On Babysitting

After dodging three trikes and fourteen toys,
I knocked upon the door
A little head peeked out and said,
"Mom don't want no more."
Mother X then let me in
As if I had chickenpox
And left without mentioning that
The cat never went in his box.
"I hate you!" said the Big One,
Who was spitting out prunes
And swallowing the seeds
While engrossed in cartoons.
The Little One gurgled
And spilled his milk over
Then stirred in some pablum
And dumped it on Rover.
I went to the sink
To do breakfast dishes
But a dead turtle beat me,
Along with some fishes.
"The aquarium broke,"
The Middle One said,
"And we love our Tortoise
Even though he is dead."
No one answered later
When I gave them a call
I opened the door and saw baby
Propped upon the wall.
The Little One was a target
For big rubber arrows
With ten points for the navel
And five for the toes.
I fixed some sandwiches
And called in the brood
The Big One blessed all his friends
And forgot the food.
"Read to us before our nap,"
They cried in unison.
Mommy always like to read
From the big book on Sigmund.
Sigmund was not a bunny
Sigmund was a Freud.
Six little ears listened eagerly
To chapter three, apparently over-joyed.
Mother X came home and asked
Why I hadn't done dishes from breakfast.
She underpaid me, and I ran out
Tripped on a truck, and fell in the dust.

Students join movement to correct English usage

A bloodless, non-violent reform movement has begun on campus, and it has been given the name "Operation: Please Help me!"

Realizing that poor English usage can be a crippling handicap, 115 students have joined "Operation Please Help Me" in an effort to improve their own speaking habits.

The voluntary reform grew from the interest of many freshmen and juniors who wanted to improve their use of English.

In order to join, a student merely asks three people with whom he speaks frequently and informally to tell him of his errors in speaking. In turn, he then tells them of their errors and keeps a list of correct, standard usage he has noted.

In support of "Operation: Please Help Me!" Mrs. Hornet E. Brunk, associate professor of English and journalism, has written: "Language is social behavior, the product of your environment; therefore, language is made up of habits. To be changed, these habits must be brought to the speaker's awareness."

"The use of non-standard expressions is handicapping our college graduates. Won't you join Please Help Me! too and answer the plea?"

Stuco hosts KCSA officers

Frank Hoover, Bethany, president of the Kansas College Student Association, and Kathy Lambert, Bethany, secretary, visited the Oct. 11 meeting of Student Council.

Hoover explained what the KCSA will be trying to accomplish this year.

Possible projects mentioned were the traveling Sportsmanship Trophy, and a talent show which would develop into a scholarship program for the winners.

Also, Tom Brubaker, sr., Rocky Ford, Colo., chairman of the Board of Publications, reported that the position of assistant copy editor for the Spectator was still available.

Dean Sheller, sr., Eldora, Iowa, president of Stuco, reported that 5 per cent of the student body voted in the election of freshman Stuco representatives and B-team cheerleaders.

Frosh comment about feelings of college life

After six weeks on campus, most freshmen are actually beginning to feel a part of McPherson College. Many of them discovered that college was not exactly as they thought it would be.

Suzanne Nachtigal, fr., Buhler, said, "I found college was completely different from what I expected. Although I didn't like it very well at first, I do now."

Another freshman, Sue Steffen, Goshen, Ind., stated, "I was very surprised at the student-professor relationships here. The professors seem much more concerned about the students."

Sue was also surprised at the segregation of boys and girls. Her biggest adjustment was being so far away from her family.

"It's a totally different aspect of life," is how Pam Burns, fr., Westwood, Mass., expressed her reactions to college life.

Mike Blinkenstaff, fr., Nampa, Idaho, likes college life and even finds the food good most of the time. Mike feels the people here are very friendly, and he doesn't feel college is any more difficult than high school.

Another freshman, Judy Pauls, Inman, stated, "College is so different because of the many new experiences, both good and bad."

