Travel experiences to be offered

by Bambi Crumpacker

"The world is a book, and those who do not travel read only one page," said St. Augustine. Students of McPherson College will be given the opportunity to travel to Guatemala, New Mexico, Arizona, Israel, Texas, Oregon, and California during interterm.

Seven different travel experiences are being offered this interterm. A 21-day trip to Guatemala is being offered for the first time. This trip will be under the supervision of Corinne Hughbanks. This experience is open to any student who wishes to learn more about the culture and language of Guatemala. Students who don't know Spanish will be taught "survival Spanish." Expenses for the trip are $530 for off-campus students and $430 for resident students, plus food expenses.

Dr. Dale Goldsmith will be teaching an interterm course, "Religions of the American Southwest." This will include a study of the religion of the Navajos since the 1530's. A two-week trip to New Mexico and Arizona is planned so students can receive first-hand exposure to religions of the Southwest. This trip will cost approximately $200.

Dr. John Burkholder and Dr. Gilford Ikenberry, biology, are planning an extensive study on marine biology at Coos Bay, Oregon. This trip is open to students who have taken general biology and have permission from the science department. The approximate fee for the trip is $390.

Three weeks of classroom study followed by a six-day trip to San Antonio, Texas, will be included in Wesley DeCoursey's interterm geology course. The class will "emphasize mineral resources and the problem of man's environment," commented Dr. DeCoursey.

