

Dorm throws party

by Joyce Betzen

Homework got you down? Has Boredom set in? Try the All Night Hop Party tomorrow night!

The evening starts at 8 p.m. with FREE fun at the YMCA. Both the pool and gym area will be open.

From 10:15 - 11:30, sandwiches will be served in the Social Room of the First Christian Church, located at the corner of W. Kansas and Walnut Streets.

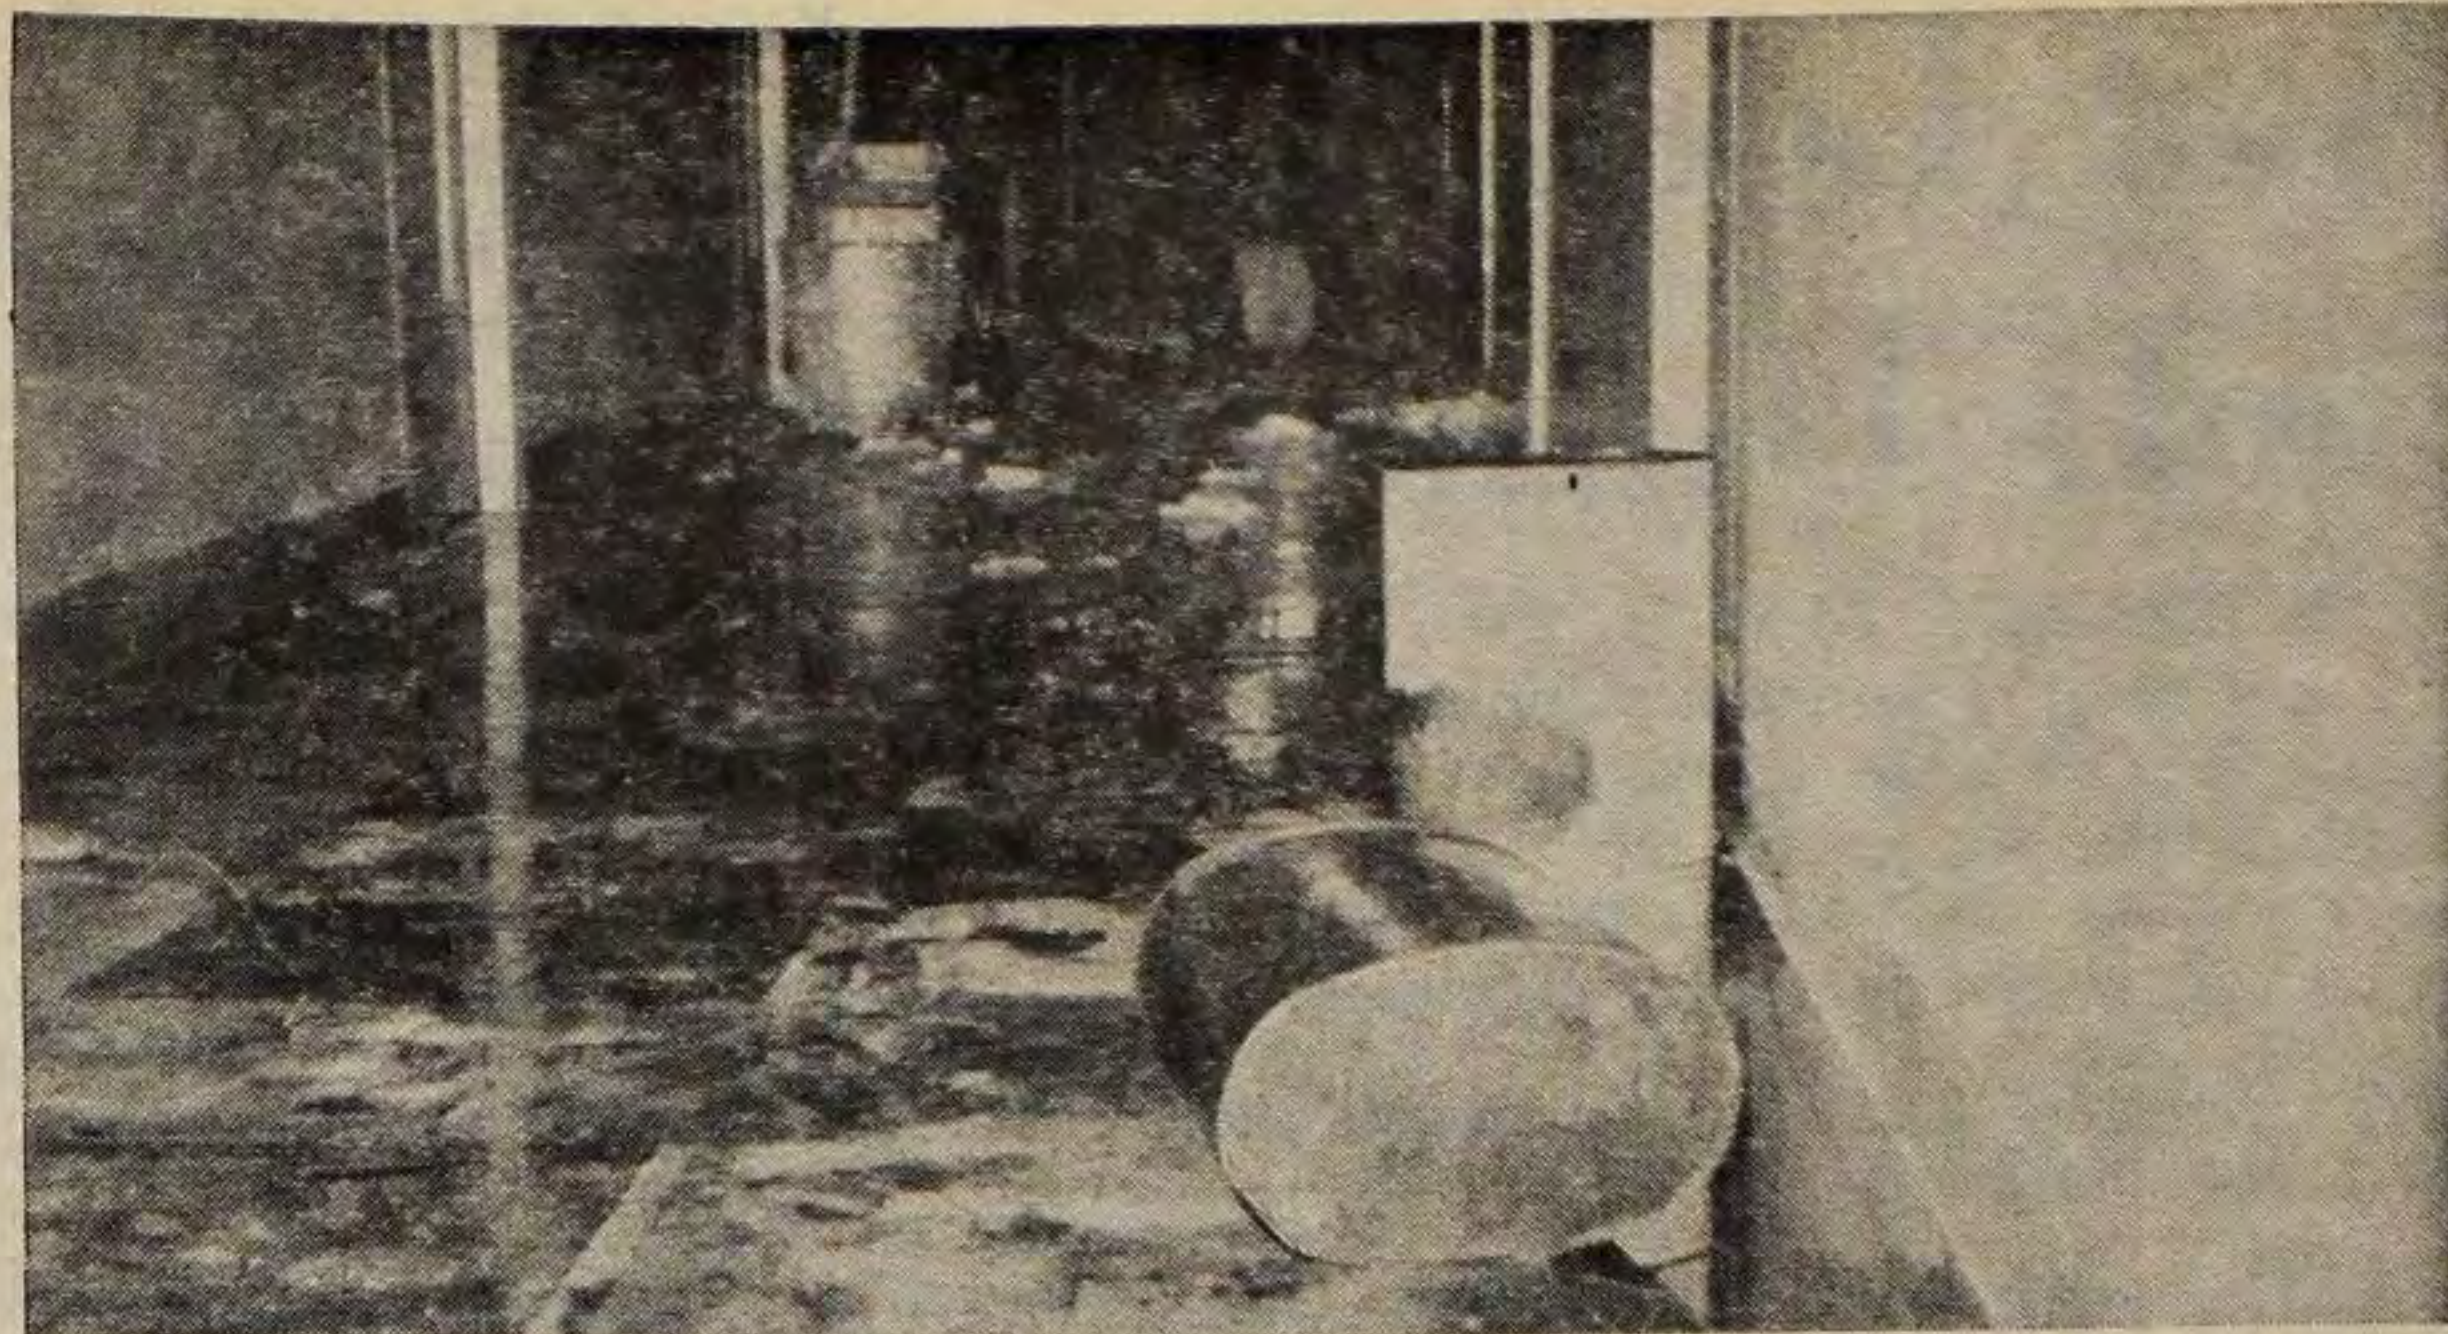

Bowling, anyone? From 11:30 p. m. - 2:30 a. m., party-goers can bowl at the special group rate of $1.25 for two games. That includes shoes!