Stump responds to challenge

Dear Editor:

In The Spectator for Oct. 5, Mr. David Sovchen requested administration or faculty to respond to a challenge to the use of the English Proficiency Examination at McPherson College. My response is personal and does not necessarily represent the concepts of either of the bodies listed above.

Let it be understood, however, that the English Proficiency Examination was established by the total faculty and is maintained as a part of the curriculum by that group. When the faculty is ready to abandon the program, I shall comply with the request. The Department of English, Speech, and Theater administers the examination, but defends it no more than does any other department in the school.

In a general way, I agree with Mr. Sovchen that the basic courses in freshman English should be restructured so that the English Proficiency Examination could be eliminated.

A careful observation of particular situations, however, reveals to the thoughtful student of academe that the solution is not discovered through simple processes of syllogistic logic. Mr. Sovchen seems to be uninformed concerning certain factors that are related to the English Proficiency Examination.

Foremost and most significant are these inherent purposes which motivate and direct McPherson College. McPherson College looks to a simple man of Nazareth who spoke of administering a cup of cold water to unfortunate persons rather than to a rationalistic logician who sought to discover only perfect answers.

In short, we are propelled by Christian agape instead of ethical justice. Thus, we often go the second, the third, and even the fourth mile in an attempt to aid some student in discovering his potential capacity.

This leads to another apparent datum which seems to have escaped Mr. Sovchen's observation.

Should Written Communications be "revamped" as he suggests and the English Proficiency Examination be eliminated, about 40 per cent of our freshman students would be forced at the end of their freshman year to abandon their dreams of acquiring a college education; they would find it necessary to confront the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, equipped with a sense of failure and obsessed with feelings of disillusionment, discouragement, and despair.

Also, many students who are admitted here for a second chance would not find that opportunity available. At McPherson College we try to lift up the fallen because, you see, we love you.

Many persons are not aware of the extent of this love. Although most of the freshman students who entered McPherson College this past September rated comparatively high in some area or areas, 91 of them rated below average in English usage, with many of those 91 rating far, far below average.

To attempt to lift those students' abilities to a college standard of English usage is a Herculean task beyond the limits of human endeavor. Most of these students have developed careless habits in English usage because of earlier training that was inadequate, but they still must reach certain standards if they are to represent McPherson College as graduates. It would be simple to fail them and send them home, but at McPherson College we hope to aid them in a journey toward success.

Of those students who took the examination this past September, 44 received their training in freshman English in an institution other than McPherson College. More than one-third of those who failed were not exposed to freshman English at McPherson College. Upgrading our course in Written Communications would be of very little help to them.

There is an ancient and platitudeous adage which states in effect that one with equestrian interests can direct a herbivorous mammalian quadruped toward the available supply of a chemical solution composed of specific portions of the elements of hydrogen and oxygen but he might encounter some resistance in an attempt to coerce the creature to indulge. This cliché of antiquity is apropos to the total college curriculum. In all courses of study much more knowledge is disseminated than is assimilated.

This is especially true in Written Communications. Adequate standards are taught in the course, but they are not caught.

The same ancient and platitudeous adage equally applies to the student's submitting of his knowledge of English usage to the testing procedures available in the English Proficiency Examination.

Should Mr. Sovchen ever arrange his busy schedule in a manner that will permit him to subject his standard of English usage to the English Proficiency Examination, he may discover that the test is not some dread and forbidding fear from Hades but is a stepping stone toward the ability to walk the world with dignity.

Very truly yours,
Harley Stump
English Department Head

Bittering Hall opens door for 150 visitors

Bittering Hall opened its doors on Saturday, Oct. 14, for an informal open house.

The majority of the visitors arrived after the game, and were allowed to tour the dormitory.

Mrs. Mabel Markham, housemother, said that there would be a formal open house later in the year.

No date has been set, but Mrs. Markham said that it will probably be after Christmas.

