Students Need Ideals, Values

McPherson College seniors will be crossing the Brown Auditorium stage, Sunday, May 28, to receive diplomas, which signify that they have achieved a goal of excellency and are now a part of the "select few" who will enter the business world with a "career in hand."

These graduates may be classified into two groups: the "scholarly book worms," and the "ideals and values scholars."

The "scholarly book worms" are the students who strive for academic success behind locked doors and open books. Never taking part in extracurricular activities, these scholars may believe that a prosperous business can be built on books alone.

The "ideals and values scholars," however, gain ideals and values as well as a good textbook education. They are the ones who participate in student government, play golf, attend lab theaters, visit with fellow students and attend dances and parties in the Student Union basement.

The ideals and values they gain from college life are inestimable. They discover, for example, the value of money, and also begin to value friendship more highly. These values, as well as the knowledge gained from textbooks are very important in today's modern world of business communication.

So before it's your turn to walk across the stage, take advantage of these training opportunities. Unlock your doors and close your text books long enough to receive these ideals and values.

'Mod' Theme Highlights Party In Basement

"Mod" atmosphere highlighted "Stage Door Opens on Carnaby Street," sponsored by Alpha Psi Omega-Saturday night, May 6, in a totally transformed Student Union basement.

Slides of McPherson College stage productions were flashed on a screen throughout the evening.

Dan Rivas, McPherson, emceed the party.

Winners of contests held were Patti Allen, shortest mini-skirt; Milton Vernick, best beard; Mary Nell Albright and Marilyn Hoover, best-dressed "mod" couple; and John Swanson and Karen Mathes, best collages.

Musical entertainment was provided by Don Monroe, folk singer from Kansas Wesleyan University, and Rusty Brichard and John Lane, McPherson College folk singers. Clark Ratliff accompanied Lane on the string bass.

The Roaches, a campus band, provided dance music.

Members are Scott Carroll, drums; Denny Conwell, bass guitar; Larry Evans, electric organ; Dave Ikenberry, rhythm guitar; and Tom Wheeler, lead guitar.

Alan Cable, Alpha Psi Omega president and chairman of the party and dance, felt the "mod" party was well-received by those attending.

Members of Alpha Psi Omega are Alan Cable, Pat Greenway, Mervin Penner, Ron Cassidente and Linda Kurtz.

Loren Reyher, assistant professor in English and theater is the sponsor.

Choir Ends 35th Season With Excellent Concert

By Ari McAuley
The A Cappella Choir closed its 35th season last Friday evening with a spring concert described by one veteran choir member as "... the best A Cappella performance I've heard on the Brown Auditorium stage."

Conductor Don Frederick, professor of voice and director of choral organizations, led the very responsive choir through a demanding two-part program of serious classical arrangements, and lighter novelty and show tunes selected by the audience from the choir's repertoire.

It took little time for the choir to establish its qualities of excellent depth and accuracy. Such sophisticated arrangements as Giuseppe Verdi's "Sanctus" and Maurice Ravel's "Pavane" are seldom attempted by any but the most coordinated choirs. But the A Cappella Choir executed both with a reputation establishing delivery.

Especially impressive during the first half of the performance were the sopranos, who in several numbers challenged the rest of the choir through some beautiful section solo passages.

This is also a sign of a good conductor, when he can select music to take the fullest advantage of unusual talent.

The formally robed choir of the first half appeared as a formally gowned and white coated choir in the second half. A special feature of this year's spring concert was the audience participation of the second half. During the intermission, the audience wrote requests from which the choir sang several on the basis of most votes cast.

The choir sang enthusiastically through the novelty tune "Tico Tico," two spirituals, an ever popular medley of Rogers and Hammerstein show tunes, and a very beautiful arrangement of "Shenandoah."

The spring concert was a totally commendable performance by a totally inspired choir.

New Staff Edits Practice Issue Of Spectator

It is our turn now! Today's issue of the McPherson College Spectator is the first attempt of the fall semester Spectator staff to edit an entire issue.

Many problems arose during the past week, however, with the help of A. G. Bell the staff met all deadlines. Spring semester reporters have cooperated tremendously, have given much of their "extra" time, and have worked harder than the "average detective," digging for news and obtaining interviews for the Spectator.

The continued success and high journalistic rating achieved by previous Spectator staffs must be maintained. Only through cooperation among students, faculty, administration, organizations and the new Spectator staff may this goal be attained.

The Official College newspaper, the Spectator, is the sounding board for College news.

During the coming year the Spectator staff would like to urge all students, faculty, administration and others who have news that would be of mutual interest to College students to contact any reporter, Spectator editor, or the Spectator adviser.

This needed cooperation will be the key to an informed student body. The new staff of the Spectator pledges a determined will to respect the tradition of journalistic achievement at McPherson College. The staff challenges its readers to keep the Spectator informed. Campus Editor, Fall Semester Bonnie Harwick.

Two Students Prepare For Orient Trip

By MARGE KECK
Bob Albin, jr, Waterloo, and Dwight Ediger, sr, Buhler, are busily getting shots and preparing visas and passports as they get ready for their 60-day trip to the Orient.

Sponsored every two years by the National YMCA, this year's trip has its main emphasis on leadership through discussion groups and activities for which they have indicated skills or interest.

