

Faculty Elects Students To Who's Who Honor

Muriel Bechtel, Laurence Blair, Carol Christy, Elaine Flory, Lowell Flory, William Grove, Anne Hayes, Sandra Hoover, Carolyn Lehman, Ance Neuberger, Karen Oltman, Kenneth Ullom and Vida Werner have been selected for the 1964-65 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

These seniors were chosen by the Maccollege faculty on the basis of the following: qualities of leadership, excellence and sincerity of scholarship, participation in extracurricular and academic activities, citizenship and service to the school, and promise of future usefulness to business and society.

Muriel Bechtel, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bechtel, McPherson, is a math major.

While at Maccollege, Muriel has been a member of A Cappella Choir, Home Economics Club, SNEA and the Young Republicans.

Muriel plans to teach mathematics following graduation.

Larry Blair, a music major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Blair, Independence, Mo.

Larry plans to teach music upon graduation. While at Mac Larry participated in band, orchestra, intramurals, MENC, small instrumental ensemble, Choral Club, Dance Band and Pep Band. He has also been a reporter for the Spectator as well as student representative for the Cultural Program Committee.

Carol Christy, an education and psychology major is the daughter of Merlin and Lois Christy of Garrison, Iowa.

Carol, the current secretary of the Student Council, has been a member of the Choral Club, SNEA, CBYF, Recreational Council, Chapel Choir, Quadrangle Staff, Social Committee and the Student Court.

Elaine Flory a future teacher and a philosophy and religion major is the daughter of Glen and Esther Flory of McPherson.

While at McPherson Elaine has participated in CBYF, International Relations Club, MCA, SNEA, German Club, a deputation team and the Church Vocations Fellowship.

Lowell Flory, the current Student Body President, is a history major and plans a teaching career in that field.

Lowell is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Flory of McPherson.

Lowell's activities have included SNEA, Pep Band, International Relations Club, Young Republicans, Student Union Board, CBYF, and Phi Alpha Theta. William Grove is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Grove, Redfield, Iowa.

Bill's activities include intramurals, Dorm Council, soccer team and the current president of SNEA.

A math major, Bill plans to be a math instructor.

Ann Kruse Hayes, an education and psychology major, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Kruse, Miriam.

During her stay at Maccollege Ann has participated in MCA, Pep Club, WAA, intramurals and SNEA.

Ann plans a career in elementary teaching.

Sandra Hoover is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Hoover, Plattsburg, Mo.

Sandy, a future math teacher, has been a member of MENC, orchestra, Stage Band, CBYF, SNEA, small instrumental ensemble, Dorm Council and was treasurer of her Junior Class.

Carolyn Lehman, current editor of the Spectator, is the daughter of Harvey and Ruth Lehman of Lincoln, Nebraska.

Carol is an English major and has participated in the following organizations: Women's Council, Pep Club, Alpha Psi Omega, Player's Club, and Young Democrats.

Ance Neuberger, an English major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Neuberger of Hutchinson.

Ance has been a member of the International Relations Club, intramurals, and M-Club.

Ance plans a career as a librarian.

Karen Oltman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Oltman, Anders, Nebraska.

Karen's activities included A Cappella Choir, Choral Club, cheerleader, band, orchestra, Pep Club, small instrumental ensemble, SNEA, and Player's Club.

An English major, Karen plans to teach in that field.

Ken Ullom, and economics and business administration major, is the son of Mrs. U. L. Ullom, Wiley, Colo.

During his stay at Mac, Ken has participated in CBYF, Phi Kappa Delta, International Relations Club, Forensics, MCA, Student Council, Student Court, Men's Council and has been a member of the Spectator Staff. Ken is the current Vice-President of the Student Council and plans a career in business.

Vida Werner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Werner of Winona.

While at Maccollege Vida has been active in MCA, Pep Club, SNEA Choral Club, cheerleading, Food Committee, A Cappella Choir, band, German Club, Student Court, Student Council, Players' Club, small instrumental ensemble, and Alpha Psi Omega.

Vida is an English major and plans a career in teaching.

Trustees To Meet Nov. 6-7

Trustees of McPherson College will converge on the campus this weekend Nov. 6 and 7. The trustees represent ten church districts of the Church of the Brethren, members of the alumni, and leaders of the city and county of McPherson.

Homecoming Activities To Begin Tonight

By Doug Rapp

Today marks the beginning of the 1964 McPherson College annual Homecoming Festival. This year's theme, "November Harvest", will be carried throughout the entire extravaganza.

Kicking things off will be the Homecoming dance to be held tonight from 9 to 12 p.m. Dress will be semi-formal, that is suits for boys and dresses for girls; refreshments will be served. The music will be furnished by the Norman Estes Sextet of Salina. During the Dance, Queen Karen Andes, Junior from Mound City, Mo., will be crowned by last year's queen the former Judy Fox, Garfield, Kansas.

