Ed. committee studies system

A pass-fail system is being studied by the Educational Policies Committee for possible use at McPherson College.

The proposed plan would allow a student to take a maximum of twelve hours of his college career on a pass-fail basis.

One course a term could be taken in such a manner, and the student would be allowed two weeks at the beginning of the term to decide if he wished to do so.

A grade of pass or fail would be given by the instructor at the term's end and would be recorded on the transcript as such. A passing grade would not be figured in the grade point average, while a failing grade would.

The plan was sent from the Educational Policies Committee to the faculty, where it was approved in principle with details to be worked out.

The committee is studying the plan further, but has given permission to Thomas W. Deal, asstant professor of philosophy and religion to experiment with the pass-fail system in his Contemporary Philosophy class this term.

A possible benefit of the system would be to encourage the student to take courses in a field other than his major in which he has interest without the fear that it would lower his grade point average.

Dr. Merlin Frantz, dean of academic affairs expressed the possibility that the plan would help eliminate the possibility of students "passing up" classes they would enjoy and that would broaden their education.

If the plan received the needed approval, it could be put into effect Fall 1969.

Changes are due

Fri., Feb. 14, is the last day for course changes, according to the registrar's office.

No new courses may be added after that date.

Audit points to MC faults

A group of McPherson College seniors performed on stage Friday night in The Audit.

In addition to displaying their talents, they told, through the medium of commentary and skits, what they feel is wrong with the institution from which most of them will graduate this May.

They pointed to the faults of the administration, the faculty, the students, the maintenance staff, the city in which the College is situated, and all other things that they felt are less than perfect.

So, now that they have voiced their opinions, what does each of them intend to do about the faults?

Perhaps if the members of The Audit cast would spend as much time working toward some improvement rather than standing aside and laughing and criticizing, they might gain the applause which was so obviously lacking Friday night.

On Kans. Campuses

Baker University, Baldwin, has launched a $5 million five year development program, President James E. Doty announced Sunday. The project seeks to raise money for 20 campus improvements and the upgrading of faculty salaries.

Gov. Robert Docking, on hand at the announcement, praised private Kansas colleges and universities which annually educate 14,000 students, saving the taxpayers $20 million.

Edwin Laurence Chalmers Jr. had been named chancellor of the University of Kansas, Lawrence, the Kansas Board of Regents announced Monday.

Chalmers, presently vice president for academic affairs at Florida State University, Tallahassee, will succeed Dr. W. Clarke Wescoe.

At the University of Kansas, this week has been designed the first annual Peace Corps Week. A recruiting team of returned Peace Corps volunteers from Korea, Brazil and Ecuador are on the campus to interest students and explain Corps work.

This week is Black Awareness Week at Kansas State University, Manhattan. Programs and displays on black culture and customs have been planned to bring about understanding and awareness of arising problems.

Business at the Foundation meeting centered around financial reports, solicitation schedules, the annual meeting, membership, by-laws revision and a report of the executive director.

Dr. Melhorn is vice-president of the Foundation.

The Governor's prayer breakfast was held at the Ramada Inn in Topeka. Leaders in the state from all vocations and interests were invited to attend.

Black art, literature and costume will be on display in the Student Union. A "Soul Food" dinner will be served on Friday, and Saturday proceeds from an All-University Afro-Martin Dance will go to the Martin Luther King Scholarship Fund.

The planetarium, on the Hutchinson Junior college campus, presents public programs Thursdays at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 2:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 and 4 p.m. The program will continue until March 2.

Students study and relay news

"Comparing Marburg to McPherson is absolutely impossible," writes Rose Marie Ullom, Wiley, Colo. The McPherson coed is spending her junior year at the University of Marburg in Germany.

Both Miss Ullom and Sigrid Wagner, jr. Wiley, Colo. another McPherson student are taking 15 hours at the University. They first studied six weeks at the language institute and passed the entrance examination.

The McPherson students spent Christmas together in a German home after which they had time to travel. For Miss Wagner, it meant visiting her birthplace, friends and relatives.

