

Anthropology chair endowed

Leland J. Abel, an alumnus of McPherson College, recently entered into a $150,000 Charitable Remainder Unitrust Agreement in favor of the College, making possible the first endowed chair in the history of the College. In addition to the trust, Abel gave approximately 4,000 books in anthropology and archaeology to Miller Library and his entire art collection to the McPherson Museum.

The McPherson Museum and the Maxwell Museum of the University of New Mexico will share in his collection of approximately 11,000 artifacts. The Unitrust, art collection, library books and artifacts combine to make his gifts total more than $400,000.

Under the terms of the trust, Mr. Abel will receive the income from the trust during his lifetime, then the income will be used to pay the salary for a full-time professor in anthropology and related subjects. Because the trust will be appraised annually, the income will normally provide for increased income each year for the donor.

Born in McPherson, Mr. Abel received both a B.S. and a B.A.

from McPherson College and his Master's degree from the University of New Mexico. He has been employed by the National Park Service as an archaeologist since 1950. He has spent his entire life supervising excavation sites in national parks throughout the United States and has designed and planned many national park museums, including those at Grand Canyon National Park, the Petrified Forest and Craters of the Moon. He has also published numerous articles about archaeology in professional journals.

Sweethearts to rock out

Dance to the music of Pagan Ballet, a hard rock group from Salina, at the annual Sweetheart Dance tomorrow night. Sponsored by the Social Committee, the dance will be held in the Student Union from 10 til 1 a.m. The theme of the dance is "Love Is," admission is just $1.00, dress is casual, and refreshments will be served.

Hiking trip planned for spring break

by Lynn Willoughby

Are you tired of the struggle to get up every morning and go to classes? Would you like to just get away from it all for awhile and refresh your spirit and mind? Then backpacking into the Grand Canyon might be just the refresher you need.

Mike Fox, professor of Physics and the originator and organizer of the trip, plans to leave after classes March 23, and arrive at the Grand Canyon the following night. After five days of hiking, exploring and relaxation, all will return to the college on Saturday, March 31. Travel will be by private automobiles.

The only necessities, besides a yearning for adventure are a lightweight pack, a sleeping bag, good hiking shoes and a total of $60 for food and transportation expenses. Because hiking is very rigorous, anyone interested in the trip should be in good physical condition.

Mike Fox is available to answer further questions about the trip and can be found during class periods at Harnly Hall.

Snell vetoes increase

by Nazir Zahra

The McPherson College Community Council in its meeting of December 14 resolved to increase dorm visitation hours after a lengthy discussion. The action was taken based on a survey conducted amongst 82 per cent of the college student body. The results indicated that 80 per cent of the students polled favored increasing the dorm visitation hours.

Dr. Galen Snell, college president and chairman of MCCC, having the prerogative of veto powers issued a veto statement last month on the action taken by MCCC. In the statement, Dr. Snell explained his reasons for the veto to the MCCC and the college community.

In his statement Dr. Snell states, "I do not see McPherson College as a 'defender of the faith' college. Intellectual freedom must be maintained here. Yet, even in this freedom, responsibilities are upon all of us." He stresses that the college does not wish to restrain individuals to a particular behavior patterns but at the same time, restraint must be applied upon the community as a whole to protect the minority of people who do not wish an increase in visitation. Snell is also concerned for the wishes of college benefactors and his own aspirations for the direction the college will take in the future.

Snell further states that "Mac College is a college that stands in its Christian tradition" and believes that Mac can be a "greater learning experience for a living in our world than is a condition of complete freedom." "It is this important fact," states Snell, "that will be one of the hallmarks of our difference from other educational institutions."

Seventy McPherson businessmen, hosted seventy McPherson and Central College students to a catered dinner in Mac's dining hall last Wednesday evening. The event was a co-operative effort between the student councils of both schools and the McPherson Chamber of Commerce to promote better relations between the town and the colleges.

MCCC creates unity committee

by Rod Neher

A comparatively calm atmosphere prevailed at the McPherson College Community Council meeting Thursday in contrast to the fiery argument over increased dorm visitation hours that dominated the MCCC assembly of December 14, 1972.

In addition to deciding on certain procedural matters, the council voted to have its chairman, Dr. Galen Snell, appoint a committee to study methods of developing a more positive "community feeling" at McPherson College. In response to concern over military recruitment on campus, the council drew up and placed on first reading a resolution designed to "respectfully discourage" military recruiters from recruiting on the McPherson College campus.

Discussion about the McPherson College community was largely triggered by a statement submitted to the MCCC by Mike Statler, fr., York, Pa., who co-sponsored the resolution requesting an increase in the number of dorm visitation hours that was recently passed by the council but vetoed by Dr. Snell.