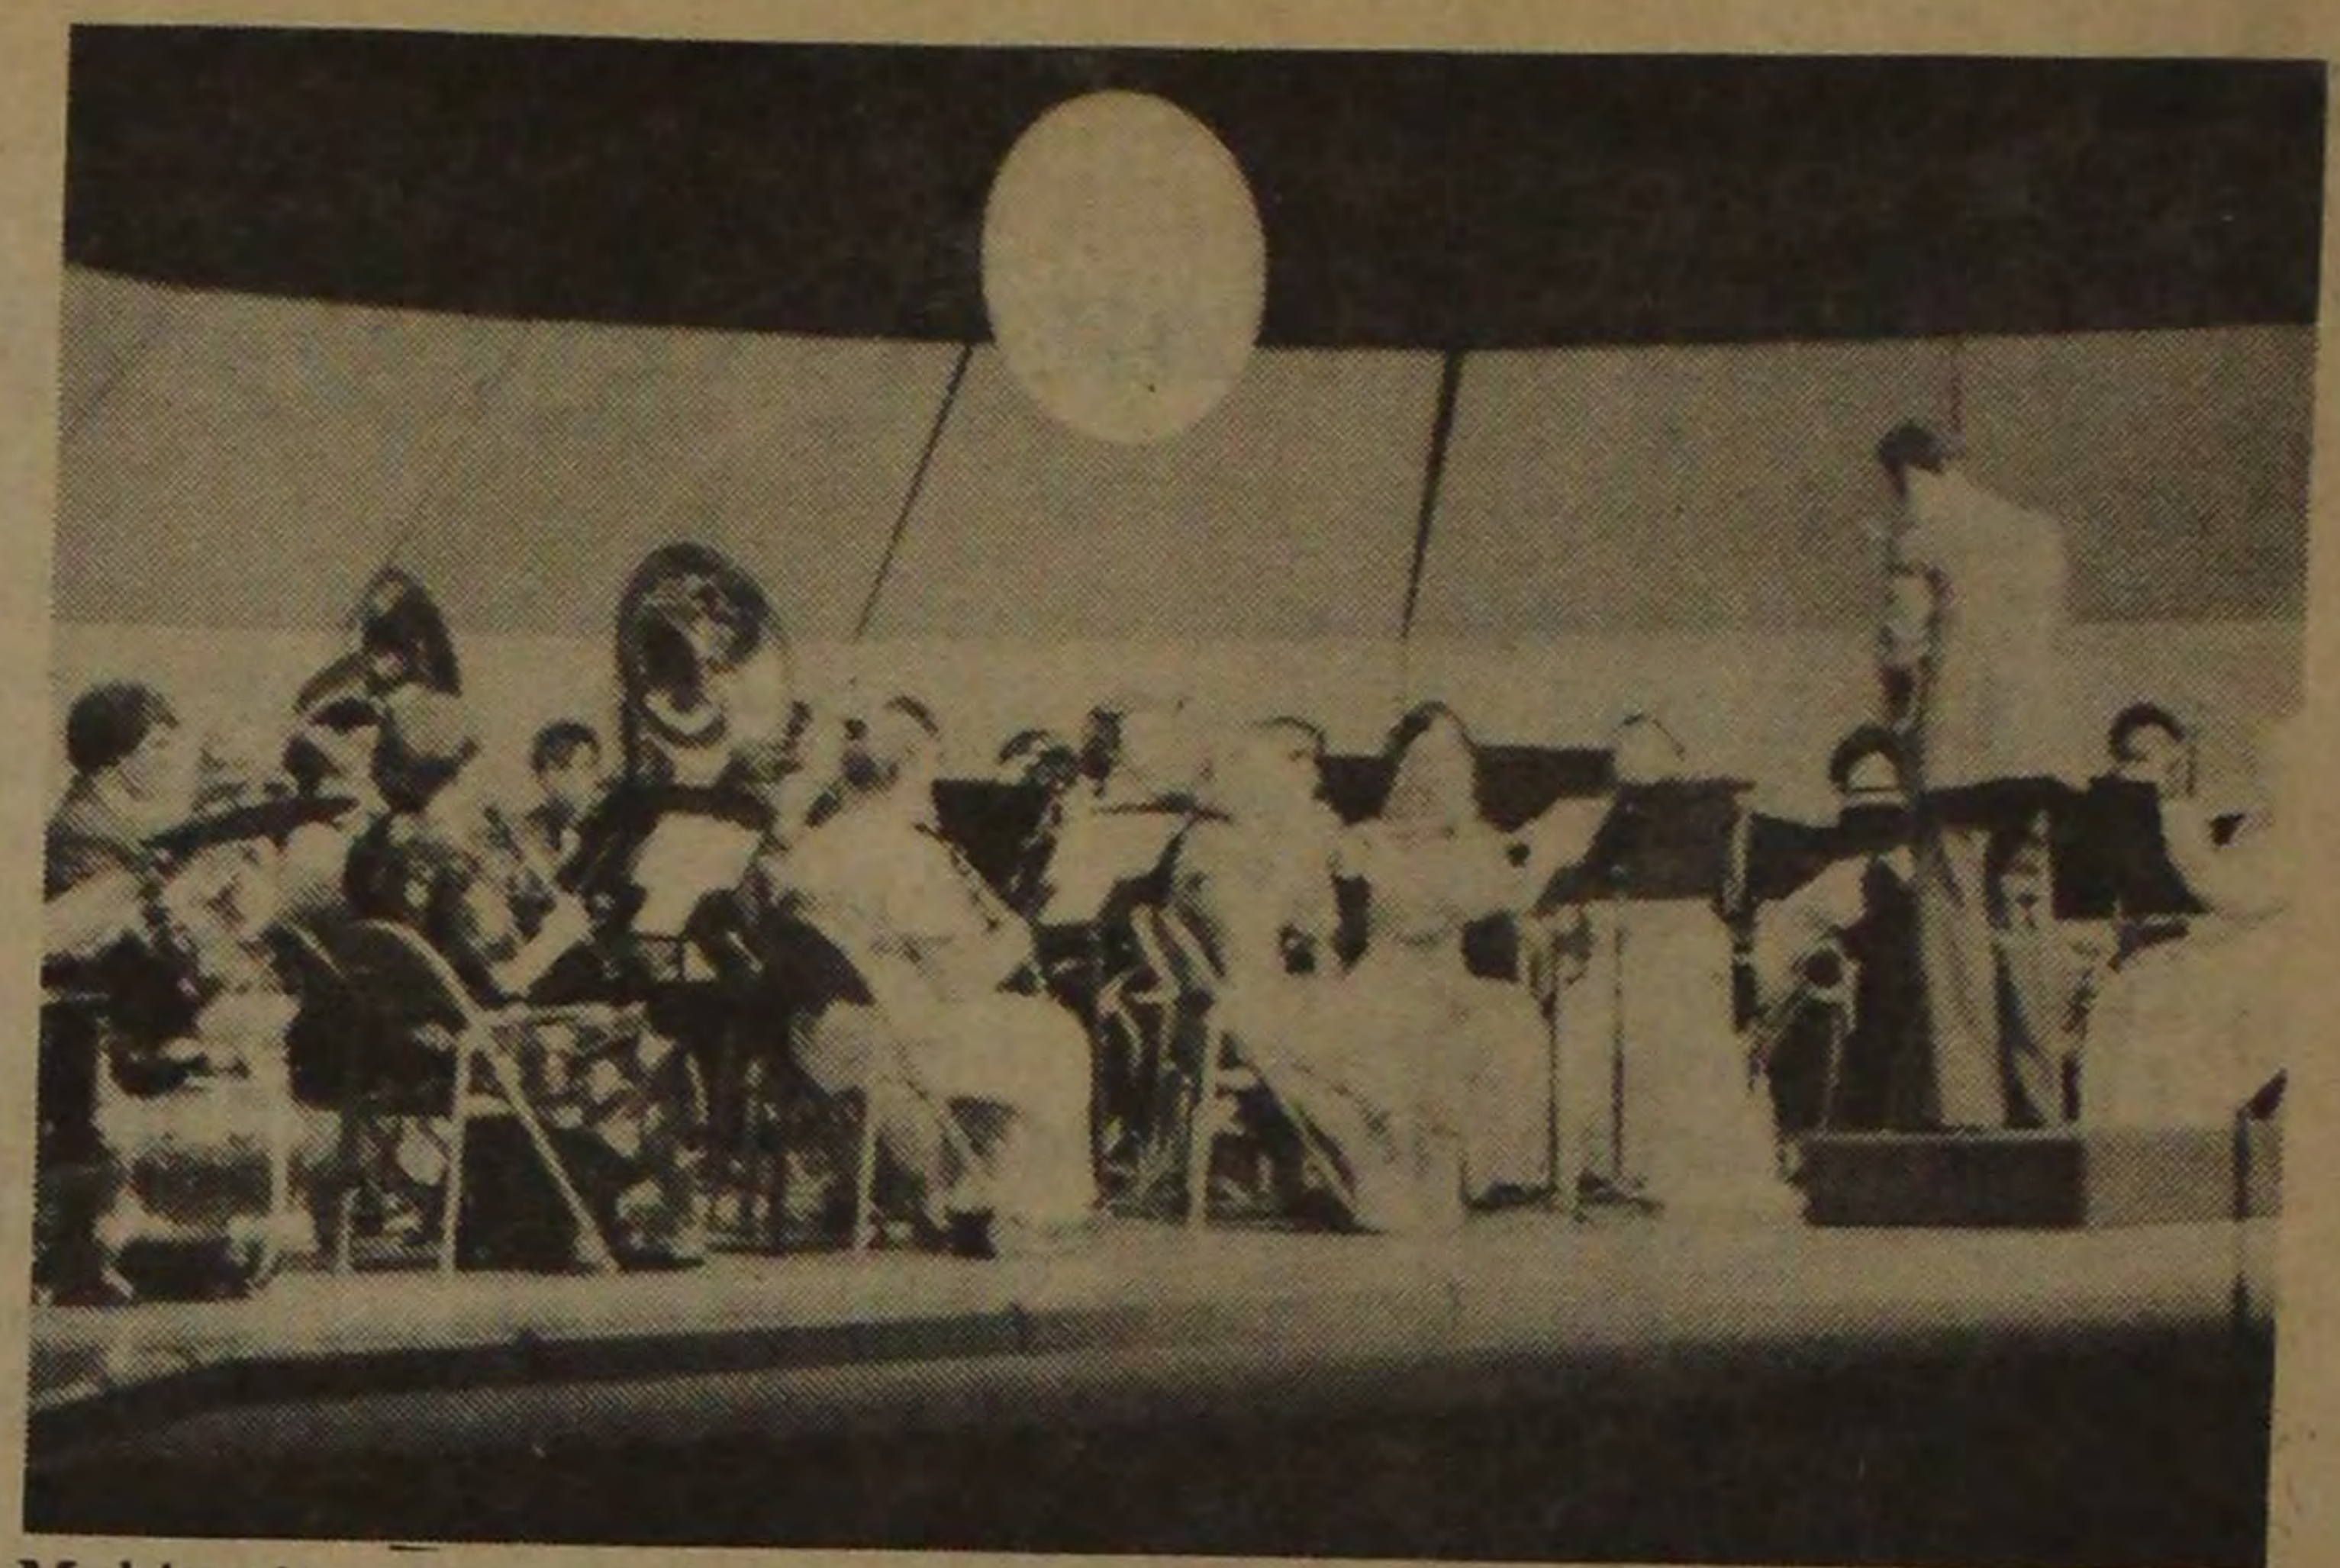

In San Antonio the class will view 500-million-year-old granite, 200-million-year-old limestone, plus other interesting sites. The approximate cost of the 2,200 mile trip is $85 plus food expenses.

Prof. Monroe Hughbanks, education, will instruct the "Intercultural Education Seminar." This course will include a study of minority and economically deprived groups in America. The students will be serving as aids in special locations throughout the Southwest. The cost of this experience will be around $100.

For $400, students may travel to the West Coast to be exposed to the aspects of home economics. Prof. Connie Nichols, home economics, along with Barbara Overaa, are in charge of the class which will include one week of preparation, two weeks of travel and one week of evaluation.

Rick Sherman will be in charge of a trip to the Middle East. The group will travel throughout the Middle East and will visit such historic places as the Jordan River, Jericho, Bethlehem, the Dead Sea and the Massada. The purpose of this course is to help students become aware of what it's really like in the Mid East. The cost of the trip is $1,299.