Now both are busy writing papers and preparing for the end of their first semester on Feb. 15.

Ornate gold altars, Aztec superstitions, bull fight highlight ACCK religion trip

Ornate gold altars, Indian women in black shawls crawling on their knees to church, the superstitions of the Aztecs, and the vanguard of the Catholic revolution—all exist side by side in the land of contrasts, Mexico.

These are a few of the highlights of a field trip for the Associated Colleges of Central Kansas class, Religions of Latin America, sponsored by Tabor College. It consisted of 24 persons from four of the ACCK schools — McPherson, Tabor, Sterling and Kansas Wesleyan. Rev. Eugene Jansen was the course director and Mrs. Monroe Hughbanks, assistant professor of languages, acted as dean of women.

Mexico City was the first major port of call, and the group spent six days speaking with the leaders of the Protestant and Catholic faiths and seeing such sights as the National Cathedral, the Museum of Anthropology, the Ballet Folklórico (Estético!) and of course, the bull fight.

Their presence in Mexico City was acknowledged by an article in the national newspaper. On the last day in Mexico City, the class visited the ancient Toltec ruins of Teotihuacan, walked the Avenue of the Dead and climbed the 253 steps of the Pyramid of the Sun.

A side trip to Cuernavaca gave them the opportunity to view progressive Catholicism in Mexico. Church services were held in the vernacular and the hymns set to the tune of guitars and bongo drums.

This whole service was unique in that the bishop presided and the laymen participated in the readings.

The next wayside stop was the lake Patzcuaro, famous for its white fish and butterfly boats. A simple boat ride across the lake took the class to a primitive fishing village where Christianity is embraced by less than one fourth of the people.

The Tarazcan villagers watched the tourists with as much curiosity as the tourists watched the villagers.

From the remote Indian village the caravan proceeded to the modern city of Guadalajara with its huge open air market, its glass blowing shops and its Tlaci-Paci pottery.

From Guadalajara they traveled through the mountains and discovered what Balboa discovered so many years ago — the Pacific. The group spent an entire day enjoying the sun and the sea.

Durango, Chihuahua, the Cuahatemoc and the Mennonite colonies—it was here that they were entertained by a group of progressive Mennonites who lived on the fringes of the old Mennonite colonies.

They had traded in their horses and carriages for automobiles and put rubber tires on their tractors.

They were a hospitable people who possessed the qualities of hard work. This was the final stop in Mexico.

The next evening, the group returned to El Paso, U.S.A. There seemed to be a difference. Maybe it was the broad streets and the shine of metal and neon. After three weeks in Mexico, it seemed to the group neither better nor worse, simply different — simply home.

Chapel features communication

Rev. Arlan Claassen, minister of the McPherson First Mennonite Church, will speak in Chapel Tuesday, Feb. 18. His speech, "Words and the Word," deals with communication. A discussion over coffee will follow for those interested.

Representative will discuss overseas work

A representative for International Voluntary Services, Inc., Marcus C. Bordsen, will be on campus Friday, Feb. 14, to discuss opportunities for overseas development work.

Convo speaker initiates study

Dr. Charles Kraft was the scheduled speaker for Convocation today.

Dr. Kraft spoke on the use of language and related topics. He came to McPherson primarily to help initiate studies in languages not commonly taught in college.

Individual students will be given the opportunity to study these languages at their own speed in an independent study program. Textbooks and tapes have been prepared in many of these languages.

Dr. Kraft has spent time in Africa and is particularly versed in Hausa, the trade language of Northern Nigeria.

Foreign students will talk in Convo

The international students of McPherson College will be the main attraction during Convocation on Feb. 20.

The students will give short speeches presenting facts and interesting characteristics of their home countries. These students are: Sielinda Beesk, sp, Germany; Abe Suleman, fr, Tanzania; Constantino Nomikos, fr, Greece.

All international students will be seated on the stage, and introductions will be made.