As Saturday morning dawns the campus will be decked out with displays offered by the various campus organizations and residence halls. These displays will be appraised and evaluated by a panel of judges who will announce their decision at 11:00 a.m. Displays will be judged on the basis of (a) appropriateness of display theme; (b) general appearance and construction; (c) originality; (d) clarity of display ideas. First place holds with it $30, second $20, third $10 and five Honorable mentions will receive $5 each.

Formal activity begins at 9:30 a.m. when the Alumni Board, headed by President Glenn Gayer and Director Paul Wagoner, will hold a meeting in the conference room of the student union.

At 10:30 a.m. a Faculty Forum will be held in room 212 of Mohler Hall. Heading the Forum will be Dr. Raymond Flory, professor of history, Dr. Wayne Miller, professor of speech and Dr. Lorrell Weiss, professor of sociology. The topic of the forum will be "Implications of the Use of Federal Funds in Private Higher Education."

Lunch will be served as usual in the college cafeteria from 11:30 to 1 p.m.

At 11:45 a special luncheon will be held in the college cafeteria for the 1961 through 1964 alumni teachers. The purpose of this luncheon will be to keep in contact with the new teachers and to hear their views about what the college can do to better prepare prospective teachers.

At 1:45 p.m. pre-game activities begin at the college stadium. This will include the presentation of the 1964 McPherson College Homecoming Queen Karen Andes and her attendants, Georgianna Krebbiel, Sophomore, McPherson and Sue Mettlin, Freshman, Waterloo, Iowa.

Following this will be the homecoming game between the McPherson College Bulldogs and the Bethel College Threshers.

After the game class reunions for the classes of 1959, 1954 and 1949 will begin.

The 1959 class Reception will take place from 4:30 to 5:30 in Mohler, Room 231.

The 1954 class reunion dinner will be held from 5 to 7:30 p.m. in the college cafeteria.

The 1949 class reunion dinner will commence in the Warren Hotel, downtown McPherson, and last from 5 until 7:30 p.m. A buffet dinner will be served in the cafeteria from 5 to 6 p.m. $1.25 per person; 50c for children 6 years and younger.

Rounding out activities will be the Cultural Series Concert beginning at 8 p.m. in Brown Auditorium starring The Burke Family Singers. Single tickets can be purchased by adults and students for $2.00, children $1.00.

Burke Family To Entertain Nov. 7

Burke Family Singers are coming to McPherson College. The entertainers have come to be known as "America's singiest family."

The choral ensemble, consisting of father, mother and ten children, will make its local appearance on Nov. 7 at 8 p.m. in Brown Auditorium. The musical event will be the second program in the McPherson Cultural Series.

The Burkes' extensive concert extends from sacred music through classics, madrigals and folk songs. They are one of the unique attractions of the American concert stage. The Burke Family now has more than one hundred concerts and many appearances on TV behind them.

The singers specialize in unaccompanied music in the style of the Don Cossack chorus. This is very difficult but very satisfying when done properly. They sing in eight languages; folk tunes from Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Russia, Ireland, Norway, Canada and the United States.

Invariably compared with the famed Trapp Family immortalized by Rodgers and Hammerstein in "Sound of Music," the Burkes sing Grace before meals instead of saying it. They sing the Rosary after supper.

One evening, about four years ago, they sang a hymn in unison after the Rosary. Walter V. Burke, the father, who is organist and choir master at the Blessed Sacrament Church in Providence, R.I., there-upon suggested that they try singing in four parts. He proceeded to write arrangements for several well-known hymns and Christmas carols.

Parents of the ten children are Walter and Ann Burke. Children ages range from 10 to 23. The Burkes are said to be the only group of its kind and size offering this type of singing in the entire country.

Tickets for adults and students are $2; and tickets for children (12 or under) are $1.

Andes Reigns As Homecoming Queen

By Linda Kurtz

Radiant Karen Andes, junior from Mound City, Mo., will reign over the 1964 Homecoming festivities on November 6 and 7, having been elected Homecoming Queen by the student body of Maccollege.

"I still can't believe it's real," marveled Karen, and went on to state that she finds it difficult to know whether to act excited or to seem calm and collected. Her coronation is tentatively set for this evening's dance.

A young woman of varied interests and talents, Karen describes her "hobbies" as sports—"Especially basketball"—and anything having to do with the out-of-doors. Besides singing with the A Cappella choir, Karen participates in the Student Court, Student Council, and the Players' Club. She played the role of Julia in "Sabrina Fair."

Don't Spend Life Wishing

Homecoming—the alumni return. It is easy to pick an alumnus out by the sparkle in his eye and the smile on his face. He's talking, laughing, reminiscing about his happy experiences at college.

