Tradition Discourages Approval Of New Communication Forms

All of us are caught in the keeping of certain traditions of the society in which we live. A definite amount of tradition is inevitable, and without some of these, our culture would slip into decadence even faster than it seemingly is at present.

On the other hand, it is also inevitable that some traditions will stifle initiative and striving for better ways of dealing with human need.

Erich Heller, writing on Thomas Mann: The Ironic German, calls tradition an agreement to refrain from asking certain questions, to limit what can be questioned, and to provide a solid foundation of suppositions to be taken for granted.

When tradition of this kind prevents us from taking new steps, we tread on the dangerous assumption that since everything is fine, why should we bother about changing the status quo?

A number of students were insulted by the unique worship service provided in chapel several weeks ago. The inability to see worship cast in a different form than our accepted, orthodox manner, serves as an excellent example of the danger in assuming that since we have the final answer, no one need ask questions concerning the present system.

I suspect that some who became indignant over this service did not object to it because it failed to speak to them directly, but rather because its meaning was too clear and unmistakable.

If breaking traditions can thus serve to clarify our situation, there seems to be little logical reason for clinging for the sake of clinging.

I give my best regards to those who believe that if something is worth communicating, it can be illustrated by more than one method. BJJ

We Get Letters . . .

Students Voice Disappointment In Easter Chapel

Dear Editor,

On April 5, I walked out of chapel. Many other students disapproved of the program which was presented at that time.

Immediately following chapel, I interviewed a few of these students. The following are some of the reasons for their disapproval.

One student thought the prayer was very irreligious. He said, "I, for one, did not get anything out of it. I came away more discouraged than before I went in. The whole program was not what I expected of an Easter program at McPherson College."

Another said, "I thought that it was assuming a lot of things that were not necessarily true."

He went on to say that the litany portrayed shallow thinking on the part of the one who wrote it. He felt that the author did not understand the problems of any group, or the world in general, or of the underdeveloped countries.

He felt that this litany was trying to make Christianity the fulfilling of a guilt complex. In his words, "I don't think that it necessarily is."

He continued, "I thought that they were trying to take what you may call a radical political philosophy and stick it in as a substitute for Christianity."

"I can't accept a lot of the material used on this program as being Christianity or having anything to do with Christianity."

As for myself, I believe that prayer should be sacred. I believe that those persons who treat prayer in the manner in which it was presented in this particular chapel probably treat religion and God the same way.

In conclusion, I will say that probably the chapel committee had good intentions in this matter. Good intentions will not justify us completely, however.

As one man said, "Hell is filled with people who had good intentions."

Marshall Uncapher

Editor's Note

The editorial which also refers to this chapel program was written before this letter was submitted. Thus, it was not my intention to discredit what is stated in Mr. Uncapher's letter.

Rather, it was my attempt to declare my position on what has developed into a controversial chapel presentation.

Geisert to Speak Sunday

Dr. Wayne F. Geisert, dean of college and professor of economics, will be speaking to the Wichita Church of the Brethren, Sunday, April 28. This is Christian College Sunday at the Church.

National Christian College Day will be observed this Sunday. The day is set aside to acquaint the public with Christian colleges.

Flory Eligible For Competition

Lowell Flory, sophomore from McPherson, has been named winner of the Chemistry Award Handbook which is awarded each year by the Chemical Rubber Company.

The Handbook of Physics and Chemistry is presented to one of the top chemistry students in the beginning chemistry class. Lowell's name was drawn from the names of the top ten chemistry students and was presented to him by Dr. Wesley DeCoursey, professor of chemistry.

Lowell is eligible for the second part of the contest, a competitive exam. The college of the district winner will be granted $100 for chemistry books in the library.

Maturity Essential Quality Of Asians in U. S. Schools

By Peter Tham

Under the sponsorship of the American Field Scholarship Service, many eligible high school students of Southeast Asia do a one-year study in the American high school.

Aim of this program is to make the (sons of the scarcely developed countries of the East aware of the American high school career. On such a basis, teenagers of different cultural backgrounds are given a chance to share their experience and perhaps promote better international understanding.

The value of this experience is questioned, however, when the results of such a program are investigated. The Indonesian youngsters, for instance, returned home with American crew cuts, drain-pipe slacks and mouthful after mouthful of "aints" and "it don't."

Worst of all, the whole Indonesian outlook was transformed into a sophisticated and affluent American show-piece to the extent that Indonesia has suspended the 1963 exchange program.

To determine whether such a program has a detrimental effect, we must examine the total benefit gained by both parties. It seems to me that the determining factors rest chiefly on the person who undertakes this program.

If he is aware of the environmental changes and can adapt himself to a different cultural situation, much good can be obtained from the blend of different cultures.

Unfortunately, many teenagers who engaged in this program were unaware of his or her position. Consequently, these young ambassadors were representatives of questionable value.

To prevent such international embarrassment, careful selection of mature youngsters is necessary. It is also advisable that these young ambassadors have an adequate knowledge of their own cultures, although a good understanding of the opposite is essential.

Only a culture-conscious student who is prepared to match a cultural brain - wash stands a good chance of being a representative of good will.

Flory, Clarinet Quartet To Travel This Weekend

Dr. Raymond Flory, professor of history and political science, will travel with the clarinet quartet to Kansas City on April 27. The group will meet with alumni of McPherson College at the Cherokee Church of the Brethren.

Dr. Flory will speak in Kansas City as well as the Lope Star Church of the Brethren near Lawrence on Sunday. The Lone Star church will be holding an alumni program on Sunday afternoon.

