

New music faculty add dimensions

One step beyond listening to music is creating it. McPherson college is prepared to help you express yourself through music. The department, located in Beeghly Hall, offers choir, pep band, jazz band and concert band. Keyboard, string instruction and private lessons are also available. Five faculty members steer the department. Paul Solleberger, associate professor of music and strings, heads the department, and Larry Kitzel, assistant professor of music, is director of the bands as well as wind and brass ensembles. Private vocal instruction is given by Delores Axelson.

Two new members of the staff include Kenneth and Joann Forsyth. Mr. Forsyth is choir director and is also in charge of "Opus." Mrs. Forsyth will teach private piano and organ lessons and instruct four piano classes.

The choir, meeting daily at noon, is a combination of 57 voices.

"I want to delve into all kinds (of music), music that can be used in many different types of programs. This includes showtunes, madrigal numbers, religious songs and vocal jazz," stated Prof. Forsyth.

Prof. Crook is enthusiastic about turning Frantz Hall into an efficient place to work in the area of ceramics.

THE VELOCIPEDES ARE an energetic group on the Mac campus. They rise early on Saturday mornings and take off from the gym parking lot at 8 am to explore the surrounding countryside on bicycles. For more information, contact Larry Kitzel.

Teachers, administrators added

by Greg Fenno

With the new academic year at McPherson college has come a variety of new persons to fill administrative, faculty, and staff positions. In addition to a new Vice President for Student Services, six full-time and three part-time instructors have been added to McPherson College's faculty roster.

"All new faculty members were selected on the basis of credentials submitted on a competitive basis," says Dr. Leland L. Lengel, acting Associate Dean of Academics.

New to McPherson College is Dr. Edward R. Butler, Vice President of Student Services. This office entails overseeing work done by the departments of admissions, athletics, financial aids, counseling, campus activities, housing, placement, orientation and campus ministry.

Dr. Butler comes from Bowling Green State University in Ohio where he was coordinator of the Graduate Guidance and Counseling program for seven years. Dr. Butler received his B.S. degree from McPherson College, and his Ed.M and Ph.D degrees from the State University of New York at Buffalo.

David H. Hennings is an Assistant Professor in Physical Chemistry, and is completing his Ph.D at the University of Nebraska where he has taught since 1975.

Newcomers in the Industrial Education department are James M. Rose and Wesley Pauls. Rose is from Oklahoma and received his M.S. degree from Northeastern Oklahoma State University. He is currently an Assistant Professor in Industrial Education.

Wesley Pauls received his B.A. degree from Tabor College, and his M.A. degree from Fresno State University.

New faculty members in the Business and Economics Department are Marvin Sellberg and Michael Warner. Sellberg, Assistant Professor of Business and Economics, received his A.A. degree from Central College, and his M.B.A. degree from the University of Chicago. Warner, Assistant Professor of Economics and Business Administration, received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

Additions to the Music Department include Kenneth and Joann

Forsyth. Mr. Forsyth formerly taught at Salina South in Salina, Kans. He received his B.S. degree from Southwestern College, and his M.M.E. degree from Wichita State University. He is director of the McPherson College Concert Choir and Opus III as well as an instructor of choral techniques, conducting and arranging. Mrs. Forsyth formerly taught at Kansas Wesleyan University. She received both her B.M.E. and M.M. degrees from Wichita State.

New part-time faculty members include Lester E. Crook, Jr. who is an instructor in art. He received his B.F.A. degree from Bethany College, M.A. (printmaking) degree from Kansas State University, and his M.F.A. (ceramics) degree from Nebraska University. Cindy Mines is Publicity Director as well as advisor for campus publications. She received her B.A. degree from McPherson College and is currently completing her master's degree at Wichita State University. Sue Quay is the new Director of Campus Activities. She received her B.A. degree from McPherson College. She and her husband Jeff are Resident Directors of Metzler Hall.