If skating is preferred the McPherson rink will be open from 3 a.m. - 5 a.m. The special group rate of 90c includes skates!

At 5 a.m. party goers are invited back to Dotzour Hall for hot chocolate and cinnamon rolls.

The all-night party is sponsored by the Dotzour Hall Dorm Council and is financed by past money-making projects.

The party is open to all Mac College students and faculty. Barb Skaggs, Dorm Council vice-president and co-ordinator of the event, looks ahead to "an excellent party if everyone participates."

THE AFTERMATH — Dorm raids can be fun while they last but then comes the cleaning up. At 2 a.m. Tuesday several Metzler residents found themselves scrubbing the mud and grime off of their water soaked hallway floors. The first official dorm raid had ended.

Future teachers get first hand insight

Prospective teachers of McPherson's Student Education Association gained first hand information from former classmates at their February 21 meeting in Miller Library.

Robert Rosales and Carmela Snyder, 1972 graduates of McPherson College, shared the "ups and downs" of their new jobs, while Diane Helmuth, sr., McPherson, related parts of her student teaching semester.

"I was trained for kindergarten teaching," said Carmela with a smile, "where the kids just love you and do anything you ask. I got a job teaching junior high kids, and they are — well, obnoxious at times!"

"I also had my training in elementary education," continued Carmela, "and now I am an art teacher. I had several art classes at the University of Kansas and at McPherson College, but it wasn't my major field. When I was hired for the art job in the Canton-Galva School District, they were building a new school and I was to meet with the architect to plan the art room. I had to also plan what supplies we would need. I really learned fast."

Robert Rosales, or Rosy, as he is more commonly known, is teaching Spanish and physical education in the Marquette school system. "It's a shame," Rosy said as he shook his head, "the kids have such low self images."

"I praise the kids when they do a good job; I try to make them proud of themselves," he continued. "And when a parent comes in for a conference, I show him his child's work, both good and bad, but I always try to bring out the child's good points. Anybody can find fault."

Diane Helmuth has taught at McPherson Senior High School. Having read William Glasser and being full of idealism, Diane related that at first she was quite discouraged at the reality of school. "I guess I expected to go in and change the school overnight."

Diane then commented, "one day one of the girls in sewing class would do nothing but write letters, so I went to her to ask if I could help her. She said she was having trouble with her smock and wanted to give it to the Salvation Army."

"I spent the entire period working with that one girl and from then on, she was one of the most enthusiastic girls in the class," Diane finished with a smile.

Ensembles present concert

by Barb Moore

Romans, friends, students! Lend your ears! The McPherson College Department of Music is presenting an Ensemble Concert next Monday in Brown Auditorium at 8 p.m. The eight musical groups that will be performing are: Kaliedoscope, the Woodwind Trio (Ellen Shoemaker, Susan Rusk, Christy Young), the Women's Trio (Ruth Ann Rowland, Maurine Ditmars, Lynn Marcusson), the Brass Quartet (Gene Barrett, Bruce Kitzel, Ed Penn, Larry Kitzel) the Madrigals, the Trombone Quartet (Chuck Baldwin, Bill Bohnenblust, Mike Fox, Larry Kitzel), the Stage Band, and the Trumpet Quartet (Gene Barrett, Wayne Senger, Steve Fulmer, Tom Spizatte).

Professor Larry Kitzel, McPherson's instructor of instrumental music has arranged for the concert. "We want the student body to hear the various ensembles that go out to perform for churches and schools, besides the familiar groups," he states.

Veto not causing transfers

In the time that has elapsed since President Snell's veto of the increase in open dorm hours, 43 current students have requested transcript copies from the Registrar's office reports Mrs. Corinne Hughbanks, acting registrar.

Thirteen transcripts that were sent out were for seniors who are trying to get into graduate school, eight were issued to students themselves for personal use, five were sent to programs related with the college, two to schools of nursing as preplanned, three to employers, two to certification departments and 11 were issued to other four year colleges.

Mrs. Hughbanks points out that the 11 who have requested transcripts for next fall enrollment at other institutions made their decision on the basis of a highly specialized major such as engineering and not because of the veto.

The Registrar's Office does not find that this number of transcripts represents any change from requests in previous years. It finds that students, rather, are hesitant to change to another college for three reasons:

1) Students usually add another semester to their total college program because of the difference in graduation requirements.

2) An application for admission to another college costs money, anywhere from $10 to $100.

3) Going to a state college of 12,000 or more can be a lonely, ego-shattering experience.

Seven students returned to McPherson College after being away for an interval. Mrs. Hughbanks states, "They are back now. There must be a reason."