Statler denounced MCCC as "a farce in that its chairman has absolute power." He asserted that "MCCC, as it is presently set up, is nothing more than an advisory committee to its chairman; the chairman can use it (MCCC) as a rubber stamp or ignore it."

Although a few student representatives on the council expressed reserved agreement with Mike's stand it was generally rejected. The point was made that though bills passed by the MCCC were subject to presidential veto, the council had the power to vote down policy changes.

Additional discussion led the council to conclude that much of the dissatisfaction on campus can be attributed to a lack of "oneness" among students, faculty, and administration. It was under these circumstances that the committee was created.

The committee appointed last December to study military recruitment on campus reported that if branches of the military were banned from recruiting on McPherson College campus, students attending this college would become ineligible for National Defense Loans, which are presently held by a large number of students.

In light of this report the council voted to place on first reading a resolution confirming military recruiters to the placement office. In response to recruiters' requests, the placement director is to indicate the Church of the Brethren's position on war and recruitment practices and inform them that though not banned, they are "respectfully discouraged" from coming on campus.

Dr. Snell continues to be open to discussion about his actions and those of MCCC. "Life is built on the basis of dealing with conflict," he has stated.

He feels that he has the support of the faculty and the majority of the student's parents. His veto of the extended visitation hours is in his view a stand the college needed to take on Christian values.

Students need change of view

America is looking up!

At last the eleven years of conflict in Southeast Asia seem to be coming to an end. There is a new hope rising that our country may again be the "home of the free" with "liberty and justice for all."

Across the nation the protest marches have ceased, and the outcries against the war no longer rumble. Our viewpoints now need to be changed from one of being "against" the war to one of being "for" the rebuilding of America.

Youth in this country have massive amounts of energy and drive, which was previously used to point up the faults of an unjust, undeclared war. Now that our goal is accomplished, can we turn our energies into avenues that will build up rather than tear down?

It is time to change priorities and to change the very way we think. We can still be against social injustice, prejudice and crime but the big evil has been eliminated. It is time to switch gears.

Maybe it is time to switch gears at Mac also. The open dorm request is no longer the burning issue it was last semester. There seems to be no chance of acquiring more open dorms in the near future so why beat your head upon a brick wall?

I am not suggesting that students give up their goals but let us learn to live as best we can with the reality that we face. Instead of using MCCC as a battle ground for students vs. administration, lets make it work for us. If we can stop fighting and start cooperating maybe MCCC won't be a "farce".

As America begins to pick herself up from the disgrace and frustration of years of bitter war, and begins the search for new ideals what will be our response at Mac? Will we be freed to search for brighter horizons or are we stuck in the mud of fault-finding.

Adventures abroad

Editor's Note:

McPherson co-ed, Judy Harbaugh, a Spanish major, is spending her junior year abroad in Barcelona, Spain. Here she shares with the McPherson College community some of her adventures and anecdotes.

Dear Friends at Mac,

Besides spending Christmas in Spain, I also spent Christmas in England. My roommate and I flew up to London Dec. 20 and toured Great Britain for two weeks, flying back to Barcelona Jan. 4th. Coincidentally we spent New Year's day in Scotland.

The Scots celebrate New Year's eve by drinking as much as possible and then all gathering near midnight at a central spot. We were in Glasgow that evening so we found the "central spot" (St. George's Square) and soon, what should we hear in the distance but a bagpipe. Many people began dancing around the musician.

I have never seen so many people drunk before in one place. Another custom is that after 12 al the guys try to kiss as many girls as possible. Well, after I found that out... After that party is over, everyone extends open-house invitations which are called "first footie." Parties keep going in some places for days.

Now I am back in Barcelona, basking in the winter sun. During the month of January the stores are having sales. In the better stores police stand on guard because some of the women get a bit too shovey. Outside some stores there are long lines of people waiting to file in to make their bargain purchases.

I've really been enjoying my stay in Barcelona this year. I've made a lot of new friends, Spanish and American, and when the time comes to leave, it'll be difficult. I do look forward to all the conveniences of the States though. I wish everyone at Mac the best of luck in this new year of 1973.

Adios,
Judy Harbaugh

Mac unique; 'the place to be'

Dear Editor,

Because I have just returned from spending Interterm on another ACCK campus, I thought I'd take this opportunity to reflect and share some of my experiences.

During Interterm, I was a student at Kansas Wesleyan University at Salina and I took "Ecology and Personal Life Styles," which was taught by Dr. D. Wayne Montgomery, Assistant Professor of Religion.