Making its season debut Tuesday evening in Brown Auditorium was the McPherson College Concert band. The concert reflected weeks of preparation by Director Larry Kitzel and band members.

Spring enrollment /
New course scheduled /
Mini-course offered /
Human relations seminar

Thursday has been designated as pre-enrollment day for the spring semester. Classes will be dismissed so students can meet with their advisors.

Values clarification and decision-making skills will be the subject of a new class, "Self Exploration and Directions." The course will be offered through the counseling office this spring. "Self Exploration and Direction" will meet twice a week for five weeks. Students will receive one hour of credit for the class.

Organizing, outlining and research techniques for term papers will be explored in a research techniques mini-course which begins Nov. 7. The class will meet at 1 p.m. daily until Nov. 18.

A seminar on Human Relations will take place on the McPherson College Campus with Central College and McPherson College serving as co-hosts. The seminar will begin at 4 p.m. Nov. 18 and end at noon Nov. 19. Consultants for the seminar will be Dr. Gary Crooms, professor in Intercultural Communication at Wichita State University, and Dr. George Rogers, Director of Minority Studies at WSU. Students are urged to pre-register by Nov. 10.

Sixteen seniors honored by 'Who's Who'

When the 1977 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities" rolls off the press, the names of 16 McPherson College seniors will appear along with the names of other outstanding students throughout the country.

These students were nominated by faculty members and administrators on the basis of academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extra-curricular activities and future potential. They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1,000 institutions in 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Senior class secretary and Art Club vice president Jane Albright, Nampa, Idaho, is involved in Home Ec. Club and Mac Ambassadors. Former co-director of the Student Union and campus life committee member, Jane has also participated in flute choir and Kappa Omicron Phi. Her major is interior design.

1977-78 Stuco President Daryl Beam is a biology major from McPherson who plans to attend dental school next fall. Daryl has served on the Board of Publications, Administrative Committee, Foods Committee, Metzler Dorm Council and MCCC.

Eldon Chlumsky, an industrial arts education major from McPherson, is currently student teaching in Wichita. Last year he served as president of the McPherson College Industrial Arts Club. Also active in the music department, Eldon has been a member of band, Opus and the McPherson Community Symphony Orchestra.

Sally Correll, Abilene, is an interior design major. She has served on student council for four years and is currently the secretary. A member of local, state and national home ec. organizations, Sally is also treasurer of the McPherson chapter of Kappa Omicron Phi. A former participant in Mac Ambassadors and dorm council, Sally works part time at People's State Bank and has been a candidate for homecoming royalty.

Dave Crist, a biology major from McPherson, is president of Metzler Dorm Council and senior class vice-president. An organizer of the campus blood drive and a North Central Evaluation Committee member, Dave is currently serving as a biology lab assistant, student council member and member of the educational policies committee. He was also a candidate for homecoming king this fall.

"They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1,000 institutions of higher learning ..."

Spanish major Anne Erisman from Warrensburg, Mo, claims drama as a main interest. A member of Alpha Psi Omega, Anne has taken part in various theater productions, including a lead part in the recent homecoming play, "Comedy of Errors." Musically, Anne has been involved in Concert Choir and Opus II. She is currently student teaching in Buhler.

Lisa Gaskill, a physical education major from Abilene, is well-known around campus for her involvement in sports. She has been a member of the track team, basketball team and tennis team. Lisa has served as manager of the track team and has reported for "The Spectator" for four years. She is a former "Quadrangle" staff member and has served as campus editor for the ACCK Creative Magazine. Lisa is a member of M-Club and SNEA.

Ann Lobban, an accounting major from McPherson, has been involved in a variety of activities including four years on the women's tennis team. She is currently serving as senior class president and president of Dotzour Dorm Council. Upon graduation, Ann will be certified to teach accounting, economics, typing and shorthand on the secondary level.

Rae Ann Masterson Frantz is serving as dorm mother of Dotzour Hall this year. A member of the McPherson Community Symphony Orchestra and a biology lab assistant, Rae keeps busy with a variety of activities. She participated in this year's homecoming play, "Comedy of Errors," and plans to attend medical school.

History major Linda Pfalzgraf, Wellington, currently serves on Stuco as a representative-at-large. She has been involved in volleyball and basketball, and has served as a reporter and campus editor for "The Spectator." Linda was a member of MCCC for one year and is a member of the history fraternity, Psi Alpha Omega.

Band, choir and Opus activities are just some of the things Brenda Sanger, Quinter, has on her schedule. Brenda, a special education major, has participated in MCCC and is currently Dotzour Dorm Council treasurer and secretary of SNEA.

Student council vice-president, Paula Schnaithman, Billings, Okla, is another special education major. She is currently serving as a Mac Ambassador and a member of the Board of Publications. Paula is a resident assistant, dorm council member and is treasurer of SNEA.

