

Senator James B. Pearson, Kansas Republican, will appear on the McPherson College campus May 26 to sponsor a one-day conference on federal aid to higher education.

Also scheduled to appear are representatives from all the state's private and public colleges and universities to discuss mutual problems and to meet and hear from representatives of federal agencies which handle the various aid programs.

The conference will not attempt to cover all phases of federal aid, but will concentrate on those particular areas which will be of more interest and benefit to Kansas colleges and universities.

In pointing to the need for such a conference, Pearson said: "Over the past few years Congress has enacted an impressive, but also a rather bewildering variety of aids to higher education.

"Thus, despite the fact that the overall volume of aid has been substantially increased, the individual college and university encounters the very real prob-

Melhorn Tells Trip Highlights

Dr. J. Jack Melhorn, president of the College, who returned May 13 from a European evaluation tour of Brethren Year Abroad programs, this week revealed highlights of his tour and discussed plans for attending a May 19-20 conference on Brethren Volunteer Service in Elgin, Ill.

"The BCA program is one of the best programs in Europe," he said. "The universities we visited all spoke highly of our program and the quality of students we selected to participate in this international experience.

"We can be proud of the two students, Ron Adkins and Marilyn Wood, who now represent McPherson at Marburg, Germany. Marburg would like to have more students of their high caliber."

Dr. Melhorn and Dr. Harold Fasnacht, president of LaVerne College, visited, interviewed and evaluated the programs at Marburg, Germany and Strasbourg, France. They visited students attending the universities at Göttingen, West Germany and Valencia, Spain.

"We will make a number of recommendations, not only for next year, but for the following years so that we can have an even better program and perhaps broaden our program so that additional universities are included," Dr. Melhorn explained.

lem of first, knowing what federal funds are available, and, secondly, how best to apply for such aid."

Pearson went on to add that he believed that conference "will be of real value to the educators of Kansas."

Invited speakers for the conference include representatives from the Office of Education in Washington, D. C. and from its Regional office in Kansas City.

Also invited are speakers from the National Science Foundation, the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Public Health Service.

Eiler, Deal Give Dinner to Honor Five Seniors

David L. Eiler and Thomas W. Deal, assistant professors of philosophy and religion, with their wives, honored graduating philosophy and religion majors and their guests at a dinner May 6, in Prof. Eiler's home.

Special guests of honor were Dr. and Mrs. Wayne Miller. Dr. Miller will assume the position of Dean of the Faculty at Elizabethtown College, Elizabethtown, Pa., this summer.

Graduating philosophy and religion majors include Donald Flory, Marion, Iowa, who will enter a graduate program in political science at Kansas State University on a National Science Foundation grant. Glen Frazier, Denver, will be entering Bethany Theological Seminary, Oak Brook, Ill.

Roger Schrock, Harmony, Minn., will teach at the Waka School in Nigeria under the Brethren Service Commission. Helen McKinney, Great Bend, has applied for a position as an airline stewardess.

Ed Shapley, who completed his college work in December, is currently employed by the Bureau of Indian Affairs as a teacher on a reservation near Magdalena, N. M.

Kaduna, Nigeria.

They will begin teaching in January, but will leave the United States the last week of July to travel in Europe three weeks.

Miss Klotz will teach home economics and Neher will teach physics and mathematics to the native Africans.

Kaduna, which is located near the Sahara Desert, has both rainy and dry seasons.

"It's not unusual to see camel caravans passing by," Miss Klotz said.

Miss Pieratt and Schrock will leave the United States about six weeks after their wedding on June 24. They will spend three days in Germany before leaving for Nigeria.

Stationed in Waka, Nigeria, a government school managed by the Church of the Brethren, Schrock will teach Bible and history and Miss Pieratt will instruct health.

Also teaching at Waka will be Mrs. Miller and her husband, Phil Miller, '66, who teaches at Derby.

Mrs. Miller will instruct English at the secondary and teachers' training school, and her husband will teach mathematics.

Waka is located in the tropical savanna, where tall grasses and shrubs grow. Kaduna, where the Neher's will teach, is approximately 500 miles away.

"They have a beautiful wet season with lush foliage," said Miss Pieratt.

Lizards are a common sight at Waka, just as mice are in America.

Although Waka is 500 miles from the Sahara Desert, the dust-laden harmattan wind is a common occurrence at certain times of the year.

Recent McPherson College graduates currently teaching at Waka are Bill and Lois Fruth Grove, Dennis and Marcia Yoder Emmert, and Leah Standifer.

The McPherson seniors are now experiencing the multitude of shots they are required to take, and are planning their packing, which must all be done in large, metal barrels.