But wait—is there a note of sadness under the smile; is there an empty look in the eye—an indication of broken dreams, fallen ideals, lost hopes?

We present students are young and hopeful— the future is waiting for us, and our youth and vitality give us confidence that we can fulfill our high ideals. Yet how many returning alumni have actually accomplished all they set out to do? Some have, true—and have even surpassed expectations—but what about the rest?

Fate has a way of stepping in at the wrong time and ruining things, doesn't it—or is it less fate and more lack of courage.

It takes courage to carry out ideals courage to carry on when your friends and family are against you, courage to borrow money for a degree when you are already in debt, courage to push security into the background and take the plunge.

How many people spend their lives wishing they had gotten into another career, or had more education, but for the sake of security they waste their entire lives just wishing.

Students, as you return for your ten, or twenty, or thirty year reunions at the McPherson College Homecoming, will you be able to look on the college as the beginning of a happy and fulfilled life—or will you be one who sadly sighs and sees only the broken remains of a once great dream. cs

Slater, Marrs Study At Marburg

By Bob Slater

As members of the Brethren Colleges Abroad program for 1964-65, Dale Marrs and I are studying in the famous old University town of Marburg on the Lahn River in the Federal Republic of Germany. Marburg is a beautiful picturesque village in the mountains of central Germany and was founded in the year 1236.

The history of Marburg is interesting and unique and centered around the old castle that sits atop the mountain overlooking the city. The University, founded in the 1400's, is the oldest Protestant-related University in the world.

Needless to say, we have found the life here very different from college life in the states. We have only been here for two months, but already these differences are very evident.

Dorm life is unrecognizable compared to life in Arnold or Metzler. Here, the halls are always deathly quiet. Even whistling is forbidden. My radio and guitar never fail to bring knocking on my door with suggestions that if I want to stay out of trouble, I'd better quit immediately.

All of this is not to say the Germans are above having fun and making a lot of noise; it is just that they have places for that and places for studying. Actually, I find it pleasant to know that when I have to study I can do it right in my room, and not have to wait for the commotion, which is always present in the McPherson dorms, to die down.

The university system itself here is also very different from the American system. The Germans refer to it as Academic Freedom, and I would have to refer to it as freedom in the highest sense. The students attend classes for four years without ever taking a test or exam.

Class attendance is not required, and a student need never attend a class more than once to get "credit" for it—that credit being the signature of the professor.

At the end of four years of study, there is a final Staats Exam which may be failed once. Upon completion of the very thorough examination, the students are then awarded their degrees. There are no grades, no rankings, no tests throughout the whole academic life of the student. His entire four years of study and "grade" rest solely on his performance in this Staats Exam.

By Dale Marrs

Marburg is a city of 50,000 situated on the Lahn River in the state of Hessen, about 50 miles north of Frankfurt.

Philipps Universitat had 8223 students in the last semester of which 63 were American.

There are many contrasts here—the old castle and cobblestone streets in contrast to the ultra-modern university buildings, the university students and professors and the totally uneducated farm workers, new cars and oxen on the same road, the latest fashions and old traditional costumes.

We are among the students at the university because the German "Gymnasium" or high school takes two years longer than ours. Here we are considered first semester students again.

Less than ten per cent of the German students graduate from high school and even fewer attend college. Therefore, the students here are the best Germany has. They have all had six to ten years of English. Sometimes it is difficult to get them to speak German!

Bob and I live in the Duisberg-Haus which is one of the many dormitories. It is situated on a mountain overlooking Marburg—a long, hard fifteen minute walk uphill from the university.

The dorm life here is about the same as in America—minus the freshman pranks. We call each other by our first names and eat the evening meal together in the dorm. Many times it is hard to realize that this is not America.

Of course, we speak German, but the topics of discussion—Goldwater and Johnson, the Olympics, and I better stop there—are the same as at home.

The biggest problem is in telling jokes. This may seem insignificant, but it points up the fact that we are the products of different cultures. What is funny to a German is many times not funny to us and vice versa. We understand each other's words, but not the background which makes the joke funny.

Intro to Ed. Class Visits Lincoln School

Wednesday, Oct. 28, the Introduction to Education class went to Lincoln Elementary Grade School to observe grades 1, 2, 3, and 4 from 1:15 to 2:00.

The faculty advisor was Miss Mellenbruch.

15 Carloads Hear Humphrey Speak

By Ron Cassidente

Last Thursday night proved to be a highlight of the presidential campaign for most Young Democrats on campus when over 15 carloads of enthusiastic students joined a caravan to Hutchinson to hear Democratic candidate for Vice President, Hubert Humphrey, speak.