Physical education major Celia Stover from Manhattan has been active in her field, as she has been involved in women's volleyball, basketball and the velocipedes as well as being the athletic trainer her junior and senior years. Celia has also been a member of choir, "The Spectator" staff and has participated in drama.

Physical education major Jeanne Suellentrop, Colwich, devotes much of her time to sports. She has been involved in basketball, track and volleyball and is a member of M-Club. She was involved in band for two years. Jeanne is currently student teaching in Buhler.

Bruce Wagoner, a senior business major from McPherson, is a member of the Bulldog football squad and participates in the McPherson Community Symphony Orchestra. In past years he played on the soccer team and is presently a member of M-Club.

Marty Ward, a special education major from McPherson, is currently serving as president of the McPherson College chapter of SNEA. He has been a member of the tennis team, and last year, he and his wife, Bea, were Dotzour Hall's resident directors. Marty is currently student teaching in the McPherson schools.

Letter of thanks received

Mr. David Gentry
McPherson College
1600 East Euclid
McPherson, Kansas 67460

Dear David:

Just a note of thanks and appreciation to you and the students of McPherson College for the superb job you did on the "Zong Show" Oct. 22. This program as presented by the college students and other community people was indeed most entertaining and was certainly enjoyed by all, including several United Way staff people. We thought it was a very fine gesture on the part of all who participated in this program to use this opportunity to help out in a very worthwhile cause in our community, namely, United Way. The audience was very enthusiastic and it seemed that everyone had a real fun time.

Please convey our sincere thanks to Rick Tyler, Jeff Gumm, Paula Schnaithman, Joan Hamlin, the musicians, yourself, and to all who had a hand in making the "Zong Show" not only a huge success, but also an enjoyable and beneficial evening's entertainment. We are most grateful and appreciative of your generosity and we appreciate the support given to United Way.

Best wishes to you and all the students for a rewarding and successful school year!

Sincerely,

UNITED WAY OF MCPHERSON, INC.

Students express personal views

Dear Editor:

I'm becoming just a little tired of people complaining about nothing to do in Kansas or the Midwest. I guess the problem is that some of us have different ideas of what "something to do" is.

I'm sure that a good old Saturday picnic out at the lake can't match the excitement of a mugging in Central Park, but it's got to be more healthy.

Then there are those that choose to think that "the East has everything and the Midwest has nothing." Well, to that I say that I didn't see any ropes around their necks when they got here. From that I take it that they chose to come here and no one forced them.

I've heard it suggested that we here in the Midwest have always had to create something to do; it wasn't here just waiting to be done. There is always something to do if you just look for it.

Maybe what I'm trying to suggest is that more of us should attend things like Student Council or Social Committee. These are the organizations that people should contact when they want to see something happen on campus.

Name withheld

Dear Editor:

We are not writing this to single out any individuals, but would simply like to comment on a recent Metzler Dorm Council meeting. One of the undersigned was set to appear before the council regarding a minor infraction. The defendant was to be represented by two "attorneys", and a member of the local "press" was also present. Although the incident was meant in jest, the "attorneys" had prepared a defense consisting of some points they believed should be brought up.

The attorneys and the press representative were barred from attending the meeting, and were subsequently labeled "a bunch of yo yo's," without being given the chance to air their views. What began as a half-serious, half-humorous event was met with cold stares and scorn.

As many associated with McPherson College have stressed, a student's college experience should be a well-rounded blend of academics, participation in athletics and organizations, and social interactions including informal, spontaneous joking among students. We, the undersigned, interpret this to mean that kidding around and having a good time are just as essential to a well-rounded college experience as academics or other facets of college.

College alumni inevitably view their college days as crazy, adventurous and fun. (Read the article concerning this in the Oct. 28 issue of The Spectator if you aren't convinced that pranks existed long before we as students came to this campus. Incidents like a green horse being led through Dotzour Hall, wastebaskets-full of water being dumped on unsuspecting victims leaving Fahnstock Hall, and outhouses adorning Dotzour's front lawn make the explosion of a firecracker seem tame by comparison.)

High school seniors often look forward to college on the basis of its social events and good times. We don't think that informal clowning around should be viewed as immature, stupid, or undesirable side effects of a student's college career. When McPherson College loses its quality of humor, its pranks, its craziness, its fun-loving, good-natured attitude; it loses part of its tradition and the fulfillment of a "well-rounded" college experience.

After all, aren't we "still crazy after all these years?"

Respectfully yours,

Kenny (K.C.) Cotton

Survey reveals conflicting attitudes towards Carter

by Becky Baile

Almost one year ago James Earl Carter, an unknown Georgia peanut farmer, was elected to the office of President of the United States. In recent months, surveys have indicated a decline in the Presidents popularity. So to get an indication of what students and faculty at McPherson College think about Jimmy Carter the Spectator conducted its own small survey.

