

Steve Guyer, Abe Suleman, Susan Blough, and Mike Nokela, members of Phi Zappa Krappa and winners of the College Bowl, discuss a question in last Saturday's competition. They will go on to meet the winners from other ACCK schools in another "Bowl Game" this weekend.

Mac retains Ag. major

The future of the agriculture department at McPherson College was determined Saturday, February 17 when the Educational Policies Committee met with the Education Committee of the McPherson College Board of Trustees.

The committees decided that the agriculture department should definitely remain a part of McPherson College, and plans are being made to revitalize the department. A new professor will be hired to replace Dr. Scott Boyce, head of the agriculture department, who is leaving McPherson College to pursue post-doctoral work.

Because there are many opportunities in agriculturally related fields, the committees resolved that a strong agriculture department would attract students interested in this vocational area.

Reports from all other academic divisions of the college were heard and reviewed at the meeting. The development of the Department of Behavioral Sciences was also discussed. It is hoped that this change in departmental structure and majors will benefit the student both in acquiring a job and in graduate school.

Ed Goering, jr., Nampa, Idaho, student member of EPC, commented that one of the more important aspects of the meeting did not deal specifically with education policies.

"In the course of the meeting, Dr. Snell, president of McPherson College, announced that during the month of March, he would try to meet with students in each of the dormitories to answer any questions or clarify any confusion in students' minds," said Goering.

Regional Youth Conference to host 250 senior highs

An estimated 250 senior highs will be attending the Brethren Youth Conference here on campus March 17-19. The conference will be conducted by McPherson College students and administrators. Co-chairmen this year are Rick Tyler and Dave Wine.

Assisting in the conference will be Anna Mow, a teacher and an author from Virginia. Because of her gifted ability to communicate her faith, Mrs. Mow was chosen to be the main speaker of the conference. Sidney Adams, a gospel soul singer from Denver, will also be working with the conference committee.

The committee has several activities planned for the group which will express the theme of the conference: "Everybody is a Part." Activities will begin Friday night with "The Amorous Flea", and end with a Sunday morning communion service in Brown Auditorium. Other activities include buzz group sessions, and a banquet Saturday night followed by a square dance.

Rick feels that the conference will be more relaxed than last year's, giving the youth more free time.

The conference committee is requesting help from other McPherson students. Anyone interested may contact the committee chairmen, or Jim Tomlinson, faculty advisor.

Veteran cast to present musical

by Lynn Willoughby

What happens when an old man falls in love with a young girl, too young to marry? He puts her away of course. But between the years and the altar much can happen.

The musical comedy "The Amorous Flea" will be presented March 16 and 17. Based on Moliere's "School for Wives" which takes place in 17th Century France, the comedy is the story of a young girl locked away in a convent to be brought up in complete innocence.

After reading many musicals during the summer months Mari Eggemeyer, director for the production chose "The Amorous Flea" because it was so "Different from the others, like "The Sound of Music", which have been popular on many stages.

The cast for the play includes persons who have starred in and/or directed other plays in the past. Karlene Morphew and Keith Starry, taking the parts of Agnes and Orontes, starred together in "Barefoot in the Park" and "Cactus Flower." Karlene also had the leading role in "Once Upon a Playground." Keith, president of Alpha Psi Omega, starred in "A Midsummer's Night Dream," and directed a one-act play earlier this year.

Rick Tyler and Mike Irwin are well known to McPherson audiences as directors and actors. Rick will portray Enrique, and Mike will star as Adolphe.

Alain will be portrayed by Steven McCadney, who wrote, directed, and starred in "So I Can Start My Second Life." Dee Dee Yoder, appearing as Georgette, has also had parts in three productions.

Roger Helstern and Dan Sheets, appearing as Chrysalde and Horace, have also had stage experience, rounding out what should appear a well versed cast.

