution of learning in harmony with the principles of the German Baptist Brethren.

The institution maintained a department of liberal arts, a commercial department, an industrial department, a normal department, and a department of the Bible.

An important milestone in its history was reached on Feb. 12, 1898, when the name McPherson College was officially adopted.

The college began operations with one building and then managed for some years with the original building, Fahnstock Hall, and the second building, Sharp Hall.

In 1906, the Carnegie Library was built, and in 1916 Arnold Hall, which was the women's dormitory was built.

The literary societies, which date to the very beginning of the school, were important social organizations. The Emersonians and the Ciceroians vied with each other in working up large memberships and producing competitive programs.

The Prohibition League was organized in 1904, and the Student Volunteer Band in 1895, being known at first, however, as the Mission Band.

For entertainment in the early years of the college, students would play croquet and tennis and pitch horseshoes.

The rules and regulations of the college were quite strict. Some of them that appeared in the first catalog are as follows:

"All students are required to be present at chapel exercises and all recitations; also to attend Sunday School and one church service each Lord's day at the college chapel or at some other place, where their parents or guardian may direct in writing.

"Students must extinguish their lights promptly at 10 p.m. unless excused by the professor in charge of the hall.

"No lady or gentleman will be allowed to trespass on the territory of the opposite sex, except by special permission of the president.

"Students desiring to leave the grounds or to visit other students during study hours must obtain permission from the professor in charge of their hall.

"Ladies and gentlemen will not ride, walk, or play together except by special arrangement with the president.

"No students rooming in the dormitory shall be absent after 10 p.m. unless by permission of the president.

"Students desiring to visit the cemetery or to go to the city must obtain permission from the president, except on Saturday afternoons between 1 and 4 p.m. when general liberty to go to the city and return is granted.

"Students will be permitted to meet in the chapel for social intercourse 20 minutes after supper of each day—Sunday excepted—also for 20 minutes after the close of society meetings, such social meetings to be under the supervision of one or more of the faculty.

"Visitors desiring to call upon students in the building must apply to the president.

"All members of the Brethren or German Baptist Church are required to comply with the principles of non-conformity to the world and to conform to the general order of the church in apparel and wearing of the hair.

"Those who are not members of the German Baptist church are expected to make no display in the use of jewelry and to observe the laws of plainness and simplicity in their apparel."