The McPherson contingent joined a cheering crowd of democratic supporters estimated from 2500 to 5000 in welcoming Mr. Humphrey at the Hutchinson airport.

Supporters from McPherson arrived early and found places in the crowd close to the speakers platform. The McPherson Young Democrat banner had a commanding place in front of the crowd, and pictures were taken to record the event.

Humphrey arrived at 7:55 and by 8:30 he began his enthusiastic speech by announcing to all the people that L.B.J. is "Our kind of people."

The crowd was very responsive and broke into Humphrey's speech several times with cheers and applause. In the forty minute period that Humphrey talked, he backed all democratic candidates for Kansas office and then proceeded to analyze which two presidential candidates could best serve the U.S.

In a very excellent speech,

(from the democrats point of view), the senator from Minnesota showed clearly both Goldwater's and Johnson's point of view on peace, education, agriculture, voting records, and party loyalty.

He said so much about both men's policies that even some of the loyal democrats present felt they had benefited from the speech.

All of the students who commented on the speech found it good and in excellent taste even for politicians. Even our loyal school photographer, Alan Cable, found the speech "Pretty good what I heard between shots."

Alan spent the whole night on the speakers platform not more than three feet away from Humphrey. He rubbed arms with photographers from the Associated Press and got pictures of the proceedings that would make any professional proud.

At the end of the speech, the Mac students left the airport to make their way back to home base, and Humphrey boarded his plane to continue his campaign in Denver, but not before Elaine Sales and Janice Howell had the privilege of shaking his hand.

Said Janice as she proudly showed her right hand "I'm not going to wash this for a week."

Maccollege—We're Perfect!

Welcome, welcome, welcome to the alumni of dear old McPherson College. Yes, with this issue many lovable old grads will return misty-eyed to gaze in wonder at their fellow classmates who have added a little here and there, but mostly there. I imagine that most of the alumni will find that it is all behind them now. (Couldn't resist the pun, although it isn't very punny.)

Yes, this time of the year marks the return of all those who have left these hallowed (or is it hollowed?) walls to face the lumbering world of work beyond. And with the return of these old friends, annual phrases are overhead between the buildings such as, "Honey, I didn't know that you and Judy were the same age. I always thought that she was several years younger!"

I would imagine, however, that the most change noticed by the former grads would be in the campus and the campus life. For we feel that McPherson College stands out among other colleges more than ever before in a very unique way—we're perfect. Yes, nothing is left to be desired here. Anything witnessed or desired from any college may be found here from individual study to grand larceny.

Allow me to cite a few examples of our perfect campus life. In the academic area, we

We Get Letters . . .

Letters to the editor from students, faculty members, or others are welcomed. All letters must be signed, but the name of the writer need not appear in print. Letters may be submitted to the editor or placed in the campus mail. Where Is School Spirit?

Dear Editor, Where is school spirit? Where is the red and white? Are we proud of a losing team? I don't mean just the team out on the football field or the basketball court. I mean the losing team in the stands.

A school team is not made up of just the players but also the spectators. For a team to win there has to be team work. The players must do their part but the rest of the school has to do its part also. Wearing school colors is one illustration. Another is cheering and letting the playing team know who is for them. If the players do not think the school is behind them, they will decide that they are just wasting their energy.

Where is the school spirit at McPherson College? Let us hope we find it soon. Wear red and white to the games and also to school the days of games. Let us show our opponents we have a whole team! Most of all, let us prove them we have a winning team!

Phyllis A. Stone

excell because of our complete confidence that everything stated by our professors and textbooks is the undisputable truth. In this manner we become mirrors of our teachers and therefore have nothing to fear.

Concerning the area of extracurricular activities, there is little with which to be concerned. Our football team is actually capable of being a winning team, it's just that we have a losing cheering section, and I do mean section for it is only an extreme minority who actually open their mouths to utter few bits of enthusiasm. Our choirs and debate teams are going great guns, unless the conflicts of time schedules and laryngitis ruin our surviving ambition. I think that with a shot of 3,000,000 cc. of Adrenalin, marked improvement could be made in this area.

The final major area to be discussed in conjunction with this campus and the student body is that of the social life of the aforementioned. We are extremely unique in this realm. With the offering of nearly 30 films to be viewed by the students throughout the year, we feel that we have broken a record for chronic cases of stimatism. Yet, with hayrides, pizza parties, movies, after-game dances (?), watermelon feeds, and other experimental ideas for social excitement, the social committee also needs to act as matchmaker for dates to get some of the students to these occasions, counselor for those who have dates and want out, and Red Cross aids to handle the wounds incurred during the riots of students leaving these planned events.