First Peace Corpsmen Return To States Early This Summer

The first two-year Peace Corps volunteers will soon return to the United States from their overseas duty.

The trickle of returnees will begin early this summer, and will gradually grow into a flood of young men and women who will fulfill the final phase of the Peace Corps: providing leadership in a complex world.

While the Peace Corps was still in its infancy one of the founders said: "Just wait until we have some 10,000 to 15,000 Peace Corps veterans back in the United States. They will provide enlightened leadership in a complex world."

These veterans are going to be returning 400 strong this summer and 700 by the end of the year.

A survey of these returning Peace Corpsmen has shown that nearly two-thirds plan to return to school and an equal number plan to eventually enter some public service such as the Peace Corps again, other government agencies of international organizations.

A member of the Peace Corps staff commented: "The Peace Corps has changed their perspective. It has been a very deep experience for many. They realize they need to go to graduate school to get what they need."

If the returning volunteers are planning on going back to school, the opportunities are

Work By Ceramics Pioneer On Display

Friendship Hall this month displays ceramic work by J. Sheldon Carey who is known for his pioneering work on the upside-down wheel and for his textured-pots.

After earning his B. S. degree in ceramic art at Alfred University and his M.A. degree at Columbia University Teachers' College, Carey taught in the public schools in Rhode Island, at Columbia University, and at the Rhode Island School of Design. Since 1944, he has taught at Kansas University. His pottery is included in collections of the Finnish government, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Everson Museum of Art, and others. He is listed in Who's Who in American Art and Who's Who in American Education.

Carey has written a number of articles which were published in various ceramic publications. His work has been shown in several national and international collections.

Drawings and paintings by McPherson High School students were also on display during April. Mrs. Rosella Ogg is instructor of the students.

Editors Learn Patience In Practice Issue of Spectator

This week's issue of the Spectator is the practice issue of the present managing editor and campus editor.

Bev Judge, junior from Marshalltown, Iowa, served as editor-in-chief of this paper, and David Anders, junior from McPherson, was managing editor.

Each semester, the managing editor is allowed one practice issue before assuming full duties as editor-in-chief.

"This has been a hectic weekend, a terrible Monday, and a lousy Tuesday," one editor was quoted as saying. The other editor added, "You either learn patience or you go crazy."

Stump Speaks At Dedication

Harley Stump, professor of English, will be the guest speaker at the dedication of the new church building of his home church, the Waka, Texas, Church of the Brethren, on Sunday, April 28.

Professor Stump will speak at both the morning worship service and at the dedication service in the afternoon.

The Waka Church of the Brethren is a small congregation with a membership of about eighty. A modern style church will be dedicated at the service, free of all indebtedness.

In order to achieve this task, the members of the church have contributed more than $60,000 during the past year, making it the church with the highest per capita giving in the brotherhood.

The Rev. Willis Bosserman is the pastor of the church.

Mac to Hold Workshop For Graduating Seniors

McPherson College will hold its second annual alumni workshop for the senior class on April 30.

From The Locker Room

By Larry Morlan

Today the track team has a meet with Sterling College at the College stadium. Even though track meets do not have the continuous action of basketball and football, track has an excitement of its own.

Come out and watch the track meet today and add enthusiasm to the atmosphere. One would be surprised just how much this really helps the trackmen give that little extra effort.

Voting in the sports poll will end for all areas on May 3. Winners will be announced at a later date.

All students are urged to vote for their favorite athlete and hand their ballot in or place it in a ballot box in the Spec office.

At this time I would like to mention a few of the outstanding men in the spring sports for McPherson College.

Lynn Warner, Galen Huffman, and Don Koehn are consistent point producers for the track team.

Lynn runs in the mile and two miles events and finishes first or second. Galen competes in the pole vault and has been a winner since coming to Mac, while Don places consistently in the discus.

In golf, Bob Williams and Larry Bowman win often in their matches; Williams has yet to be beaten in match play.

Tennis has many consistent winners, Dave Priddy, John Sonafrank, Bill Kelly, and Larry Wachtman.

Church Begins Series on Family

The Rev. Harold Bomberger will present the sermon, "Why Ministers Don't Quit," at the Church of the Brethren Sunday morning service, at 10:05 a.m.

Plans are being made for the School of Family Living which will begin this Sunday evening, April 28. The movie "Marriage Today," will introduce the session before the adults and college students break up into discussion (interest) groups. To close, all will convene in a summary colloquy with panels and group reporters.

On May 5, "Choosing for Happiness," a movie, to challenge college and senior high youth to a discussion, will be shown.

given by the judge of the Associated Collegiate Press in classifying the Spectator as a first class paper.

Muriel Gibson, junior from Keola, Iowa, was editor-in-chief of the award-winning paper. Weyland Beeghly, sophomore from Pierson, Iowa, and present editor-in-chief, served as managing editor.

Campus editor was Larry Morlan, freshman from McPherson. Each semester, the Spectator is rated by the ACP, a critical rating service of the University of Minnesota.

Papers are judged on the basis of coverage, content, and physical properties. Specific areas in which the Spectator rated especially high were balance and treatment of copy in news coverage, copyreading, sports coverage, and front page make-up.

Three other Spectator editors in recent years have earned first class ratings. Marilyn Rhinehart Edwards now of Long Beach, Calif., edited a first-class paper during the spring semester of 1961.

Lorene Marshall Hoover, Ames, Iowa, edited a first-class paper in the first semester of the 1962-63 academic year, and Rowan Keim Dagget of North Manchester, Ind., was editor of an award-winning paper in the first semester of the 1960-61 school year.