Committee plans spring fling

"The next three months will be busy ones," commented Beckie Wagner, assistant adviser to the Social Committee. The Social Committee met Tuesday, February 20 in the quiet room of the Student Union to discuss upcoming social events and activities.

Saturday, the ACCK College

Bowl Playoffs will be held in Brown Auditorium, with teams from all ACCK schools competing.

Dotzour Hall's All Night Hop Party, the first one of its kind on campus, will be held Friday, March 9 and will extend into the morning hours of March 10.

Although all plans for the party have not been confirmed, activities to be included are swimming, roller skating, bowling, a movie and breakfast.

Tentatively, special arrangements will be made with the YMCA and the bowling alley to accommodate students at unusual hours of the day.

An early morning breakfast, served around 5:00 a. m. will culminate the all night hop party.

The ACCK is presenting a free concert on the McPherson College campus March 13. A folksinger will perform in Brown Auditorium.

Following spring break, a square dance and a week entitled "Spring Fling" are scheduled. The dance is slated for April 14 from 8 to 12 p. m. "Spring Fling" week, May 6-12, includes All Schools Day, movies, a dance, and other undetermined activities.

Social Committee meetings are open to everyone and are held each Tuesday evening at 9:30 p. m. in the quiet room of the Student Union.

MCY adopts grandparents

By Barb Moore

Have you ever considered an adoption? No, not babies, but grandparents! McPherson Christian Youth Club members have realized that in our youth orientated society the old are often forgotten. MCY is starting an adoptive grandparent program at The Cedars, the Brethren Custodial and Nursing Home located on Kansas Ave.

The club is trying to interest students to spend at least an hour a week with a Cedar's resident - talking, writing letters, walking, or playing cards. Those interested in this adoptive grandparent program, may contact Diane Frantz, in Dotzour, or Dennis Shrock in Fahnestock.

Students collect over $1500 in Sun. Heart Fund drive

by Rod Neher

In spite of a rather chilly gray day, approximately seventy-five students turned out to participate in the Student Council sponsored Heart Fund drive last Sunday afternoon. McPherson College students were responsible for canvassing the entire city of McPherson, and the Student Council wishes to express its appreciation to all students who participated.

Patty Wood, soph. Shelocta, Pa., chairman of the college's Heart Fund drive and John Hurley, sr., Washington D. C., Stucco president, spent time Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of last week soliciting $259 in contributions from the various businesses in the community.

On Sunday fifteen small groups ranging in size from three to ten members and headed by a Student Council member combed the residential areas of town, going from door to door asking for contributions.

This method collected $1,327.35, bringing the total to $1,586.35. The council hopes that donations mailed to the college by residents who were not at home that afternoon will increase the sum to its goal of $2,000.

The Heart Fund drive is an annual project of the Student Council and proceeds are given to fighting heart disease.

Seat of power is recognized

President Snell contends that being directly responsible to the Board of Trustees, he merely carries out their wishes. However, it needs to be pointed out that Dr. Snell has never met with the entire board. Thus far he has only met with the executive committee — six members of the 34 member board.

It is rumored that not all of the board members agree with the direction that McPherson College has leaned since the arrival of our new president. Trustees are coming with questions and most will be very much interested in what students have to say concerning McPherson College.

In opening the three meetings today to the entire college community, the trustees are extending an invitation for students and others to speak their piece. Students who expect to bring about great changes at these meetings may be disillusioned, but the full impact of the meeting may not be felt right away.

No matter how much weight trustees place on student opinion, it is highly doubtful that they will openly criticize current policies of the college. It would appear awkward for the board to dismiss or curtail the activities of a president after his first year. Chances are that the board will endorse the president and his program giving him a chance to prove himself.

Nevertheless, the meetings today are important. Trustees may be more open to student opinion now than ever before. We have been reminded often enough that the seat of power at Mac college lies with the Board of Trustees. Students are waking up to this fact, and reportedly, some of the faculty members are frightened.