The formal open house will include a tea, a guest register and a tour of the complete residence facility.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

Famous pianist begins 1967-1968 Cultural Series

By ED MYERS
James Dick, Hutchinson born pianist of international fame, began the 1967-1968 Cultural Series at McPherson College with an excellent display of interpretation and ability.

Exhibiting lightness of touch combined with cleanness and depth of tone, Mr. Dick chose to begin the program with the "Concerto Grosso in D Major" by Antonia Vivaldi of the Baroque Era.

The program varied to the romantic music of Rachmaninoff and his "Variations on a theme of Corelli, Opus 42." This composition of lush sound was well performed and well-received.

Contrasting the Vivaldi "Concerto," the first half of the program closed with the "Sonata in E Flat Major, Opus 81 a (Les Adieux)" by Beethoven. Mr. Dick's interpretation of this work was superb and surpassed only by his technique.

Following intermission, Dick was greeted by applause and returned with three varied Chopin works "Scherzo No. 1 in B Minor Opus 20," "Nocturne in C Sharp Minor, Opus 27, No. 1," "Etude in C Minor, Opus 25, No. 12." The thrill of Chopin was delivered in the performer's agility, pedaling, fingering and touch.

Concluding the program the pianist played the Sonata for piano by Ginastera of Argentina. This exciting showpiece of the 20th Century culminated a program that is hard for a student to criticize, but easy to appreciate.

Baker, 4-1 in the Kansas College Athletic Conference, will try to give the winless Bulldogs their sixth straight defeat, while the Bulldogs will be out to avenge a 38-6 loss handed them by the Wildcats last year.

Baker's only loss came from undefeated Southwestern Moundbuilders by the score of 21-6. The Moundbuilders also soundly trounced the Bulldogs by the score of 47-6.

"We improved our offensive play against Bethany," stated McPherson coach Dwight McSpadden, "Now our main objective is to keep our offensive momentum going."

In KCAC statistics, Baker is second in total offense with an average of 410 yards per game.

Baker is also second in rushing with a 217 yard average. On defense the Wildcats are fifth, yielding an average of 213.2 yards per game.

Defensive rushing is the only

McPherson yielded 97.3 average yardage, while Baker yielded 99.7 yards in their first four games.

Melhorn, Frantz attend 50th meeting of ACE

By CINDY BARCHESKY

Dr. J. Jack Melhorn, president of McPherson College and Dr. Merin Frantz, dean of academic affairs, attended the 50th annual meeting of the American Council of Education, Oct. 12-13. Calvin B. T. Lee of the United States Department of Health, Education, and Welfare opened the meeting. His topic was the theme of the conference: "Whose Goal for American Higher Education?"

The Bulldogs scored in the third and fourth quarters, while Bethany scored in the initial and final periods.

Robert O. Smith recently received the American Farmer Degree at the National convention of the Future Farmers of America, in Kansas City, Mo.

Smith, a sophomore from Fredericksburg, Iowa, was the youngest of the eleven members from Iowa to receive the highest degree awarded by FFA.

The degree is awarded each year to one in every 1,000 active members. This year 480 future farmers from the 50 states received the degree.

Smith, who has been active in FFA for six years, has received other recognition. He has also received the Green Hand Degree, Chapter Farmer Degree and the State Farmer Degree.

Smith has played in the Iowa and National FFA Bands, and has served as drum major for both bands.

During the past year, Smith has had as his productive projects:

four dairy cows; three dairy heifers; 1,800 caged layers; and 160 acres of crops.

His Supervised Farming Program also included ten improvement projects and 12 supplementary practices.

Bittinger Hall's float wins first in Homecoming parade

"It's a Novel Homecoming," was the theme of McPherson College's first Homecoming parade in over ten years.

Prizes were awarded to the top three floats in the parade. The first-place award of $45 was won by Bittinger Hall for its entry, "Mutiny on the Bounty." The biggest float in the parade, it depicted a whipping scene on the deck of a replica of "The Bounty."