Profs. receive awards

Seven McPherson College professors were recognized for their years of service at the Faculty-Trustee dinner held in the college cafeteria last Friday evening.

President Galen Snell presented awards to John H. Burkholder, Professor of Biology, Sidney L. Smith, Associate Professor in Physical Education and Director of Athletics and Alvin E. Willems, Professor in Industrial Arts Education for their 20 years of teaching at McPherson College.

Jesse D. Krebbiel, Associate Professor of Mathematics, Leland L. Lengel, Associate Professor of History and Political Science and E. Dean Reynolds, Business Manager received awards for their ten years at the college.

Harley Stump, Professor of English was recognized for his 15 years at McPherson.

The cafeteria was filled to overflowing as staff, faculty, trustees and their spouses attended the dinner which was the final affair of the trustees' visit on campus. New and renominated trustees were introduced along with new college personnel.

The main address of the evening was given by President Snell in which he related his love and faith in the college.

Science club reorganizes

"I think we have some interesting programs lined up and I'd strongly encourage anyone to come and take advantage of them, even if he is not a science major," states Mike Fox, sponsor of McPherson's newly formed Science club.

The Science Club, formerly the Math and Physics Club, has been reorganized in an effort to include more areas of study. The club's membership has grown as a result and a busy spring schedule is being planned.

Dr. Larry Erickson, a professor from Kansas State University will give a talk on "Microbial Protein — A Biochemical Engineering Achievement", on March 21 at 8 p. m. in Harnly rm. 101.

Two films have been scheduled including "Donald Duck in Magic Land" and a film on laser light.

In April, the club will sponsor a star-gazing party.

Convo takes look at world affairs

The Vietnam war is over and the POWs are home. What this means to the U.S., and to the world, will be the topic for Colin Jackson, an experienced commentator on international affairs. Jackson will make his 20th visit to the campus on March 13, speaking on "Comments on World Affairs" to convo at 9 a.m.

Jackson, a graduate of St. John's College, Oxford, was a member of Parliament from 1964 to 1970. For over 20 years he has been traveling world wide, speaking at over 400 colleges and universities in 49 states.

Prof Leesdale visits Dotzour

Professor Leesdale, come in. I've been expecting you. I really appreciate you skipping your Thursday night class to visit me. There just didn't seem to be any other time we could get together here in the dorm. Can I take your hat? I think you'd better keep your coat since the heating is off again.

Watch your step! That's my roommate there on the floor practicing her yoga.

Can I offer you a coke. Yes? Let me run down to the kitchenette to get some ice. Oh no bother, just two flights down. Besides I have to wash the cup out anyway.

I'm back. Here's your coke, and oh, here are some brownies I swiped from the cafeteria. They only got a little squashed in my pocket.

Bathroom? Right across the hall . . . wait, you'll have to use the men's room in the lobby. Two flights down and to your right.

Back Already? Uh oh, looks like you got caught in the weekly dorm water fight. Take off your jacket and I'll lay it across the chair to dry. Just sit over there. Bed? Yes, I know it's a bed . . . but just think of it as a sofa. Don't tell me you think beds are just for sleeping. Why I just finished using it as an ironing board.

Dink dink. Oh, excuse me Prof. Leesdale, that's my buzzer. I'm just going half way down the hall to the telephone.

Now, where were we? Noise? Why yes, I guess it is a bit noisy with a TV in the next room, a radio across the hall and a stereo in the room above us. Just wait until Lulu starts swearing at her typewriter and the cheerleaders start practicing.

Close the door? Heavens no! You wouldn't want people to think there was some kind of hanky panky going on in here, would you? Leesdale, you're a very attractive man, even if you are balding, and I'm not sure I could control myself if I were all alone with you.

Oh no, I don't mind if you smoke. Go ahead. We'll just have to go up to the third floor lounge. Forget it? Well alright.

Dink, dink. My how time flies. Open dorms over so soon. You just have a couple of minutes to get checked out. Thank you so much for coming. No, you can't use that exit. I know it would be two blocks closer for you but rules of the dorm, you know. Thank you so much for coming. Good-bye.

(sigh) Gee, I wonder why professors don't visit in the dorms more often?

Apologizes for Spec letter

Dear Editor,

Having reread my letter that appeared in the Feb. 22 issue of the Spectator, I must agree that in fact it may have been a "character assassination." Therefore I wish to apologize to Dr. Snell and the administration of this school. I have the utmost respect for their character and intelligence and while I disagree with certain policies and directions undertaken by this school, I shall do so in a more constructive manner.

It is not necessary to tear apart this institution in order to change it. It is necessary,

An itch To bitch

however, to open lines of communication that are much more secure than the present system. I feel that this is Dr. Snell's responsibility. It is the students' responsibility to make their feelings known. I shall certainly continue to do so.

Respectfully
Bob McCann

Doom prophet refutes prof.

Dear Editor,

When someone disagrees with an opposing view point, it does not mean he is destructive. Perhaps he merely wants to build something else. One person's palace may be another's prison. If a person does not share someone else's ideals, it doesn't follow that his ideals are not equally high and noble. They are just different.

"Silent majority" supports Snell

Dear Editor,

I observed the MCCC meeting with the Board of Trustees last Thursday, and as a result I have become quite disgruntled and very irritated at the attitudes expressed by some of the students present. One or two students expressed the belief that Dr. Snell is a kind of "dictator" and that they are being overly "controlled," "oppressed," or "ignored."