Painting the White House peach?

by Jim Benedict

This is MAC news correspondent James Benedict in Washington. Early today in a pre-dawn news conference, President Carter, surrounded by his immediate family and a few close friends, and under the guidance of press secretary Jody Powell, became only the second man in the history of this country to resign from the office of the President of these United States.

In a speech that shocked the entire civilized world, and indeed, even parts of North Dakota, the President expressed his sorrow and deep regret in the fact that he was not able to complete his term.

He went on to say that the limitations and opposition he had encountered in his attempts to execute his duties had caused him to lose "... a degree of faith in the American system."

The actual point of contention, according to sources close to the President, seems to involve the recently announced plans of the President to plant peanuts on the plot of ground presently known in Washington circles and elsewhere as the White House lawn.

It appears that Congress, meeting in a special session last night, voted overwhelmingly against the executive proposal that would have allowed Carter to plant an initial three acre crop in 1978, and to expand in later years.

A spokesman for Congress reported that, after listening to testimony from subcommittee hearings dealing with the matter, only seventeen congressmen would support the plan.

President Carter is credited with saying that he felt his administration had come to an irreversible standstill in its pursuit of "... equality, freedom, justice and all the other values implicit within the Constitution.

Vice President Mondale, upon hearing the announcement, commented that he tended to agree with the President in theory and principle, and added that he was also tempted to resign. However, he went on to explain that, in the spirit of modern politics, he wasn't going to let a little thing like principles stand between him and the Oval office.

In the exclusive interview, MAC discovered that the agricultural conflict may have only been the tip of the proverbial iceberg. In speaking with Peat Moss, head groundskeeper at the White House and Harvard extension agronomist, details of further plans of the President to improve the White House property were uncovered.

Moss, whose testimony greatly influenced the members of Congress when he claimed that soil conditions precluded the possibility of any economic success with a White House peanut crop, disclosed that earlier in the year, Carter had inquired with his staff about the possibility of painting the White House a different color, allegedly a shade of orangish pink known as Georgia Peach.

Moss quoted the President as saying, "Peat, ol' boy, what do you all think about brightenin' the place up a bit? All this white is a little drab, don't you think?"

Though neither this or any of the other claims of Mr. Moss have been substantiated by either the President or his press service, political analysts say that there is a definite possibility that the allegations are, in fact, on the up and up.

Also received was a telegram from a Mr. R. Nixon consoling the President and saying the he had it from good sources that Carter could now make many times his present salary with much less responsibility. At the bottom of the telegram was a telephone number which has since been traced to David Frost, English journalist and talk show host. Once again, this is Jim Benedict, MAC news, Washington.

Student director opens fall season

Deb Stong, familiar to last year's theatre audiences as Luciana, Mrs. Thoreau, and Antigone, is directing Samuel Beckett's "Waiting for Godot" as her senior project in theatre. The play will be performed September 22-24 in the Little Theatre.

"Godot" is a good example of theatre of the absurd. The London Times has called it "... one of the most noble and moving plays of our generation, a threnody of hope deceived and deferred, but never extinguished; a play suffused with tenderness for the whole human perplexity; with phrases that come like a sharp stab of beauty and pain."

It is a tragicomedy in two acts, with a cast of five persons — Estragon played by Lisa Irle; Vladimir, Kyle Robinson; Lucky, Mark Mueller; Pozzo, Joan Cunnick; and as the messenger, Kathy Deitz.

The crew includes most of the cast and Theresa Netolicky, house manager, Deb Lolling, costumes, and Lori Christy, on props.

"'Godot' is a play with theological overtones, and that is one reason it appeals to me as much as it does. It was not easy choosing a play for my senior project, but once I chose 'Godot,' I had no doubts or second thoughts about it," says Deb.

Deb has changed some of the characters in the play around to suit her needs. Pozzo and Estragon have been given female roles as opposed to the male roles Beckett wrote for them.