Of the twenty people interviewed 75 per cent expressed positive feelings about the president and what he had done so far, 15 per cent indicated that they were still waiting for him to do something and 10 per cent had a very negative attitude toward the president.

Some of the positive actions which many people told of included the energy programs toward which President Carter has worked. Grand Odokara, jr, Nigeria, hopes that he will budget more money for the development of new energy sources like the sun and wind.

"This country, as big as it is, will need it," stated Grand.

Human rights, the Panama Canal treaty, and cutting down on the government bureaucracy were several other issues which appeared quite often on the survey. Many people admire the way Carter has "stuck his neck out" on controversial issues, such as human rights.

"I think he has stood up for what he feels is right no matter what others have said," commented Nancy Aden, bookstore manager.

The personal approach with which Carter relates to the public has impressed some of those interviewed. Dr. Stan Beery, math, said, "I like his style—trying to be one of the people."

For these and other different reasons Carter has won people over who did not like him at first.

"I didn't think he would be as good as he is. I'm pleased with what he has done even though he is a peanut farmer," stated Brenda Sanger, sr, Quinter.

Fifteen per cent indicated they are still waiting for reasons including the idea that Carter should be able to get legislation passed easily since Congress has a Democratic majority. But as of yet he still has had quite a bit of rejection on some important issues.

A few people interviewed had a strongly negative attitude about the job Carter has done.

"I don't think he's done anything," exclaimed Guy Bourke, fr, New York, N. Y.

Guy's main reasons were that Carter has left New York City to fend for itself and he had not done much to lower unemployment. According to Guy, Carter had pledged during his campaign to support these issues.

Several others also believe that Carter has not lived up to many of the promises he made during his campaign.

Take time to enjoy this life

by Mike Roberts

The thief comes only in order to steal, kill and destroy. I have come in order that you might have life—life in all its fullness. (John 10:10 GNB).

In trying to ascertain some meaning to this whole thing called life, we can run in circles, come up with any number of explanations and theories, and still, who knows for sure?

Taking a realistic look at it... first of all how many of us had anything to say about being born? No one consulted us, and as much as I can remember, I was here quite a while before I can remember anything. We played no part as to what we would be, where we would be, or in what situation we would be living. Yet we are all created either male or female, one race or another, in one part of the world or another, with certain advantages or disadvantages, with varying circumstances integrated in all of our existences. Yet, in the most basic form, we are all human beings (whatever that means). We all are possessed with common desires and needs. And like it or not, we all wind up with the same outcome—death.

I'm sure some of us don't like to think about death, and there are probably a million and one explanations that each of us has for what happens to us after death. But ultimately, we cannot deny the fact that at one time or another we are not going to be experiencing things in the same manner as we are experiencing them presently.

So I am convinced that a man should enjoy himself, because the only pleasure he has in this life is eating and drinking and enjoying himself. He can at least do this as he labors during the life that God has given him. (Ecc. 8:15 GNB).

We didn't have a thing to do with our lives being brought into existence. And for all intents and purposes, we know there is no escaping death. So enjoying ourselves in what we do while we're here seems to be a reasonable alternative. Yet we get so caught up in preparing for the future (the day we will have that high prestigious job that will keep us busy twelve hours a day, all the degrees we can muster in order to obtain enough of a salary so that we can be in debt to our own greed.

...Before we know it we are at least middle aged and we still haven't reached that plateau, and how much of our life is left? Is then our only motive to attain that which inevitably we won't be able to keep?

So if we are destined to enjoy ourselves during life, couldn't we experience more satisfaction if somebody else was able to enjoy it with us, and the more people enjoying it, the more enjoyable it would be all the way around, right?

But we need to get our bearings straight. We need to realize where true happiness comes from. We need to know how to experience the fullness of life.

I'd like to share with you a letter I received the other day, some of you may have already read it or I have told you about it or someone else may have. Nonetheless, it won't hurt us to share it again. It reads:

Dear Friend:

I just had to send a note to tell you how much I love you and care about you. I saw you yesterday as you were walking with your friends. I waited all day hoping you would want to talk with me also. As evening drew near, I gave you a sunset to close your day and a cool breeze to rest you. And I waited. But you never came. It hurt me, but I still love you because I am your friend.

I saw you fall asleep last night and I longed to touch your brow. So, I spilled moonlight on your pillow and your face. Again I waited, wanting to rush down so that we could talk. I have so many gifts for you. But you awakened late the next day and rushed off to work. My tears were in the rain.