Albin and Ediger will leave Oakland, Calif., June 30 after a two-day orientation period with other students and a group leader. They will fly to Japan and spend three days there before flying to Taiwan for a week's stay.

From Taiwan the group will fly to Hong Kong, where activities will be centered for a month. Korea will be the next stop for another week before they fly back to Japan for their final week abroad.

The purpose of this trip is to travel and meet political leaders. It also gives students a chance to see other cultures in operation and see their differences and similarities.

In addition, the students will have a chance to feel the adjustments others make when they come to this country, and they will be seeing their homeland in a new light as they are faced with questions about which we do not think.

Students will be given much free time during their trip. This will give them time to see the different cultures, and, in turn, answer questions about American cultures with which they may be confronted. Discussions with other students and top government officials in the Orient will be other highlights. Work of the Church World Service will be viewed, and visits to universities and new territories will be in store. In Hong Kong, Ediger and Albin will be matched with students from Hong Kong according to similarities in backgrounds, cultures, and interests. They will participate in a camping program or conference also while in Hong Kong.

Other activities will be meetings with the minister for reconstruction, U.S. AID, Peace Corps, and a visit to Chung Hee Park. The group will visit Hiroshima, and spend a day and night at the Buddhist Temple.

In spare times, Albin and Ediger hope to go into villages off main highways to observe and get to know the people.

Albin feels that this is a "good opportunity to gain new insights in different cultures through various student and civic leaders."

Both hope to gain a better understanding of other cultures and to share this understanding upon their return. They want to meet people on all social levels.

In addition, Ediger hopes to "find out how they feel and what their image of American culture actually is."

After evaluation in Hong Kong, the group will fly back to Oakland.

Clay Awaits Trial, Possibility of Prison

By GENE CZAPLINSKI

Cassius Clay has lost the first fight of his career, and the consequences which now await him are almost unimaginable to the average person.

First, his title was seized from his cocky grasp and an estimated ten million dollars of potential earnings with it.

Next, an entire nation, save for a few floating Muslims, poured forth its long-kept wrath upon him, an anger pent up due to his unblemished boxing career.

Finally, a grand jury has indicted Cassius, and the possibility of a five-year prison term for draft refusal is drawing near.

The shame behind this matter seems to lie in three distinct, yet separate areas, which show the fickleness and hypocrisy of society.

First, the boxing commissions had one legal right to strip Clay of the title before his trial on draft evasion is over.

He is still an American and does have the right of freedom of belief.

Assume that a pardon is granted for his evasion by the jury, then what?

Second, the commission seems to have wasted no time in delivering its kayo punch to Mr.

Ali, but the goose that laid the golden egg will never be on the hatch rock again.

Clay drew crowds and crowds meant money and money meant the existence of the dying pugilistic endeavor. With Clay gone, who is going to take over the role of boxing's box-office king — Will it Still?

The final note upon which this drama ends in an era which may never come again for a century or more. It is the end of the career of a boxer who was so good that sports writers began to make excuses for the humiliations Clay had given to others.

It is the end of an era for a young man who only even years ago thrilled TV audiences all over this country while winning the Olympic Heavyweight Championship at nineteen years of age, and now is scorned by those same audiences.

Impossible as it is to defend his recent actions, one can only think back over Clay's last seven years and exclaim, "How time does fly."

Golf Team Ties Emporia

McPherson College linksmen tied College of Emporia 7 1/2 in a match held May 4 at Emporia.

Gene Czaplinski captured medalist honors, firing an 81. He defeated P. Mosley's score of 83.

Tied for second place were Chris Levi and Lance Hungerford, with scores of 82. Levi defeated J. Janetz's 84 and Hungerford tied B. Elkin's score of 82, but managed to win two points.

History of Celebrations Reveals Origin In 1914

By DEE NORTHEY

All-Schools Day and May Fete, Wednesday-Friday, May 17-19, in McPherson, have an old and unusual history.

The first All-Schools Day celebration in 1914 was the idea of a few McPherson businessmen to honor eighth grade graduates. Commencement exercises were held on the island in the courthouse park.

A parade which was blocks long, grew as did the crowds and their enthusiasm until it is now miles long. The sophomore class of McPherson College will enter a float in the parade.

The 1914 event was so well accepted that it immediately became an annual affair. Prior to the celebrations, several rural grade school graduating classes would combine while superintendents of these grade school handed out diplomas.

During the early years, a car caravan accompanied by a band, personally contacted all the county towns-people about the up coming event. Businessmen promoted the project to insure its success, and many closed their businesses during that day.

Most cars made the circuit in one day, aided by an accompanying auto mechanic to patch tires.

An All-Schools Day queen was not elected until the second year's activities. At that time the queen was chosen from the sixth grade.

The McMurry Saxophone Band and the grade school pupils of McPherson furnished music for graduates and spectators.

May Fete was held in the afternoon on College Hill. Athletic events ensued until evening when the Graduates Dinner began at the YMCA.

Central Park was dedicated at the first celebration. Crowning of the queen and the parade have evolved as the primary events of All-Schools Day and May Fete. The parade, which attracted 30,000 spectators last year, customarily begins downtown at 11 a.m.

The May Fete coronation program for the county high school queens and their prince charming has been enlarged and elaborated to the two-day event that it is now. The band shell is the stage for the royal court.