They will attend a day of briefing and training at Wichita May 25, which Joel Thompson and J. Henry Long, officials of the Foreign Missions Commission, will head.

'Soft Sounds' Provide 'May Madness' Music

Seniors were entertained by the juniors at a banquet and prom Saturday from 6:30 - 12 p.m.

They were served steak and baked potatoes at the Hesston Colonial House.

Ottawa Harris, Denver, senior class president, responded to a welcome by Steve Nettleton, Albert Lea, Minn., junior class president and toastmaster.

The faculty quartet, accompanied by Dr. Doris Coppock, entertained. Members are Alvin E. Willems, Dr. G. J. Ikenberry, Paul Wagoner and Dr. Wesley DeCoursey.

The Student Union was decorated in pink, orange, blue and purple crepe paper and balloons under the theme "May Madness" for the formal.

Dance music was provided by a band, the "Soft Sounds." Members of the Planning Committee for the banquet and prom were Steve Nettleton, Cliff Lambert, Bonnie Rhynolds, Janet Knackstedt, Cindy Eisenbise and Keith Hummel.

Chairmen were Cindy Eisenbise, decorations; Cliff Gates, tickets; and Glenice Frazier, food.

Rothrock Plans Institute Study

Dr. Dayton G. Rothrock, professor of education and psychology, has been accepted for an Aug. 7-Aug. 25 institute at Kansas State University.

The theme of the institute is "Utilization of Educational Media in Large Group Undergraduate Instruction."

At the institute, special emphasis will be given to the use of the overhead projector and closed circuit instructional TV.

Last Issue Says Thanks

This is the last issue of the Spectator for this academic year. As we prepare to go to press this last time, we think of the many issues that have preceded it and we are grateful.

We are grateful to each of the diligent reporters who probed every department on campus each week in search of news; to the business staff for their excellent management of Spectator finances; and, as editor-in-chief, I am especially grateful to the other members of the editorial staff and to the faculty adviser, who has always been available for counsel.

But the Spectator is not the result of efforts of only those whose names appear on the masthead of this page.

The Spectator is directly indebted to an administration which believes strongly in students' right to think for themselves; an administration which trusts students' editorial judgment enough to support complete freedom from censorship or advance approval of copy of the Spectator.

We are also indebted to a faculty and staff whose members willingly give of their time to provide information, and for students who help make McPherson a vital institution—one where news happens.

Our gratitude extends then throughout the College community, and into the Sentinel composing room, whose members have been so kind and considerate.

But finally, our gratitude settles on one person. You, the reader. Your interest makes it all worth while.

Reyher Defines Artistry

By LOREN D. REYHER
Assistant Professor in Theater

The theater is an imitation of life into which the aspiring artist is thrown without warning. He is faced with retaining his own identity while portraying other identities.

Once he becomes an artist, he stands under the gaze of judgment: critics, peers and the general public. He stands naked waiting for fate to decide whether or not his performance has been sufficient to merit repeat.

He shall not be an artist, however, if he is satisfied with the laurels that may have been gained. If he is a true artist, there is always more.

During the past years, many aspiring artists have felt the glow of the lights on McPherson College stage. They have heard applause and giddy laughter, and have felt the static silence.

Some have completed their study at ring-down of the final curtain, content to sit and reminisce about previous roles. They have lost sight of artistry.

Others have never been satisfied. Each rehearsal, each performance was a scourge, repeated because there was so much to be learned. The pinnacles were reached, the performances completed, but the search was not.

Without realizing it, their days of artistic apprenticeship were over. They were approaching the disciplines of artistry.

Those disciplines are many. Pain to perfect a craft is unending, and those who have consistently fought for excellence are most aware of it.

The applause is never loud enough, the laughter not deep enough. It never is for the artist, for his disciplines are hard work, tears and the terrible black jaws of the public whom he must serve as an interpreter.

The director cares not what the plays were, or what the critics said about them, or even the objections evoked from an audience on this or that opening night. He remembers the actors and actresses who consistently fought hour after tedious hour. The results of that self-imposed discipline were obvious when the responses of the audience showed that they understood, through visible artistry, what great meanings were there.

One remembers the profound silences at the end of "Antigone" and "Beyond the Horizon," the gales of laughter yet serious frowns at the satiric comedy of "Visit to a Small Planet" or "Mr. Adam." Those moments of magic made manifest the many hours spent in the search for proper interpretation.

Successes staged at McPherson have been due to the people who were willing to sacrifice time and energy to explore something new. Those people have embarked on the search for excellence that will eventually prove them artists.