I am so overwhelmed with sympathy for these few individuals that I do not know what to do with myself. For every person who feels "oppressed," "controlled," or "ignored," as if a lowly slave, there are at least thirty others who feel the exact opposite. In reality, many of the students who are seeking so-called "responsibility" are essentially trying to shirk responsibility, (i.e. wanting more open dorm hours because they are not "responsible" enough to live up to the present system).

One wonders why the students who spoke out at the meeting were those criticizing the college policies. The answer is simple — the majority of the students are quite satisfied with the present leadership and policies. They have more important things to do than to waste their time on petty nonsense and trying to test Dr. Snell's authority and where he stands by seeing how far they can go.

Dr. Snell should be commended for having the guts and backbone to take a stand on the issues facing McPherson College and providing direction for the college which it previously lacked. His setting down of concrete positions of where he stands should be hailed as a triumph over the ambiguity and laxness of many U.S. colleges.

It should also be recognized that these faults of such administrations have caused many of the problems and conflicts now on U.S. campuses. Because of these administrative faults a few individuals will be disappointed with the outcome when changes are made to correct these inadequacies.

I feel Dr. Snell deserves the support and cooperation of the total campus community in bringing about his goals, especially during his difficult transitional stage. He deserves an opportunity to prove himself and carry out his objectives.

It is time to let it be shown that the President of the college is the President and that a few frustrated and disillusioned students are not the president and can not run the whole show. The wheel that squeaks usually gets the grease and it is time for those of us who support Dr. Snell to do a lot of squeaking of our own.

I further charge every faculty, staff, and student body member comprising the so-called "silent majority" on campus who supports Dr. Snell, with gross negligence and cowardliness for not voicing their support directly to Dr. Snell en masse either by letter or in person. They, because of their failure to speak out for their own beliefs and rights, are essentially no better than those who seem to take great pride in keeping things stirred up on campus and who are so desperate that they have to resort to such juvenile tactics as stuffing the survey box to gain added support on the open dorm issue or intimidating those who speak out in favor of the college policies.

One reason why support is not voiced by some people is because of the fear of intimidation. This somewhat minor threat gives one all the more reason and incentive to speak out.

It is past time for the silent majority who support Dr. Snell and the policies of the college to crawl out of their holes and become very verbal in expressing their views and support. Let it be known that the rest of the college community will no longer tolerate being pushed around by the wishes of a few individuals.

Peace
Verlin A. Ingram

Campus needs tolerance, unity

The winds of change seem to again be wafting unrest in the minds of McPherson College students and faculty. Each of us holds to our own analysis or viewpoint regarding what McPherson College should be, what it is, or how it might change. And this is as it should be — but not to the exclusion of individual responsibility to assist in building a spirit of community and a relationship of mutual concern.