Today you looked so sad, so all alone. It makes my heart ache because I understand. My friends let me down and hurt me so many times, too. But I love you. Oh, if you would only listen to me. I really love you. I try to tell you it in the leaves on the trees and breathe it in the colors of the flowers. I shout it to you in the mountain streams and give the birds love songs to sing. I clothe you with sunshine and perfume the air with nature's scents. My love for you is deeper than the oceans and bigger than the biggest want or need in your heart.

If you only knew how much I want to help you. I want you to meet my Father. He wants to help you, too. My Father is that way, you know. Just call me, ask me, talk with me. Please, please don't forget me. I have so much to share with you. But, I won't hassle you any further. You are free to call me. It's up to you. I'll wait because I love you.

Your friend,
Jesus

Juvenile behavior studied by class

by Kim Thiessen

Juvenile delinquency. To what extent did students currently attending McPherson College participate in delinquent activity prior to age 18, and how often were they caught? What happened to them after they were caught? What relationship did size of community and economic factors have on the incidence of participation in delinquent activity?

Some in-depth questions about a touchy subject. Answers to these questions were sought by members of Prof. Frances Moore's, juvenile delinquency class.

The study began with the compiling of a self-report survey form which was a modification of several similar forms. The students added questions that they themselves felt would be relevant to the study.

About 40 per cent of the student body, or 228 individuals were surveyed. One-hundred-twelve were male, 116 were female. The survey was distributed on a random basis in classes being offered on this campus.

According to Prof. Moore, studies such as these began appearing around the late 1950's and early '60's when sociologists started to question the widespread assumption that delinquent behavior occurred almost exclusively among juveniles who were members of lower socio-economic groups.

These previous surveys and the one conducted by the class, concluded that this assumption is false. Juvenile delinquency occurs frequently in all economic levels of society. The fact is that juveniles belonging to the less affluent categories are more likely to be caught and prosecuted for their behavior. They have a much greater chance of being institutionalized for the crimes they commit.

This can be illustrated by the fact that for those students whose parent's annual income was under $5,000, 12.9 offenses per person were reported. Students whose parental income is stated as being between $20,000 and $40,000 committed an average of 11.4 delinquency acts per person. These figures correspond closely, but in contrast, 11.3 per cent were caught in the lower economic group while only 7.14 per cent were caught whose parents were members of the upper middle class income bracket.

Other findings of the class survey which agree with national norms include the fact that males commit all delinquent acts more frequently than females. Males on the average committed 13 out of the 49 crimes listed on the

McPherson College self-report.

Female students, however, admitted to committing an average of only 6.14 offenses. The overall average number of offenses committed by those participating was 9.52 offenses per student. A total of 2,171 offenses were reported.

Offenses included in the survey ranged from skipping school without an excuse to homicide. From this study, no conclusions have yet been drawn about what type of juvenile in association to his economic level or size of community commit what type of crimes more frequently. For example, the relatively common misdemeanor vs. the serious criminal charge.

The incidence of delinquency in urban and rural areas really couldn't be accurately compared because a much larger number of respondents came from rural areas or small communities. The results did tell the researchers that juvenile delinquency is certainly not limited to the urban or inner-city youth.

"The report is reflective of our society as an alcoholic society," stated Prof. Moore. "That fact shows up even on our campus which can validly be considered a more conservative sampling."

71.5 per cent of the 228 students surveyed admitted to giving or attending parties where liquor was served while under the age of 18; 56.1 per cent said that they had bought or drunk liquor while still under age. Of these surveyed, 42.1 per cent admitted to drunkenness. These results are comparable to nationwide studies on the subject.

Steve Newcomer, sr, Rocky Ford, Colo, who was responsible for compiling the statistics of the survey, and is a juvenile delinquency class member, said that the overall percentages were relatively low but corresponded to national levels.

"We came up basically with the same results, but in a milder way," explained Prof. Moore.

Some findings of the class survey were not in accord with national self-report study results. For instance, the crime of shoplifting is a traditionally female crime but on our campus males admitted to shoplifting more often. Students answering the survey were also below the national norm on participation in pre-marital sex.

Prof. Moore attributed some of these differences to the more traditional nature of the women students attending McPherson College.

Steve believes that most people were honest in filling out the self-reports. "Only about five or six of them were eliminated because we suspected they might have been fake. We were pretty satisfied with the end results," he stated.

Further results of the survey show significant differences in the committing of delinquent acts by male and female juveniles.

Trustees involved in fall meetings

by Ken Hogle

As most of McPherson College was busy preparing for what turned out to be a rather soggy homecoming weekend, the McPherson College Board of Trustees was also hard at work plugging its way through the annual fall meeting.

The meetings, which took place Oct. 20 and 21, began Thursday afternoon as the board and the different committees met in open session with interested students. Touring the campus and many campus buildings, sharing an evening meal, and attending the play, "Comedy of Errors," were all on Thursday's agenda.