If students can speak out logically and intelligently before trustees today it may not produce an automatic shift in policy, but it may pay off in the long run. At the least it is a chance to confront the power structure where decisions about the college can't be pushed off on another governing body.

Students show immaturity at games and in cafeteria

Dear Editor,

I find the actions of some of the spectators at the men's basketball games very upsetting. To be a referee is not an easy job, and when the spectators start insulting the referees and their judgment, naturally they are going to turn their judgments against the team. I feel it is a display of poor sportsmanship and a disgrace to McPherson College.

Another item that concerns me is the lack of respect for others that is displayed by some who insist upon going back for thirds, fourths, and fifths in the cafeteria. Food contracts only pay for seconds, and by these people lying to the server and getting thirds, fourths, and fifths they are only increasing the cost to all the students. I suppose what bothers me most is that these people lie to the servers, and they are only doing their job as the boss told them.

Sincerely,
Mary Lou Peterson

Sunny spring stalls studies

by Lynn Willoughby

What comes once a year, challenges the self-control of even the best of students, causes the campus to run wild, and cannot be stopped by anyone? Spring fever with its cotton clouds, sweet music, and warmth. Taking a walk, biking, jogging, and playing ball with friends are so enticing in the warm weather.

When the blue sky and warm weather become unbearable, one can crawl in the closet, close the door, and in the dark recite "I will not give in to Spring." Playing Christmas carols with the blinds down might also help.

But, for those who want to keep their cake and eat it too, studying in the shade of a large tree might satisfy the head and heart.

One-Act critique

Plays vary in quality

by Lynn Willoughby

With the room packed full of eager persons, the three one-act plays directed by McPherson College students repeated their performance last Friday night. Janet Wiggins directed the first, "Gloria Mundi," followed by "Dear Departed" directed by Judy Kimmel, and "Ledge, Ledger, and the Legend," directed by Teresa Knoll. "Gloria Mundi" missed the pitcher's throw completely. The supposed tragedy of a young girl turned insane by the "Insane" staff of a mental institution received chuckles, and even laughs, and Judy Bowman's emissions of fright and terror, accompanied by smiles, exploded unnaturally. The play lacked build-up and suspense. The only way the audience seemed to respond to the chaotic message was to laugh.

The cast knew their lines, but the play as a whole had an unrehearsed air, as if the cast was unsure of who was next to speak. Periods of time could be detected where no one moved or uttered a word.

Adequate props were available for the play, however, they were nearly a waste since the message of the play was missed completely.

"The Dear Departed" connected with the ball. A more easily understood plot, accompanied by well delivered lines, brought forth the correct audience response, especially Gayle Appel's expression of fright when "Grandpa got up."

Suspense helped keep the ball rolling and the play never stood still. Dee Dee Yoder, Russ Hunt, Jean Walters, and Brent Peterson all did a fine job of acting, but it was Rod Neher's appearance that had the audience almost doubled in laughter. The play was a hard line drive, and appeared as a result of much practice.

Not only did "Ledge, Ledger, and the Legend," strike the ball, it was a home run. Lynn Marcuson's magnificent performance was equal only to that of Rick Tyler.

Sans the Bar

If you would come and go away with me
To that fair land where laws are obsolete —
That land where purposes are so complete
No rules support the massed society.
We would then steal down paths so heavenly
To that strange nook where fondest lovers meet,
And there, with burning passions' glowing heat,
We would explore wild love's dark mystery.
And I would hold you in my yearning arms,
And then, while looking deep into your eyes,
I would, with whispered words about your charms . . .
But all my whispers would be empty lies,
And fond caresses naught but false alarms,
For sans control, true love forever dies.

Prof. refutes doom prophets

In view of the recent character assassination of Dr. Galen Snell because of his firm stand on the open dorm policy and in view of the continued malignment of McPherson College by Doomsday Prophets who do not believe that the college can possibly survive without granting them 39 hours per week in the bedroom of the opposite sex, I would like to remind them that this college will indeed continue to survive because men and women have dedicated themselves to that task for over 85 years and have sacrificially given of their money, their service and their time to aid the on-going of the college.