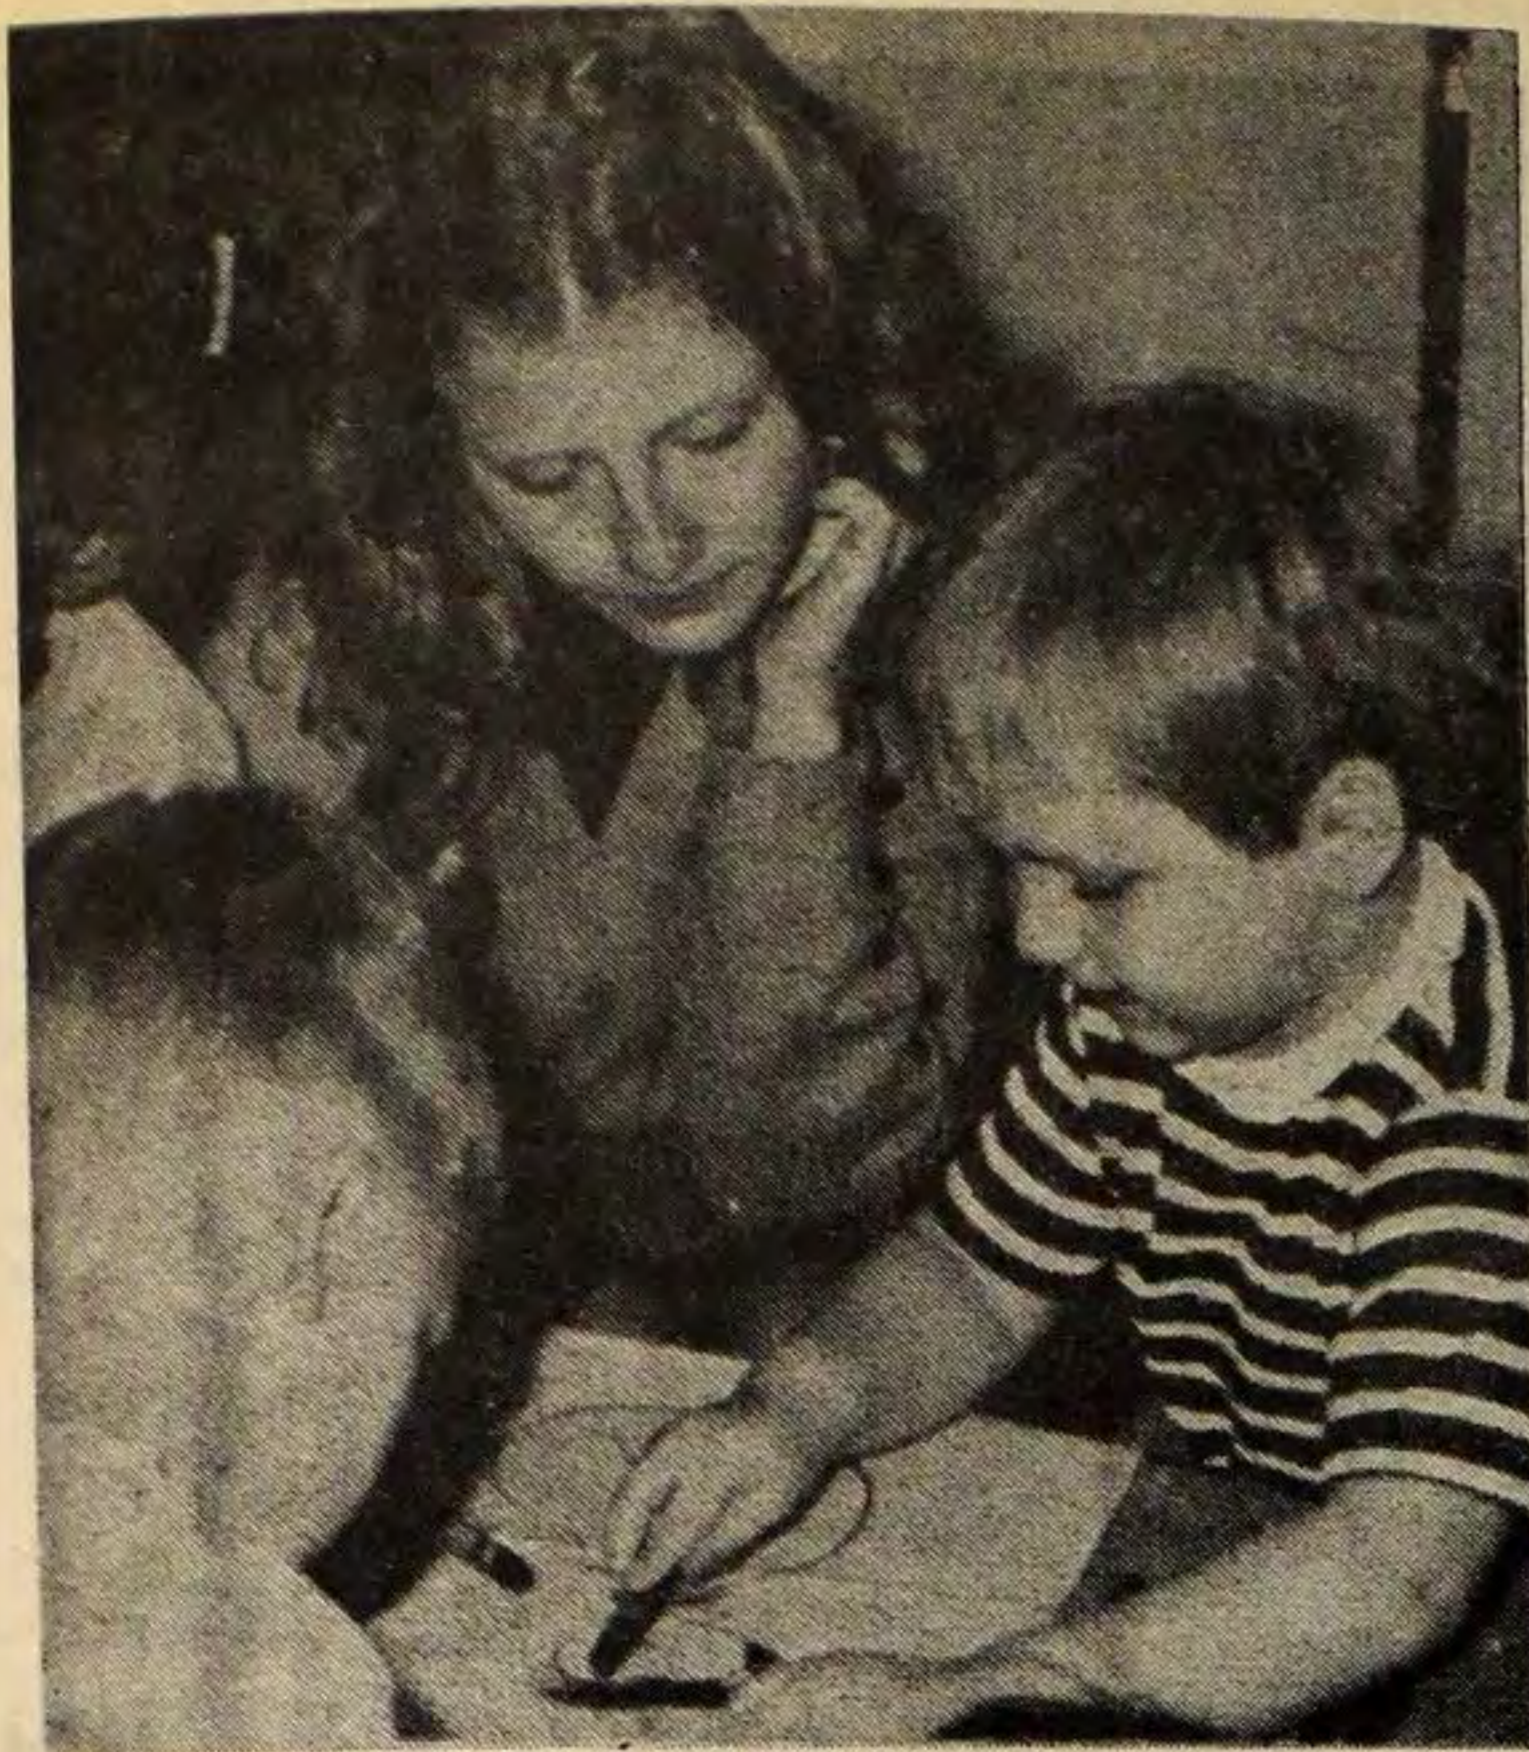

Each of us will have our own idea of what is wrong and how the situation should be altered. But, how many of us are really trying to understand the other person's viewpoint; and how many of us are taking some delight in promoting a down-in-the-mouth approach rather than trying to perceive a larger perspective. I believe the McPherson College community has the ability and the insight to cope with what may seem at times to be "insurmountable" problems.

It does seem to me that our campus may lack a spirit of unity, of feeling for the other person, of a desire to look beyond "my" concern and viewpoint to a broader perspective.

I recently read a comment, made by Dr. Clark Kerr of the Carnegie Commission, which seems to me to be very appropriate for our campus community. "A campus is many things: a physical place, a shifting scene of people, a set of functions, a series of traditions, a body of rules, and much else — but it is also a spirit."

"This spirit has been in the past and needs to be in the future the spirit of tolerance, or respect towards them as individuals, of goodwill to persuasion, of concern for hard facts and careful analysis, of devotion to the well-being of mankind around the world, of the means of thought directed toward the ends of wisdom."

Freshman Diane Tharrington oversees a coloring project as she works with children at the "Hope School for Handicapped."

Diane earns credit with volunteer work

Diane Tharrington goes to the United Methodist Church three times a week. It's not that the freshman coed from Caldwell, Iowa is super-religious, rather she is finding that the classroom at McPherson College is expandable. Diane is earning two hours of credit in the course G-SO 165 "Social Service Projects" for volunteer work at the "Hope School for Handicapped."

"Seeing the poverty in Mexico while there during interterm made me want to help change the conditions there," says Diane. "Since that was impossible, I decided to look for ways to help people here, and found out about the school at the church. It's really been a challenge to work with these children, but I've gained a lot out of it," adds Diane with a smile.

Diane works with 12-13 children ranging from two to six years old, who have either physical or mental handicaps or are socially or culturally deprived. She helps teach them motor, visual, audial, and language skills using methods the children will enjoy, such as stringing beads, matching colors, and playing with puppets.