Now that you as grads have this month's eye view of our perfect campus, have you made comparisons with the campus which you remember from your collegiate days? Was your life here as perfect as ours? Or were these situations mere remnants of previous days? In subsequent issues, I will attempt to discuss and compare our college with the idea of what should college accomplish, for it is a personal fear that we are doing as the song states, going to the universities and coming out in boxes, and we'll all be just the same.

Gone are the days of the individual. Gone is the incentive to be yourself. Gone from the student is the traditions of college students from Aristotle to Charles Van Doren. No longer are we thinkers, philosophers, strategists, and humanistic individuals. We are complacent zombies.

The Distilled Essence

By Paul Wagoner

Some years ago when he was Chancellor of the University of California at Santa Barbara, Dr. Samuel Gould, spoke of alumni as "the distilled essence of the university."

In a message to the University alumni he further commented, "If anything lasting is to be achieved by us as a community of scholars it must be reflected in you. If we are to win the intellectual victories or make cultural advances, it must be through your good offices and your belief in our mission."

Although a college or university is many things—buildings, faculty, students, libraries, research, football — the strength of the institution finally resides in its product, the alumni. The success of the institution possibly is best measured in the success of those who have been on the receiving end of the educational enterprise.

I recently read this comment by an unknown author: "Educational institutions are rich, not in buildings and endowments, but in the men and women they have sent into the world to do life's work."

The essence of McPherson, the real wealth of the institution, then is exemplified in her alumni who serve the length and breadth of our world. This same idea has been the frequent theme for many presentations made by President D. W. Bittinger and others of the staff and faculty.

We salute our alumni at this Homecoming time and welcome the group of them who find their way back to their Alma Mater. While they are among us, the MC student body might take note—you are in the process of becoming "the distilled essence."

The Return Of The Native To College

By Burr Miller

I suppose I'm McPherson College's oldest day-time student—and this can be pretty frightening. However, the girls look just as stunning as they did thirty-odd years ago, and the campus looks infinitely prettier. As a matter of fact, I can remember that in my-day we had a boy's dormitory that was so old and creaky that everytime you slammed the front door a third floor toilet would flush.

These were the days in McPherson College history when there was all too little raproachment between the college and downtown McPherson. Now, even though my grandparents were as Duncard as scrapple (they called it "Pfan-nhase"), I can remember sitting at a college library table where thin rosey cheeked students from the hinterlands would leer over their Gospel Messengers at "that kid from town who plays in a dance band." This placed me in a sort of special limbo from whence I might never return.

I wasn't exactly the college "Holden Caulfield" but I suppose I did "get around" somewhat more than the boys on the hill. I remember that I was defeated for Freshman class president by an eager beaver from Colorado with a fine Brethren name of Franz. At the time I couldn't have cared less. I've since learned that this was a mistake; in fact, I've since learned that I've made many many mistakes. Possibly this points to the reasons why I'm back in school—a sort of "Return of the Native"—at the ripe old age of fifty trying to finish a degree I could, and should have had at twenty-one.

However, people on the campus are very kind to me. Most of the professors are younger than I, and it's amusing that one day they may be constrained to give me a "B" on an examination, and on the next day ask my advice on some business deal. The students look on me with good-natured kindness as a sort of iconoclast with a lot of funny stories that are so old they sometimes "click" because they simply haven't heard them before. Then, they keep asking me about this "maturity" thing. I? Mature? Better not ask my wife!

When I was enrolling this fall, an older professor looked up and said, "well, it looks good to see a little maturity on the campus"—to which I replied, "I never figured I had every really found maturity."

"That's a sign you're mature then," he said.

Well, fifty years old or not,—mature or not, it would seem to me a sad day to be given an opportunity to write my comments to the Spectator without leaving at least one sensible, heartfelt word...

I think that word had better be "HOPE."

So, at the risk of sounding "schmatzy," I'd like to give one man's answer to some of the questions these students sitting around the classroom keep dropping in my lap.

Question one: Can I make enough money in this or that field to live the way I want to? The trouble is, this is the wrong question! Those of you who want to make money will probably make money; in fact, you'll probably be eminently successful at it. I don't worry about you. If you're convinced that money and the kind of status it brings is what you really want, then you won't buy one word of caution from me, or anyone else for that matter. Maybe you're interested in John Wesley's formula: "make all you can, save all you can, and give all you can."

It's question two, group two, that interests me. This involves those all too few students who are still a little starry-eyed, a little idealistic, and a little winsome about life ahead — and their questions are: Can I find happiness in some field which I know won't ever make me rich, but in which I hope to find fulfillment?

The answer is yes! Do those values you hear about, like friendship, optimism, trust, loyalty, and the like, really pay off?

The answer—absolutely!

Neuburger To Direct Next Lab Theater

Ancel Neuburger, senior, Hutchinson, Kans., will be the next director of a lab theater play to be given on Brown Auditorium stage, Nov. 10, at 7 p.m.