"In general, I feel we had some very productive and encouraging meetings," commented Dr. Glendon Button, board member representing the Northern Plains District.

Thirty-eight persons, including members, ex-officio members, staff members, one faculty and one student observer attended the total board session Friday.

Dr. Button, who has served on the board for eight years now, believes, "One of the more important accomplishments of the meeting was to take a detailed look at the budgeting and finances and also circulation. Some of this hasn't been scrutinized or worked out in the detail it is now."

A report outlining the major items discussed at the meeting was issued to faculty, staff and student council members from Pres. Hoffman.

Some of the more routine items of business included receiving reports from the admissions, education, development, finance and investment, and campus life committees.

Pres. Hoffman gave a report related to fiscal matters as is usual for fall meetings of the trustee board.

Dates for the spring meetings were set for March 2-3.

Dr. Button is concerned about the board-student relationship. He believes the open meetings are "an excellent idea," but does not think that students or anyone not on the board can really understand the complexity of it all. He hopes more students will take it upon themselves to visit with trustees so that the students and trustees, and in turn the whole college, may benefit.

KCAC tomorrow

Harriers place fifth at Hays

by Ben Hilton

After running a strong race last week at the Fort Hays State Meet, the Bulldogs are preparing to give their all in tomorrow's run for the KCAC title.

Defending champs from both '75 and '76, this year's cross country team will face stiff competition from strong Bethany and Kansas Wesleyan teams. Southwestern and Bethel colleges will also be contending in tomorrow's race.

Anticipating the race, Senior Dave Burgess commented, "It's going to be a tough race. Individually, any one of the top nine runners in the conference could win. As far as the teams go, we've won it before and we know what it's about. I think we can win."

"Whoever wants it the most," commented Jim Kitson, "will win

it. It will take 100 per cent effort from every runner."

Coach Dewayne Jackson said, "The team has been improving tremendously all year. It made a good performance at Hays, however, they must run their season's best race in order to win the conference. It will take tremendous team effort and student support for a KCAC victory."

At Hays last Saturday, Mac came out on top of both Kansas Wesleyan and Bethany, respectively. Fort Hays State took first followed by Marymount, an Emporia State Mid-America Nazarene College. The Bulldogs took fifth overall.

Individually, Dave Burgess placed ninth. Behind him came Albert Zavala, Harold Spencer and Ben Hilton in a continuous string as they placed 32nd, 33rd and 34th, respectively. Jim Kitson placed 37th and Jim Lovercame came in 42nd.

Battling Bulldogs to meet Bethel in conference game

by John Angerame

A revived defense and an occasionally brilliant offense describes the Bulldog's 14-7 losing effort in last Saturday's game with conference contender Friends University.

The Falcons, with two early touchdown runs in the first quarter were looking for a quick runaway, but were soon to be denied, as the "bend but never break" Bulldog defense shut them out from then on.

The offense showed power in the runs of Eli Martin, and also in the efforts of quarterback Toby Rutledge when he broke loose up the middle for a 70 yard run to the one yard line.

On the next series of plays he capped the scoring drive with a one yard quarterback sneak for the Bulldogs' only tally.

Coach Don Rominger stated, "Our offense did a fine job moving the ball. We had more total offensive yards than Friends, but we continued to fall short of the goal line."

However, the thirsty Bulldogs are ready for a taste of victory and everyone will be up for the last home game of the season against Bethel Saturday night.

Receiver, Tom Dematteo, soph, Hoboken, N.J., said, "We've been through a lot. I think we'll get it all together against Bethel."

The Bulldogs are looking for a good turnout at McPherson College stadium to help support them and cheer them on in their last chance for a victory at home against the Bethel Threshers.

Women's tennis team places at state meet

by Lisa Gaskill

Closing the 1977 tennis season, the Mac women finished second in state competition at Hays last Friday and Saturday.

Fort Hays State won first place with 18 points, McPherson had ten and Benedictine College had two points. The win enables Hays to advance to the Region VI tournament next spring at Iowa City.

Lisa Gaskill defeated Benedictine and Hays but lost to Pittsburg's entry. Karen Burkholder won over Benedictine's number-two player and lost a three-setter to Hays.

Ann Lobban came up against stiff competition losing to both Benedictine and Hays. In the number-four singles Sam Cordell defeated Benedictine, but lost to Hays. Roxanne Hill won over Benedictine and lost to Hays. Janice Monk defeated Benedictine in number-six singles but was defeated by Hays.

The winning pattern continued as McPherson took all the doubles matches from Benedictine and lost all to Hays. The number-one team of Gaskill and Burkholder also lost to Pittsburg and won over Southwestern, the 1977 KCAC doubles champions.