There is scarcely a faculty member on the present staff that has not received lucrative offers to go to State institutions of higher learning to teach. Why have they preferred to remain here? Basically, because McPherson College is a church-related college.

Some of us on the faculty are not Brethren, yet we, too, have caught the vision and the thrill of working for a church-related institution which takes a deep interest in human values, moral standards, ethical behavior and responsible living in addition to the academic achievement of its students. For those of us who have experienced teaching at state supported institutions there is no comparison between the atmosphere of such campuses and the campuses of church-related colleges.

McPherson faculty and members stay on here because they respect and highly esteem one another not only professionally for academic achievements but also for the many contributions to the betterment of the community in which they live.

Somehow, I believe that many students also stay here for the very same reasons that we do. Although many are not Brethren, they still believe in high ideals. They also prefer to associate with fellow Christians during the years of their educational pursuits. They enjoy the uniqueness of a small institution which offers them service and leadership opportunities. They can dialog with professors who not only care about them but also about what happens.

Before maliciously attacking the ideals that a church related college upholds, one might carefully consider the message of this anonymous poem:

BUILDERS

I watched them tear a building down
A gang of men in a busy town
With a "Ho, heave, ho," I heard them yell.
They swung the boom and the building fell.
I asked the foreman, "Are these men skilled
As men you would hire if you planned to build?"
He laughed and said, "Why, no indeed
Just common labor is all I need.
I can easily wreck in a day or two
What builders, have taken years to do."
I said to myself as I went my way,
"Which of these roles have I tried to play?
Am I a builder who works with care
Planning the future by the rule and square?
Am I shaping my life by a well-laid plan
Patiently doing the best I can?
Or am I a wrecker walking the town
Content with the labour of tearing down?"

Track coach arrives well versed

by Steve Burkholder

Ask a track man who Don Rominger is and he'll probably reply that he's the new track coach who likes short hair. Besides that, Don Rominger is the new admissions counselor at Mac College.

Rominger, an Oklahoma native, is primarily interested in teaching and coaching. He came to McPherson College second semester after devoting the last year and a half toward work on his doctor's degree.

The field of counseling is not new to him, as Rominger was the counselor for the athletic dorm at Northeastern A & M Junior College two of his three years there, and stated, "I like to visit with people in general."

In his three years at Northeastern A & M, his track squads finished in the top ten in the nation twice, placing second one year. Rominger has coached some well known athletes including Steve Owens. Speaking of Owens, Rominger remarked, "I will probably never be associated with another athlete like him. He almost single-handedly won the State Track Meet for me his senior year. I think he could possibly have been an Olympic decathlon champion."

After graduating from Oklahoma Baptist University, Don took a teaching position in a two-room schoolhouse just west of his hometown, Tecumseh. There, he taught all subjects to four different grade levels, coached all sports and drove the schoolbus. When asked if he also swept out the gym after basketball games, he explained that they played outdoors on a dirt surface. He commented that one of the hardest things he had to teach his boys was how to gauge shots in the wind.

Coach Rominger knows about athletics from personal experience as he participated in football, basketball and track at Tecumseh High School. In college, he was on the football and cross country teams. The new track mentor claims that he was a terrible track man, being too slow for a sprinter and even too slow for long distance — although that was his specialty.