Class creates off-beat cult

"Ugly," "cult of the ugly," "brutal," and "Mod" will be on Campus after Oct. 19.

"Ugly" will be the next project in Mrs. Wesley DeCoursey's Design classes. The project will recognize the current "cult of the ugly" in Pop Art, the "brutal" in interior design, and the "Mod" styles of clothing.

Operating under the theory that one can use the principles of design to create something beautiful, the classes will use the principles of design in reverse to create something ugly. "Project Ugly" will be on display in Room 202, Harnly Hall, after Oct. 19.

Dried weed arrangements illustrating "rhythm" and projects illustrating the use of "Balance" and "emphasis" are presently on display.

was entered by the senior class. Circle K's float won the third place award $15. The theme was "Run for Your Life."

The 1967 Homecoming Queen, Wanda McDonough, Jr., Grinnell, Iowa, and her court rode on the Dotzour and Metzler Hall entry, "The Power and the Glory."

"The Avengers," was the theme for the junior class float. A scoreboard showing McPherson in the lead and a four-legged bulldog were featured.

The sophomore entry, "Through the Looking Glass," featured a large bulldog and a 12 member cheering section.

"Swedes are Little Men," the freshman class float, was the sixth unit in the parade. It carried a husky bulldog and several tiny "Swedes."

The only mechanically animated float in the parade was entered by Kline and Fahnestock Halls. The theme of "For whom the Bell Tolls," was carried out by a uniformed bulldog ringing a bell towering over several deceased Swedes.

The cheerleaders stirred school spirit with their float.

"Caution—Bulldogs," warned the sign on the front of the football team's float.

The Women's Athletic Association float, "King's Row," featured Denny Martin on the throne, taking the place of Frank Falcicola, who was riding the football player's float.

Dr. J. Jack Melhorn, president of McPherson College, and Mayor Carlos Crabb of McPherson rode in an open car at the head of the parade.

The housemothers of Bittinger, Dotzour, Kline, Metzler and Fahnestock Halls were also chauffeured along the parade route.

Musical units in the parade included the McPherson High School Marching 100, the band from United School District 419 of Canton, and the McPherson College pep band.

Other units in the parade included the McPherson Saddle Club, new cars supplied by the local dealers, service trucks from the McPherson Light and Power Company and farm equipment with "Bulldogs Feed on Swedes," and other slogans.

An unannounced entry from residents of Fahnestock Hall brought up the last of the parade.

It was an unseaworthy looking craft, towed by a car and escorted by four motorcycles.

"Fantasticks" tryouts set

Tryouts for the musical, "The Fantasticks," will be in Brown Auditorium, Oct. 30 and 31.

This musical, which is still running in New York, will be presented Dec. 7 and 8.

A boy, a girl, two fathers, a narrator, an Indian, and an old actor are the character parts. The play will be staged and directed by Charles Fischer, assistant professor of English and theater.

Donald Frederick, professor of voice and director of choral organizations, will direct the music.

"Play books may be checked from the library until next week. It would be beneficial for students not studying music to check out music and prepare one song before the audition," Prof. Frederick stated.

"In order to produce a musical, the talents of many people must be harmoniously blended," Prof. Fischer stated.

"We have openings for singers, actors, painters, carpenters, electricians, spot operators, costumers, sales persons and make-up artists."

A Cappella, chapel choirs to perform choral works

Two contrasting choral works will be performed by the combined McPherson College A Cappella Choir and Chapel Choir, Saturday, Oct. 21, at 8 p.m. in Brown Auditorium.

Donald R. Frederick, professor of voice and director of choral organizations, will direct the 65 members of the choirs. Jean Hendricks, Donna Brubaker and Kryste Andrews will accompany the works on piano and organ.

"Gloria," written in 1725 by Antonio Vivaldi, will be sung in Latin. Included in the work are duets and arias which will be performed by members of the A Cappella Choir.

"The Beatitudes," by Camil Van Hulse, is a contemporary setting of the scripture from