It is a cutting from the play "Man and Superman". The play takes place in hell, written by George Bernard Shaw.

Having a philosophical comedy theme, the characters discuss different aspects of heaven and hell to which our times are not accustomed.

Johnson Wins Campus Election

By Norman Howell

Lyndon B. Johnson won the mock election held on Nov. 3 at McPherson College. Every full-time student was eligible to vote, and 52.3 per cent exercised this freedom.

Johnson won with a decisive 187 votes to Barry Goldwater's 85 votes. The Prohibitionists and Laborites also registered votes gaining 8 and 3 respectively.

The interesting part of the balloting came in the state voting where William Avery won an easy victory over Harry Wiles, gaining 129 votes to Wiles' 85 votes.

Garner Shriver defeated Jack Graves a stunning debut by scoring 140 to Graves' 79 votes.

These results are convincing proof that considerable ballot splitting was exercised as evidenced by the shift from the Democratic Presidential victory to the Republican gubernatorial and congressional victories.

BSCM To Be Nov. 26-29

A unique way to spend your Thanksgiving vacation is to attend the Brethren Student Christian Conference, BSCM. This year the conference will be held at Juniata College in Huntingdon, Penn., Nov. 26-29.

Students and faculty from any Church of the Brethren colleges or seminary, and Brethren students at state universities or other colleges are all invited to attend.

"Christ Alone?" is the theme of the conference. The program will feature several addresses, small discussion groups, worship, meditation, Bible study, and recreation.

Suggested advanced reading includes "The Religions of Man" by Huston Smith, "Your God is Too Small" by J. B. Phillips, "Isaiah," and "Romans."

The guest leader for the BSCM Conference will be Rev. Alvord Beardslee, Chaplain and associate professor of Religion at Hollins College, Virginia. He attended Lehigh University, Yale University Divinity School and was a Fulbright Scholar at Strasburg University.

The cost of the conference is $25 plus transportation. This fee includes room, board, and registration. McPherson College will receive a share of the travel pool which will cut the cost of transportation.

Students or faculty members who are interested should contact Barry Halderman, Dottie Wine, or Dr. Miller for more information by Nov. 15.

Conference to Further Science November 14

On Nov. 14, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. the Kansas Academy of Sciences and the Kansas State Teachers Association are jointly sponsoring a conference for the furtherance of science as a part of the high school curriculum.

Those attending from McPherson College are Dr. Wesley DeCoursey, professor of chemistry, Dr. Gilford Ikenberry, professor of biology, Jesse Krehbiel, associate professor of mathematics.

The President, Lee DuBridg of the California Institute of Technology, will be the keynote speaker on the occasion. The theme is "Is the New Science Curriculum for Us?"

Meetings will be at the Kansas State Teachers Association Building in Topeka, Kansas.

Book Review

"Honest to God"

By Irven F. Stern

"Honest to God" By John A. T. Robinson, Westminster. (P.B.) $1.65.

This little book, written by a bishop in the Anglican Church, has generated a great deal of controversial discussion since its publication date of last year. It is being so widely read by both church people and non-church people that the phrase "honest to God" is hardly considered a slang expression anymore, but rather it describes man's attempts to be honest in his thoughts about God.

Bishop Robinson writes in a style that is both interesting and penetrating as he declares that many of our present day mental images of God are just as useless in the 20th century as were the metal images Paul encountered at Ephesus in the first century.

The idea of a supernatural God "out there" in space is the thing that Robinson says must go. He believes that this concept may well have been useful in the Medieval Church, but now that man has "come of age" because of progress made in science and rational thought we must "preserve" the Gospel by recasting it into another form.

A simple restatement of "traditional orthodox in modern terms" is not enough. The task is a far more radical one, as Robinson sees it, and demands a process whereby "the most fundamental categories of our theology—of God, for the supernatural, and of religion itself—must go into the melting."

Do not get the idea that Bishop Robinson favors giving up supernaturalism for the naturalism of Julian Huxley. He does not advocate an evolutionary humanism in which one places his faith "in the possibilities of man," but with Dietrich Bonhoeffer he feels that we can have Christianity without religion.

Robinson writes that many people who claim to be atheists are really anthropists. For "the God they honestly feel they cannot believe in, is so often an image of God instead of God, a way of conceiving him which has become an idol."

While Robinson writes as though the last days are upon us when we still have an opportunity to make the Christian faith intelligible to modern man, he does not really describe the form Christianity should take. He leaves that to be worked out by others.

Certainly it is the task of Christians to cast the expression of their faith in terms which the non-Christian can understand, and yet, not lose the essentials of the faith. In calling this need to the attention of the Church, Robinson has done a real service to Christianity. The real problem will be that of doing the job without throwing out the baby along with the bath water.