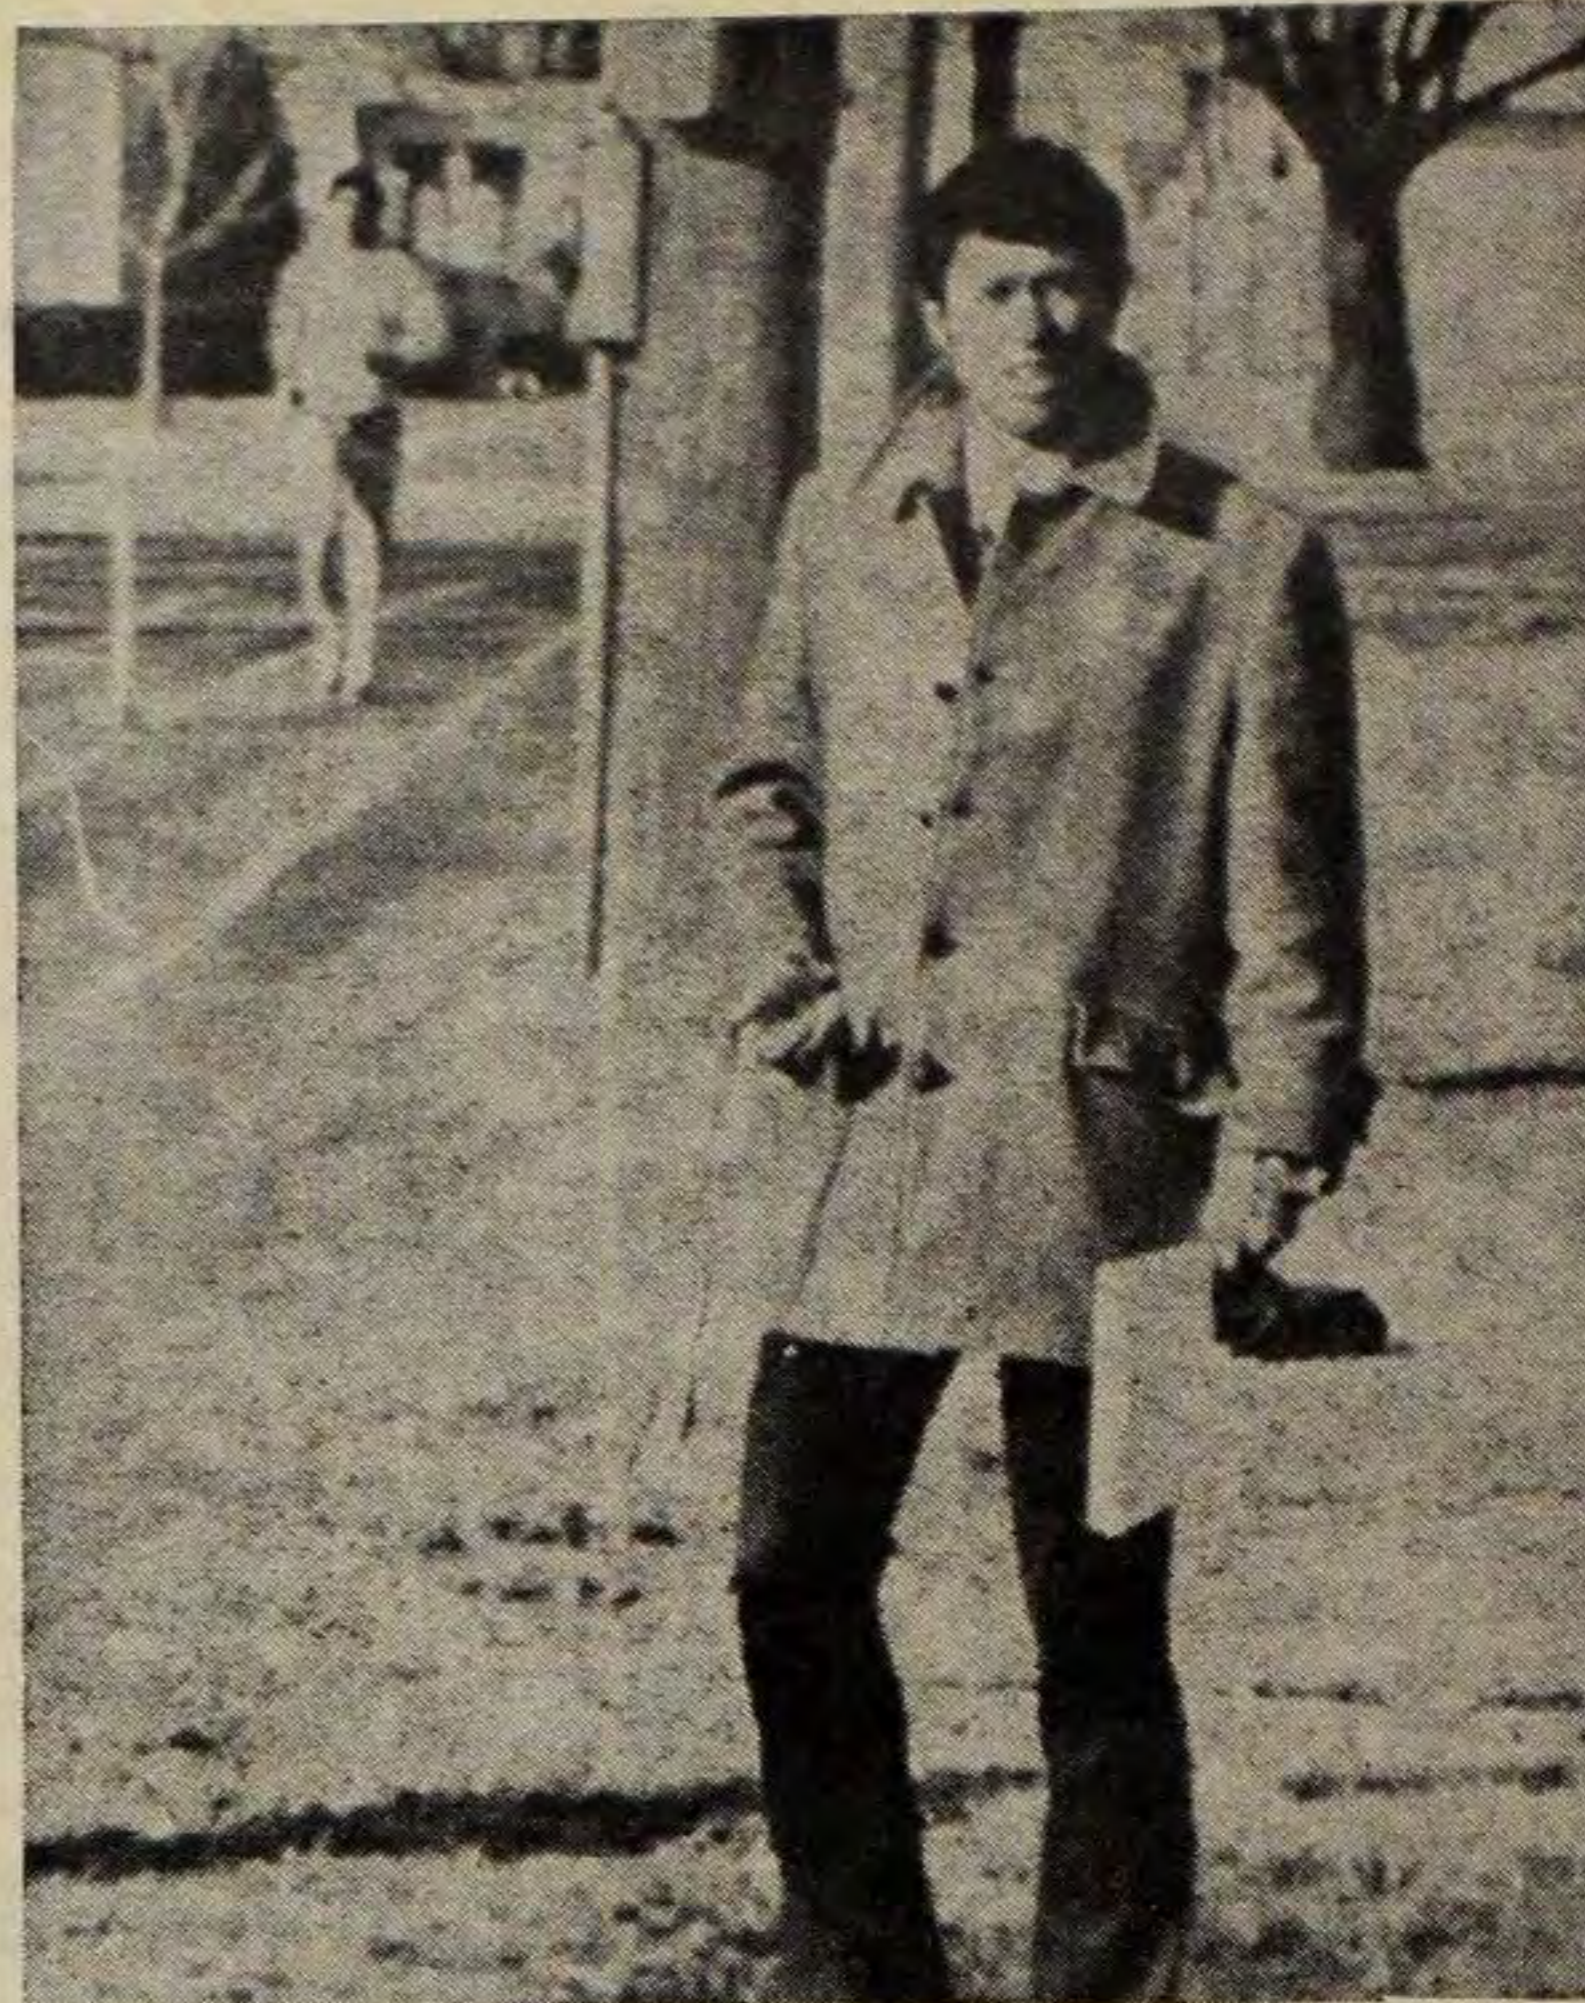

"I'm not a very talented runner," he says, "but I like to run and still get out and run every day."

Coach Rominger made these comments about this year's track squad: "We're thin in numbers and in experience. But, we have some very dedicated individuals with good working habits, so we should field a decent team in our conference. Our strength lies in our distance runners, primarily the 800 yards to the three-mile run and steeplechase and in our weight men, particularly Roger Kamla."

Rominger says that McPherson College is about what he expected it to be, but adds that "there is more informality and more awareness and interest in what each student and faculty member is doing because of the school's smallness. Students generally seem more mature and responsible — even on the freshman and sophomore level — than at bigger universities," he commented.