To fulfill the requirements for the course, Diane keeps an extensive bibliography of her readings and a detailed log of daily activities. A summary of the project and her experiences will complete the course under Professor Keim.

The school is under the direction of Mrs. Joan Wesselowski and receives funds from the Title I organization.

Trustee gives Snell full support

by Mary Krehbiel

"I am very thrilled about Galen Snell being here as president of McPherson College and feel very confident in him," stated John E. Thomas, sr., trustee from Guthrie, Okla., and regional Crop director for Oklahoma.

"I think the trustees would endorse Dr. Snell 100 per cent at this point," he continued. "I've known Galen Snell for a long time and I know that to him the student, as an individual, is the most important consideration in making decisions."

"I would vote for him again if we were choosing a president today."

These are only a few of the comments made by Thomas last weekend after the annual trustee meetings, when asked his feeling towards President Snell.

"What students should address themselves to at this point," continued Thomas, "is evaluating the strong points at McPherson College."

"McPherson College has a highly dedicated staff, a fine cross-section of young people and high academic quality," he mentioned. Students should explore these aspects and offer their own suggestions and possibilities for more positive changes and additions to McPherson College."

However," Thomas continued, "there's more possibility for growth when everybody doesn't agree; when issues are dealt with openly and honestly without anger."

"I see McPherson College turning around to a win position," answered Thomas when asked what direction he saw McPherson College going. "I don't think McPherson College is heading towards an extremely conservative position. McPherson College stands for something. For a while we were getting into a no-win psychology and I wondered about sending my children here to school. Now I encourage my children to attend."

"The recent development of the behavioral sciences department is positive; the retention of the agriculture department is positive," said Thomas, "and there are a lot of possibilities on the horizon."

"We want students' ideas brought to the board, especially more positive and creative possibilities for McPherson College."

The results of the student body elections held Feb. 27 are as follows:

Representatives at large: Patty Wood, Bruce Boccard.
Senior Representative: Dean Johnson
MCCC commuting representative: Ann Lichty
One hundred and eighty-one students cast votes.