In addition, entertainment will be provided by various members of this group.

Debate teams are formed

New debate teams are being formed this semester by Charles Fischer, professor of English and theater.

One team consists of Charles Frank, soph, Denville, N. J. and Art Foxall, soph, Stanley, N.Y. Both have had one semester of debate experience. Linda Taplin, soph, Piney Woods, Miss, and Rita DeCoursey, soph, McPherson, comprise the other team.

The first tournament of the semester will be Feb. 21-22 at Southwestern College, Winfield. Both teams will participate.

In the Baker game, McPherson never threatened the Wildcats after they built up a 45-30 lead at half-time. In the last half, each team scored 52 points.

High scorer for the Dogs with 28 points was Jim Mowry. Following him with 24 points was John Smith.

High point man for the Baker game was Lynn Goss and for the Tabor game, Stew Wright.

Students tour mills, labs

Fibers and fabrics captured the interests of 28 ACCK students on the Clothing and Textiles Study Tour.

Mills, factories and research laboratories of the East were visited after the class spent a week studying at Kansas Wesleyan University.

Seven McPherson coeds were participants in the tour.

No cameras were allowed in many factories and trade secrets for special processes were not revealed.

At the Fieldcrest Mills they saw carpets, blankets and sheets being made. A visit to Vogue-Butterick showed the process of pattern-making.

There was time for sightseeing, too. In historic Williamsburg, Va., they saw colonial homes restored and old-fashioned weaving on looms.