The artist is a dreamer. He interprets a world in words no one else hears, in sights no one else sees. He must endeavor, through his discipline, to create out of his visions, something to bring understanding to his audiences.

In spite of his dream world, he must realistically face the curse of the artist: Even the highest dreams are fraught with reality.

It is only through constant dedication, diligent search and discipline to finally attain

Regier Displays Metal Art, Will Teach Sculpture Class

PROF. REGIER looks over his creation, "Space Traveler circa 1867." This is one of the six metal assemblages which he has on display in Friendship Hall.

"I like to see people's reactions," was Arlie J. Regier's comment about his metal assemblages on display in Friendship Hall.

Regier, assistant professor of industrial arts, began his interesting hobby of welding together interesting shapes and pieces of metal while he was taking an extension course in sculpture at Kansas State College of Pittsburg.

Assemblages which he has created, and are on display through the rest of this month, include "F7932", "... And on the Eighth Day Man Made a Wheel," "The First One," "Tension," "Space Traveler circa 1867," and "The Interrogator."

After finding interesting pieces of metal in salvage yards or off of machinery, Prof. Regier begins his sculpturing by hanging the pieces from a ceiling, until he gets them in the positions he wants.

Staats Discusses Careers In Government Service

One of McPherson College's most outstanding graduates, Elmer Staats, '35, Comptroller General of the United States, discussed motivations and rewards of careers in government service last Thursday in Convocations.

Individuality, dedication and vision were stressed as necessary attributes for success in public service, and Staats recommended a good liberal art education, augmented by technical study, as the basic foundation for such a career.

"We largely develop our own careers," Staats said, pointing out that, although top level salaries are often less in government than in industry, this is not always true.

"The privilege of being an active, living part of one's time" was cited by Staats as worthy motivation for public service.

In a press conference following his lecture, Staats discussed his own position and the financial problems of the United States today.

When asked about the symbolism of his title "watchdog" of the treasury, Staats said, "We are an independent, non-partisan agency which looks over the shoulder of government to see that efficiency and economy are carried out."

As "watchdog," Staats reports directly to Congress and the President, assists Congress in all studies concerned with economic efficiency and audits accounts of government agencies.

The greatest financial problem of the United States today, according to Staats, is the balance of payments deficit which causes a drain upon U.S. gold

Artists Show Talent At Campus Art Fair

Over 20 exhibitors presented works of art at the Annual Art Fair held May 12, at the Student Union.

The Fair was sponsored by the Art Club with David Switzer, fr, Wichita, in charge, and Rockford Regula, soph, Leesport, Pa., assisting.

The youngest exhibitor was Mark Schmidt, 12 years old, 7th grade student, attending McPherson Junior High School.

"I am impressed with the artistic talent of the students," said Carolyn Dell, soph, Enid, Okla.

Gayle Miller, fr, Payette, Iowa, commented, "Part of the show indicates some outstanding artistic skill."

Band Is Praised

By ED MYERS
The McPherson College Concert Band finished a fine season May 12 with a good, well-received concert.

The well-rounded program featured selections from Haydn's "March for the Princes of Wales," to John Phillip Sousa's "Liberty Bell."

The evening concert began with the fanfare composition, "Music for a Ceremony."

This piece, showing off the brass section of the band, was representative of the excellent improvement made by the band during the duration of the year.

While at times confidence seemed to be lacking, the band began to take on a greater aura of professionalism than noted before.

"Partita," by Robert Washburn, was a fine example of this efficiency. The fine inter-workings of the melodies and counter-melodies were distinctly brought out through the band's clarity and style.

Representative of this musicianship, the double reeds demonstrated outstanding proficiency.

One of the more difficult numbers on the program was "Concert Suite." This is a contemporary number by Frederic Ashe, containing difficult passages executed one beat per measure.

In closing it could be said that the band ended a fine season with a fine concert.

Theater Offers Apprenticeship To Prof Reyher

Loren D. Reyher, assistant professor in English and theater, has been awarded an acting apprenticeship with the Priscilla Beach Summer Theater at Plymouth, Mass. A reputable summer company in operation for 35 years, the company lists as some of its alumni, Dan Blocker, Paul Newman and Pat Carroll.

As yet undecided about his plans for the summer, Prof. Reyher stated: "I am very honored to have been awarded the apprenticeship. Due to other arrangements, it will be some time before I am certain whether or not I will be able to accept it."

"I am certain it would be very valuable as far as experience is concerned, but I am still waiting to hear from other possibilities."

Reyher, planning to be on leave for further theatrical study next year in New York, is waiting to hear from California where three of his scripts are under consideration by the Louis Schurr Agency.

Should the scripts be accepted, portions of the year will be spent in California observing the