In various ways there were many similarities between McPherson and Kansas Wesleyan, such as conflicts and struggles among students, faculty, and administration; financial difficulties of the institution; students feeling that they didn't have enough freedom; students asking themselves what they are doing at this "God-forsaken place"; that the food stinks; that there isn't anything to do on campus or in town; every other word in the dorm and the dining room being an obscenity; the boys griping that there aren't any good-looking girls on campus, and a lot of other petty nonsense (i.e., it is nonsense because every girl is pretty in her own special way.)

By visiting another campus, one finds that McPherson has a uniqueness of its own, and that it has a lot to be proud of. One may fail to appreciate the various qualities of McPherson College and the many things that are taken for granted here on campus until one is without them. In my opinion, McPherson has a lot to offer (besides being several hundred dollars less expensive than K.W.U.), and Mac is still "the place to be".

Peace,
Verlin A. Ingram

Replies to veto

A number of students are unhappy about the veto of the open dorm hours proposal. Protesting the veto would be a valid gesture, but it leaves untouched the large questions behind the veto.

According to the president, the purpose for the veto of the open hours proposal was to demonstrate the stand of the school for Christian ethics. The adoption of an "open doors" rule during open dorms is also part of this stand, supposedly to help students internalize the Christian ethic.

"Internalization" is the process by which a child unthinkingly absorbs the moral standards of the adults and peers surrounding him. Later morality is founded partly upon what is internalized but mainly upon moral decisions. These decisions are made using experience, new information and rational thought. Strict rules are not internalized unthinkingly at college age.

Would it not be better to provide the opportunity for decision making in an atmosphere that promotes the Christian ethic with positive encouragement rather than enforcing it with negative regulations? Encouragement strengthens the spirit while regulation weakens it with fear and guilt.

Man does not grow by regulation which constricts from without, but by grace and encouragement which expand from within. Therein lies the heart and soul of the Christian ethic.

Take Five

Take one

Seems like you have to be a duck to live in Kansas, which may explain why there are so many "quacks" around here.

Take two

A resident of Dotzour Hall recently swallowed her contact lens and now has 20-20 vision in her belly button!

Take three

Seems strange that a group of McPherson students could be left unsupervised in a foreign country but now can't be trusted with a member of the opposite sex in their dorm room.

Take four

Only 40 more days until spring is officially ushered in. Sure hope the weather complies!

Take five.

Interterm's end brought Fanny guys out looking like "greasers". Here they pose with a couple of Dotzour "chicks" at the 50's dance held January 26 in the Student Union.

Reading skills class offered

A free reading class now being offered on the McPherson College campus is designed to improve each student's vocabulary, reading rate, comprehension, concentration, and other study problems.

Mrs. Nancy Shelton is directing the classes, which will be held at two different times during the week. Students may attend either Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:30 p.m., or Mondays and Thursdays at 2:00 p.m. The first class, last Monday night had approximately 15 students attending.

Each class period will be only an hour long. Mrs. Shelton has found that the success of the class depends almost entirely upon the regular attendance of the class.

Diagnostic testing will be necessary to find each student's level. This will be followed by exercises to improve the area or areas of weakness in the individual's study skills. The learned materials then will be practiced on assigned reading material in other classes.

There should be no cost involved with the course, with the exception of a paperback. Enrollment for this course can still be made at the Registrar's Office by filling out an Add Slip with an adviser's signature. One hour of credit will be given to each student taking the course.

Mac's new registrar, Mrs. Corinne Hughbanks, announced that the spring semester enrollment at Mac has dropped to 477 from the fall enrollment of 516. However, says Mrs. Hughbanks, this rate of attrition is not unusual. In fact, she terms it "encouraging." In years past the drop between semesters has been 50 to 60 students.

Directors cast spring plays

"The Amorous Flea," a musical comedy based on Moliere's "School for Wives" was cast last Monday night in the Little Theatre. The script for "The Amorous Flea" is by Jerry Devine and music and lyrics are by Bruce Montgomery.

Directed by Mari Eggemeyer, "The Amorous Flea" is about a pompous old man who falls in love with a four year old girl. Arnolphe put the girl in a convent and gave her to the nuns to bring up making her a maid of total innocence, a perfect wife, molded, step by step by him. The rest of the action develops from this point with many, many laughs!

People chosen for the company were picked from a group of energetic theatre veterans and a few new students who all presented a musical audition and read at tryouts.

Members of the cast include: Arnolphe, Michael Irwin; Chrysdale, Devin Scott; Alain, Steven

J. McCadney; Georgette, Dee Dee Yoder; Agnes, Karlene Morphew; Horace, Dan Sheets; Oronte, Keith Starry; Entique, Roger Helstern. Carol Kussart is stage manager for the production.