Library Receives New Periodicals

They are "American Organist," articles and information on organs and organ music; Americans; A "Quarterly Review," is about the inter-American cultural history; "Asian Survey" reports on research in comparative and international affairs; "Canadian Journal of Botany," the results of original scientific research in the field of botany "Geographical Review," general articles, maps, notes, and reviews; "Hispanic Historical Review," scholarly journal covering the history of Spanish America; "The Journal of Modern History," covers history of Europe and its expansion from the Renaissance to the present day; "Journal of Secondary Education," articles on administration and teaching in secondary schools; "Kenyon Review," a quarterly of arts and letters emphasizing literary criticism.

"Modern Language Notes," scholarly articles, notes, and reviews of significant recent studies in European literature; "Nature," surveys with authority and accuracy concerning the field of scientific activity; "New Statesman," a liberal journal of high literary merit; "Pacific Affairs," a journal of international news interpreting dominant trends particularly in the far East; and "The Reading Teacher," articles and summaries of research on methods of teaching reading.

Mac to Clash With Bethel

By Ronnie Murphey

McPherson Bulldogs will clash head on with Bethel Threshers tomorrow afternoon at 2:00. It will be the Bulldogs homecoming so the Threshers will be trying extra hard to upset the Bulldogs. Both teams will be struggling for their third win of the season.

Bethel has been beaten by the following teams: College of Emporia, Southwestern, Friends University, Baker, and Ottawa. They have won only two games, with Sterling and Kansas Wesleyan.

McPherson also has only won two games, with Kansas Wesleyan and Friends University. The Bulldogs have been beaten five times this season by the following teams: College of Emporia, Southwestern, Bethany, Baker, and Ottawa.

It will be a pretty close game according to statistics. Each of the teams will be approximately the same weight. The Threshers will have 14 returning lettermen while the Bulldogs will have 16.

Bethels probable offensive lineup will be:

QB, Edwin Peters, 175 lbs., Jr.
HB, Jarold Schwartz, 170 lbs., Sr., Wayne Niehage, 145 lbs., Fr.

FB, Bob Krehbiel, 190 lbs., Fr.
E. James Friesen, 185 lbs., Sr., Bruce Hett, 175 lbs., Fr.
T. David Stroud, 210 lbs., Fr., Weldon Epp, 212 lbs., So.

G. Elmer Stucky, 175 lbs., So., Roger Krehbiel, 180 lbs., Jr., C. Dean Gugler, 172 lbs., Sr.

Ottawa Braves Defeat McPherson Bulldogs, 27-0

By Ronnie Murphey

Ottawa Braves won over McPherson Bulldogs 27-0 last Saturday afternoon. It was a great homecoming for the Braves when they got to scoring early in the first quarter and making the extra point. The Braves got two more touchdowns just before the first quarter ended but missed one of the extra points. The Braves didn't score in the second quarter but they still had a lead of 20-0 over the Bulldogs at the halftime.

The second half was a little more even with the Braves scoring only once in the third quarter, giving the Braves their 27-0 victory over the Bulldogs.

Some of the individual statistics for the Mac team are: Laurel Patrick and Tom Reazin had seven tackles each for the most tackles on the Mac team.

Russell Burkholder was next with 6. Fred Vanderau and Nick Petrucci tied with 5 tackles each.

Scoring for the Braves were Nelson Taylor on a one yard plunge. Bruce Crofts kicked the extra point. Paul Peffy caught a 21 yard pass from quarterback, Ed Buzzell. The attempt for the extra point was missed.

Leonard Scheufler scored twice for the Braves. Once on a 9 yard pass and again on a 51 yard pass. Both of the passes were from Ed Buzzell. Both of the extra points were kicked by Bruce Crofts.

Rolston Becomes Player of the Week

By Ronnie Murphey

If you see a small but aggressive ball of fire moving down the football field, it couldn't be anyone else but Doyle Rolston. This was the man that the football squad decided to be their player of the week. Doyle was selected player of the week for his blocking ability on offense. Doyle plays the center position and it is said that he does a very good job.

He stands 5 feet 10 inches and weighs 175 pounds. He is a junior and plans to go into pre-veterinarian medicine. Doyle also plans to go to Iowa State University after graduating from Mac. He is taking the following courses: physics, genetics, comparative anatomy, and principals of feeding. Doyle carries seventeen credit hours.

Doyle says that providing we cut down on our fumbling and we sustain no more injuries, with our present desire we should win our last two games.

Students to Tour Kans. And Neb.

From Nov. 15 to Nov. 22 a group consisting of Carol Klotz, sophomore, Fredericksburg, Iowa; Karen Oltman, senior, Enders, Neb., and Art McAuley, sophomore, Elizabethtown, Pa., will tour several churches and schools in Kansas and Colorado.