Bounders take first in tourney

The Fanny Bounders wrapped up the McPherson College intramural basketball championship last Thursday night by slipping past the Black Student Union 50-49. The Bounders went with their starting five nearly the entire contest and played what looked like a sagging 2-3 zone defense which shut off the high scoring machine of B.S.U., one which had been prevalent all season. Fanny led at half-time by the low score of 23-17, indicative of the cold shooting that affected both teams in the first period. Most of the points came from shots ranging from 15-25 feet.

The longest lead held by the Bounders was 45-33 midway into the second half, but B.S.U. began to pull out the stops to cut the margin to one point with 2:45 left in the game. B.S.U.'s Ray Craft fouled out with 5 minutes to play, just as he began to hit his long jumpers. Mike Hooker and Jim Dozier picked up where Craft left off to stage the comeback. Fanny's Rob Gerlach made a drive shot to increase the lead to 50-47 after using some fancy dribbling to eat away time on the clock.

B.S.U. scored to make it 50-48, but then Gerlach continued his dribbling show trying to preserve the precious one-point margin. He was finally fouled with 30 seconds left. In intramurals, the clock does not stop, and by the time the first foul shot was in the air, the final buzzer had sounded.

Game scoring honors went to unstoppable Mike Hooker, overpowering his way to 21 points. Ray Craft, had 14, Jim Dozier 10, Ray Gibbs 2, and Dwayne Gaines 2. Rob Gerlach pumped from the the corners and twisted for various driving layups to lead the Bounders with 20 points. Mike Nichols followed with 12, Bob Molina 10 and leading rebounder John Dowdy had 8 points. Starting forward Tom White did not play due to a knee injury sustained in the semi-finals.

The No-Names captured third place in the tournament with a 55-44 victory over Bittering the same night. Bittering started out fast, but fell behind for good 12-13, and it was all No-Names the rest of the way. Twenty-two turnovers were committed in the loosely played game, 14 by Bittering.

Steve Burkholder was top scorer for the No-Names with 22 points. Mike Halley scored 9 points, Kent Trimmell 12, Russ Hunt 6, Steve Smith 4, and Jeff Elling 2. John Holthaus scored 14 for Bittering with Joe Hale contributing 12, Randy Williams 4, Dave Peterson 4, Mark Goodheart 6, Al Sammis 2, and Jim Osche 2.

Bob Molina, one of the Fanny Bounders, gets a pass in the championship game of the intramural tournament. B.S.U. team members D. Ray Craft and Mike Hooker were high scorers in the game.

Cameron named to All-Conference team; gives whole team credit for honor

by Steve Burkholder

Don Cameron was named to the K.C.A.C. coaches' All-Conference squad for the second straight year at the coaches' annual post-season meeting. Another Bulldog, Russell Clifton, received Honorable Mention.

Conference champs, Bethel College, dominated the 10-man roster with four selections. Six other schools contributed one player each to the team. Three players: Stucky of Bethel, McGhee of Friends and Regier of Tabor were unanimous selections and Bethel's Bob Fairbank was selected as Coach of the Year. Five players, including MC's Clifton, were given Honorable Mention.

The selection of D.C. to the all-conference team caps off a brilliant basketball career for the Oberlin native. Don graduated with all-league honors at Oberlin High School, scored 34 points in two games during his high school career.

Don played his first two years of college roundball at Colby Junior College, where he set the two-year scoring record. He led McPherson College in scoring both his junior and senior year with 18.5 and 17.1 averages respectively. Don says the biggest highlight of the 1972-73 season was beating Friends University in double overtime for the second time.

Don gives credit to the whole team for his honor. "There's no way one man can step out on the court and get the job done by himself. We knew when to run-and-shoot and when to slow it down. Our strong finish was a team effort," he states. "The league race wasn't as close as it was last year, but we faced a lot of top individuals."

Although his plans are not definite, the Oberlin wizard plans to be a counselor and teach basketball and baseball at a summer recreation camp in Maine. After that, he'll be looking for a job in the recreational area (possibly teaching and coaching). Don will graduate this spring with a degree in Physical Education.

Don Cameron was selected recently to the KCAC coaches' All-Conference team.

Tennis squad sports new faces

This year's tennis team will feature many new faces with impressive credentials. Five men will form the nucleus for 2nd year coach Jerry Holman. Of the five, Mark Melhorn is the only returning letterman.

Melhorn played No. 2 on last year's squad and ended the season with a 6-3 dual competition record. Three freshmen bringing with them experience in state competition are Don Carr, from Ottumwa, Ia., who placed second in doubles in Iowa's largest class of schools. Steve Burkholder, from Buhler, Kansas, was last year's 3-2-1-A champ in doubles and McPherson High's Larry Rolander competed in state 5-4-A doubles competition.

The fifth man, Tom Glynn, is a Juco transfer from Coffeyville, Ks. Tom also competed in state competition while at Wamego High School.

It looks like there will be a wild scramble for the 6th position on the squad. Senior Roger Trimmell recently announced his retirement from the game, leaving the spot wide open. Those vying for the position are Bill Bohnenblust, a sophomore who played No. 4 on last year's team; Steve Perrin, who played on Wichita North High School's varsity last year; Steve Dollman, a varsity letterman from McPherson High; and Mike Nichlos, a sophomore from Las Animas, Colo.

Last year, the team had a 5-4 season in dual competition, finished 3rd in the ACCK tournament and 4th in KCAC playoffs. Coach Holman feels he has a good chance of improving that record this year.