On February 21 and 22 at 7 p.m. there will be three student directed one-act plays given in the Little Theatre. The student directors are members of a theatre class. Their productions are steered toward giving them experience in directing.

Judy Kimmel will direct "The Dear Departed," a play about a dead man who at the end of the play turns out to be very much alive.

Theresa Knoll will direct

"Ledge, Ledger, and the Ledger" which deals with some of the problems a person may face in trying to commit suicide.

Members of the cast include: Pete, Mike Irwin; J. M., Lynn Marcuson; P. J., Rick Tyler.

Reminiscing about "Gloria Mundi," director Janet Wiggins stated that "the play makes me wonder about myself sometimes." "Gloria Mundi" is about a young nurse in an insane asylum!

Where are nearly half Fahnestock Hall's residents hiding? Why are the other residents being shunned and avoided?

Well, the London Flu has taken over the dormitory, bringing nausea, chills, and fever.

In the meantime, the campus is quiet, and worried. Will those in Fahnestock share the flu with the rest of us?

'Dogs edge Cavaliers

The Bulldogs' Larry Doll makes a last-second jump shot as Mac defeated Tabor 69-67 in the January 25th game.

The McPherson College basketball team edged out another victory last Saturday night over St. Mary's of the Plains, 82-77. The Cavaliers took the lead 15-13 at eight minutes into the first half.

Playing perhaps their best defensive game of this year, the Bulldogs stayed close the entire first half and trailed by one point, 38-39, at half-time. Unlike previous occasions, the defense held strong during the second half, limiting St. Mary's to 38 points in the last 20 minutes, while the Bulldogs pumped in 44 points to provide the winning margin.

The lead changed hands many times early in the second half until Mac spurted out to a 44-43 lead, one which lasted until the six-minute mark, when St. Mary's regained the lead. It was touch and go the rest of the way, and with a 78-77 lead and nine seconds left, the Bulldogs committed a foul, sending the seemingly confident Cavaliers to the foul line with a one-and-one situation.

The free-throw bounced off the rim into the hands of Russell Clifton, and the Cavaliers were forced to foul twice in the ensuing nine seconds. However, the effort was in vain, as McPherson dropped in four free tosses in as many attempts.

Leading scorers for Mac were Russell Clifton with 24 points, Don Cameron with 15 points, and Larry Doll and Tom Schulte with 11 points each.

The Bulldogs record in the KCAC now stands at 5-5 with a 6-10 overall record.

Jan. games close

by Steve Burkholder

The Varsity basketball team's season record now stands at 6-10. Since the last issue of the Spectator, Don Widrig's Bulldogs have compiled a 5-6 record. Nine games have been either won or lost in the last minute of play so far this year. Two of these games have been decided in double overtimes.

The conference race is turning into another wild finish this year. Until recently Southwestern was in undisputed first place with an unblemished record. The Moundbuilders were defeated by Friends and Bethel last week however. Now Bethel is leading the league with one loss.

Although it is now a clear-cut race between Bethel and Southwestern for the title, things get hairy among the rest of the conference teams. Our own Bulldogs have a good shot at third place if they can win their last six KCAC games. However, they will face other top teams in the conference, so look for an exciting finish by the Bulldogs.

The Junior Varsity's record is now 6-4 following consecutive wins over Sterling and St. Mary's of the Plains. B-team mentor George Hardeson is giving lots of players valuable experience on this year's JV-edition. Gregg Stockstill is pacing the JV's in scoring thus far. Following his 31 point outburst against St. Mary's, Greg is averaging 14 points per contest. Ed Rogers is averaging 8.4.

Girls take trophies

by Joyce Betzen

Mac's girls' basketball team, under the direction of coach Doris Coppock, has been on the go during interterm and there's still a lot more "go power" left.

After starting out the season slowly with two losses to Sterling, (33-32, and 43-40) the team picked up and showed their power by defeating Kansas Wesleyan twice by scores of 47-27 and 53-22.

The girls then traveled to Arkansas City for a tournament. After winning two games, they defeated Cowley County in the finals by 51-32 to take home the first place trophies.

The team faced K-State Jan. 23 and were beaten by a score of 42-37. Tabor defeated the girls on Jan. 25 with a score of 35-27.

In their eighth match, Feb. 3, the team worked together to trample Bethany scoring 43 points to Bethany's 26. The girls played Tabor here last Tuesday and tonight they will take on Bethany here at 7 p.m.

The over all team record now stands at 6-4.