During the week the trio, along with faculty sponsor Guy Hayes, Director of Admissions, will visit the Prairie View Church in Friends, Kans.; Wiley, Colo.; Pueblo, Colo.; Grand Junction, Colo.; Prince of Peace Church and the First Church of the Brethren in Denver, Colo.; Colorado Springs, Colo.; and Rocky Ford, Colo.

Carol Klotz will sing a group of solos for the services. Karen Oltman will tell about her summer experiences in two Indian schools in Oklahoma this past summer, and Art McAuley as one of a group of American students selected by the YMCA to participate in a summer work camp and seminars in the Far East, will also tell his story.

This group is the first of several groups that will make such tours.

Japanese Students Tell Macollege Of Homeland

Last weekend, three Japanese students from Kansei - Gakuin University, Osaka, Japan visited the Macollege campus.

Koji Shibata, law major from Kobe, Japan; Tsao Minami, business major from Osaka, Japan; and Taboshi Sigami, business major from Osaka, are all touring the United States in order to acquaint American college students with Japan.

The three students have all finished their freshman year at Kansei and are now touring the U.S. on their own with arrangements made through the International Student Service, San Francisco, Calif.

Their tour of the U.S. is including as many college and university campuses as possible in the six month period they have between Sept. and Feb.

The material that is being used in their introduction of Japanese culture to American students consists mainly of films, slides, and tapes, taken by the three students.

While at Macollege, the three mentioned that they found McPherson students willing to study and found an atmosphere for good studying on campus when compared to other colleges they have visited across the U.S.

While on campus, the Japanese students showed slides on Zen Buddhism in Thursday's History of Social Thought Class, movies on the Japanese marriage and family system for Marriage and Family classes, and participated in other discussion groups over the weekend.

DeCoursey Hunts Rocks In Oklahoma

Dr. Wesley DeCoursey, professor of chemistry at McPherson College, and his son Tom participated in a trip down in a lead-zinc mine near Picher, Okla. Along with Dr. DeCoursey and his son were several other members of the McPherson Rock and Mineral Club. The group went Saturday, Oct. 31.

They spent five hours hunting specimens of galena, sphalerite, dolomite, pyrite, calcite, chalcocite and other minerals. Many of the specimens obtained will be on display in the chemistry lab.

Hoover Holds Quad Position

By Ron Cassidente

Judy Hoover, Junior from Denver, Colo., has a big job this year; she's in charge of 1964-65 Macollege memories.

As the editor-in-chief of the McPherson College Quadrangle, she is in charge of planning the layout for the entire school yearbook.

Judy worked her way into the top Quad position by applying for assistant editor in her freshman year. Last year she worked as the assistant editor and tried to gain the experience she now needs as editor-in-chief.

In the spring of her sophomore year, Judy attended a five day yearbook workshop at Kansas State U. where she had an intensive work program on yearbook editing and management.

While at the K-State session, Judy started her plans for this year's yearbook, and continued her planning throughout the summer.

As editor-in-chief of the Quad, Judy also serves as a member of the board of publications. In this post, she tries to interest the board in Quadrangle activities, which includes quests for "money, money, money," as she puts it.

"We need good financial support to improve the Quadrangle through increased pages, pictures, and more color."

Judy went on to say, "A yearbook is a channel for good school public relations. If a yearbook is well done it is a good representation of the school, if not it is a poor reflection on the whole school."

With that in mind, Judy said she felt the Quad needed as much support from the students and administration as is possible.

For her own part, Judy stated that she felt that working on the Quad helped her to become better acquainted with students, professors and the campus in general.

"I have to communicate with other people," said Judy. "This includes being aware of what's going on on campus, and being able to capture a year's activities in print and pictures," she continued.

In her realm of scheduling and taking pictures Judy mentioned that this was the first time that students have taken the pictures of faculty members.

Judy attended Abraham Lincoln High in Denver, where she gained some experience in school publications.

She has been an active member of the Mac student body. She served as treasurer and homecoming attendant for her freshman class, and dorm treasurer, pep club co-chairman and member of the Brethren Western Regional Youth Board in her sophomore year.

Presently she is on Womens Council, in chapel choir and SNEA, and of course, she works on the Quad.

Quadrangle editor, Judy Hoover, faces the horrors of deadlines and unphotogenic people.

Choirs At Work

McPherson College choirs have been making various appearances and are working towards a number of performances.

Sunday evening, Oct. 25, the A Capella Choir performed at the church for Regional Conference.

This Sunday the group will be making its monthly appearance at the Church of the Brethren.

At the present time a combination of the Chapel Choir and the A Cappella Choir is working on the 3rd Mass of Joseph Hayden which will be presented sometime in the future.