Besides coaching and counseling which often seem to conflict with each other, Don still works on his doctor's degree in history on a part-time basis. He is presently taking an independent study course in German under Professor McLane.

Coach Don Rominger keeps times on his track men in a recent afternoon workout on the McPherson College track.

'Dogs clip Jays' wings

by Stan Adams

Four graduating seniors closed out the season in glamorous, fun-filled style as McPherson College punished Tabor College Saturday night 107-95. The four seniors, all native Kansans, scored in double figures. They were Don Cameron, Oberlin, 17 points; Keith Grafel, Hearndon, 14 points; Kevin Sundahl, McPherson, 12 points; and Roger Trimmell, Wamego, 12 points. In addition, Russ Clifton and Dennis Cotton tossed in 13 a-piece.

The Bulldogs were in command nearly the entire game, stretching leads to 15-20 points in both halves, and "senioritis" was even present throughout the enthusiastic McPherson cheering section to make the evening a true family affair. Sixty fouls were called in the game, a school record — 35 were called against McPherson, forcing six men to retire early to the bench. This aggressive play helped more than hurt, however, as McPherson collected 43 rebounds, 12 more than Tabor.

McPherson College ended the season with a 10-12 record, winning five of the last seven games. The Bulldogs tied for third in the conference with Friends University, a team McPherson conquered twice this season. The Mac junior varsity lost to Tabor Saturday, dropping their record below a .500 percentage at 7 wins and 3 losses.