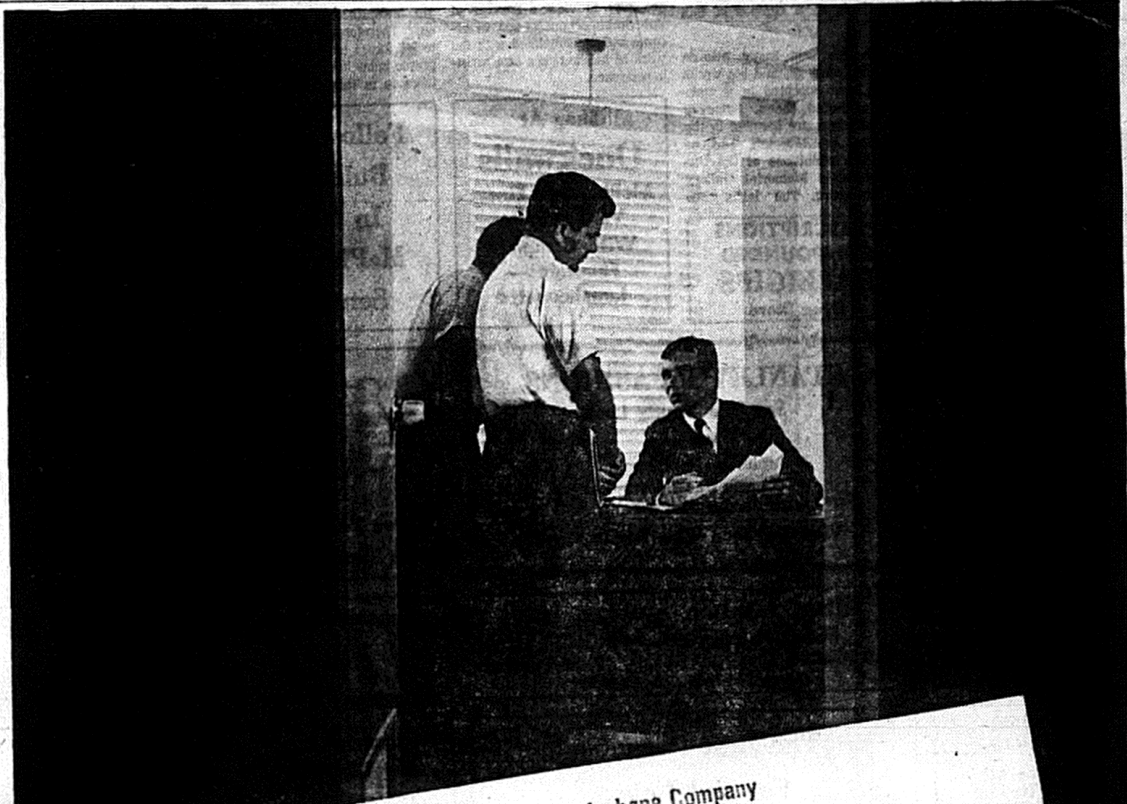

Traditional sights of Washington, D. C., including the national monuments, the White House and the Smithsonian Institute were visited.

It was, in the words of a student, "the chance of a lifetime" for the undergraduate interested in textiles.

Smith's paintings represent various stages in his career

By Claudia Hanson

The current display in Friendship Hall features oil paintings by Bob Smith, artist-in-residence and art instructor here at McPherson College. The paintings represent various periods in his artistic career: some of them were painted much earlier, and some as late as this summer.

Prof. Smith has lived in McPherson all of his life. He first considered a profession in art as a freshman in high school. One of the greatest influences on him was a teacher who was very much interested in art and who encouraged her students to experiment and to achieve as much as they could.

Bob took four years of art in high school and studied at Kansas University during the summers. He also took several extension classes from Kansas State University. Since then, he has studied at Bethany College, KU, Kansas State, and Wichita State University.

Bob often spends his summers outside of Kansas because he likes to vary the environmental factors, which he believes greatly affect creative interpretation.

One summer he toured Mexico; another was spent in Arizona. Last summer he took private lessons in Florence, Italy under Primo Conti, an artist-in-residence at the Fine Arts Academy there. This was a valuable experience; he spent much of his time "finding new concepts in the medium of painting."

Bob's specialty is oil painting, but he is also interested in ceramics, sculpture, and drawing, and he teaches all of them at the College.

He says he chose to teach at McPherson because, "I appreciate the presence of unity that one finds on a campus of this size."

Bob has won many awards for his paintings, and his works have been accepted in a number of juried shows. Some of his paintings are hanging in the Wichita Art Museum, and he has had exhibitions at the Birger Sandzen Memorial Gallery in Lindsborg. The latter has three of his paintings at the present time.

No doubt, everyone is familiar with at least one of Bob's paintings — "Canyon de Chelly," which hangs on the east wall of the cafeteria in the Student Union.

The display in Friendship Hall offers students an excellent opportunity to view a number of Bob Smith originals, and to become better acquainted with the work of McPherson's own artist-in-residence.

Class visits trade market

Nineteen Associated Colleges of Central Kansas students stepped through the doors of the American Stock Exchange and got an insight into the operations of the trading market.

The students were members of the investments class offered during interterm and the visit to Wall Street was made during a three day tour of New York's financial institutions.

The tour of the stock exchange began as a guide traced the history of the market from trading on the outdoor curb market in the late 1800s until the international securities market of today.

Sponsors book fair

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom is sponsoring an Afro-American Book Fair in Friendship Hall, Feb. 19-20, 7-9 p.m.

The books on display will represent a wide range of material at both adult's and children's level.

Mrs. Byron Moore, chairman of the book fair committee stated, "The best way to help in race relations is to help people understand what is going on." Therefore, this project is to let future teachers and other people know how much material there is in this area.

Party offers German flavor

Come to the Faschingsfest, a German carnival costume party to be held at 8 p.m. Feb. 15, in the Melhorn's basement, 1000 E. Euclid.

the Stammtisch, or German table.

German stories, tapes and songs as well as other aspects of German life are presented.

The Stammtisch was organized by McPherson by Sieglinde Beesk, exchange student from Germany.

At the university in Germany each department has its own table for discussion.

On Monday several McPherson students went to see "Der Zerbrochene Krug," a German play by Lustspiel, at Wichita State University.

The play, meaning in English "The Broken Jug," was presented by a company of actors on tour from Germany. The entire performance was in German.