Earlier in the week at Newton, McPherson College took it on the chin as the Bethel Threshers rolled over the Bulldogs, 84-69. Bethel, who clinched the league title a week before, showed no mercy in this contest as they poured it on in the second half, knocking in 52 points. The taller home team also outshot McPherson from the field in the second half with 22 for 37 (58 per cent) compared to 18 for 35 (51 per cent) for Mac.

The junior varsity played a controversial tilt the very same night. The game was scheduled for 5:30 p.m., but the Bethel J.V.'s decided not to take the floor until 5:20, explaining that the high school was late practicing (in the same gym) even though McPherson had been warming up since 5:05. The game commenced at 5:55 p.m., although one official had not shown up. After two minutes ticked away in the game, the scoreboard and time clock broke down, causing another ten-minute delay. The second referee finally appeared with 8 minutes remaining in the first half, wearing blue jeans and sneakers.

The junior varsity eventually lost the game, 107-86, as Mac could seem to do nothing right. Twenty-six personal fouls were given to the Bulldogs, as compared to only fifteen for Bethel, and Bethel had 35 attempts from the free throw line, twenty more than McPherson attempted.

Keith Grafel leaps high into the air in an attempt to tip the ball to Dennis Cotton in a jump ball situation during Saturday night's season-ending victory over Tabor.

School record broken in track opener

by Jim Osche

The Southwestern Recreation Meet at Fort Worth, Texas, touched off the Battling Bulldogs' season with both surprises and disappointments. Tom Cope, junior from Dayton, Ohio, shattered the second oldest school record on the books with a leap of 6'4" on his third try in the high jump. The mark captured 4th in the event and a pair of points. The three other Bulldog points were picked up on a 149'5" heave by Roger Kamla in the discus throw.

March 1, 1973

Other Mac results included a fine early season 2:00.8 in the 880 yard run by sophomore Ben Work and a 4:32.7 in the mile by senior Vic Doll. Doll ran a 2:11.6 half-mile while Ben ran a 4:37 mile. Work, who has had little distance training this winter, and Doll, hampered by a cartilage injury, both stayed well back on the first quarter with 69.5 and 70.00 seconds, then picked it up to 2:16.5 and 2:18 halves and 3:27.5 and 3:30 at ¾ of a mile, before Doll flashed around Ben on the final lap.

Tom Cope was a near miss in the 120 high hurdles. He gunned over the first three barriers in second place in the prelims. But Tom had too much height on all which caused him to sail too far into his spirit for the next hurdle. He began to come into them too early, and as a result was slowed to a time of only 16.6.

Three bad handoffs destroyed the Bulldogs chances in the 440 yard relay after Steve Cameron had the team in contention on the first leg. The relay team ran only 45.3, but Cameron ran an encouraging 10.4 in the 100 yard dash prelims, while our other sprinters, Jim Anewalt, Bill Reece, and Zack Myers, had 10.6, 10.8, and 10.8, respectively. Myers ran 52.0 in the 440, a time he topped in time trials the previous week and then stiffened with a 24.5 220 yard dash. Cameron sprinted an encouraging 23.8 in the same event and Reece hit 23.9.

Women take third at state

by Joyce Betzen

Mac's womens basketball team defeated Bethel last Tuesday, progressed to state competition at Hays and brought home the third place title.

In the opening round of the State Women's Collegiate Basketball Tournament McPherson lost to K-State 38-48. The women came back on Saturday, however, in their next match to tromp Benedictine College of Atchinson by the score of 46-29. Leading scorers for Mac were Laura Sundahl with 15 points and Mary Holloway right behind her with 14 points.

K-State charged home with the first place trophy and Fort

Hays College took second place ahead of McPherson.

With Saturday's victory, Mac's womens basketball team finished the season with a 13-5 record.