"'Godot' has a lot of symbolism in it, but not enough to leave the audience puzzled or with a feeling of a sermon being thrust down their throats. It is a deeply sensitive play, and I am sure of my cast. They can give it all the depth it needs."

EDITORIAL

Editor encourages use of communicative outlet

Searching my brain for some new and different ideas on what to say in this introductory editorial did not prove very successful.

I chose to look through past issues of the Spectator and hope for inspiration from the wisdom-filled words of former editors.

This proved to be equally unhelpful and did not leave me with any revelations or crucially important points to direct at the student body.

However, this did come to mind. The Spectator has, for many years, been a vital, informative publication. Whether its pages were filled with student grievances relating to food service, dorm visitation or some other factor of campus life, or perhaps earlier news of no new pajama parades and freshman initiation controversies, the Spec has provided us with a record of McPherson College, its people and what has happened to them each week.

This is not to say that the paper has been a continual example of top-notch, first-rate, up-to-date, journalistic style, nor that it will be this semester.

I believe it is relevant though, that there is a paper here, one that, in the words of a former Spectator editor is here to "encourage positive ideas from which McPherson College will benefit."

The fall of 1978 at McPherson College will be recorded in the pages of the Spectator. Students, faculty and administrators have the chance, and are welcomed, to take advantage of this potentially communicative outlet.

Letters to the editor will be published within the limits of space, good taste and the laws of libel.

To get a letter to Spectator editors, address it to the Spectator and drop it in the campus mail; give it to one of the editors; or leave it in the Spec office, which is located in the southeast corner of the SU basement.

Letter to the editor

'Majority of one'

Editor's note: The following letter was written in response to a bulletin concerning the Minority Student Union. The bulletin was distributed through the campus mail to all minority students.

Dear Editor:

Why is there all this discrimination against the person because he or she may be from a different country, of a different color, of a different religion? Why this stigma of them being a minority?

People here seem to revel in the idea of a minorities union. But that's ridiculous! I would think more people would be insulted at being labeled a minority — but they seem to thrive on and take a distinct pleasure in it.

I have been called a minority here. Because I am Indian and not American, because I am brown and not white, because I am Hindu and not Christian. So what? Does that make me any less of a person? Does that make me a minority or does it make me "a majority of one?"

A minorities' union seems to me to be a very definite example of discrimination, and I thought America was against discrimination. A minority students' union defeats the very purpose for which it was made. Instead of encouraging free mingling between people of different nations and creeds, it binds them together in their own little clique. It is, if anything, anti-social.

And if, after all, people still insist on having a minority students' union, students should be recruited for it like for any other club and not automatically made members if they don't want to be.

Do I have to stand on a rooftop and shout — "Hey world, look at me! I'm up here. And I'm a majority — a majority of one!"

Sincerely,
Smita Nirula

Que pasan ustedes todos? Well, vacation is over and the Cisco Kidd is back. So let's cut the intro and get down to the music biz.

Commercial Rock: The fall has brought two long awaited lp releases from two dynamic groups. Boston with, "Don't Look Back," (which will be platinum by the time you read this), and "Who Are You," by The Who. Joe Cocker is trying to get back into the sing of things with his, "Luxury You Can Afford." Here's a goodie from the best band to come out of Boston since J. Geils, it's the new album by The Cars-of the same name.

"Fame," is the new release from Grace Slick, not to mention, "Heavy Horses," by Jethro "Living in the Past" Tull.

Rhythm & Blues: The provocative and shocking Miss Millie Jackson has released her, "Get It Out'cha System." If you've seen the back of the album cover you'll know what I mean by shocking. By the way, it will be the score for an off Broadway play of the same name. The original vocalist on the hit tune, "I Can't Stand The Rain," Ann Peebles, has released her new disc, "The Handwriting Is On The Wall." The new lp by the Staple Singers, "Unlock Your Mind," promises to be a winner—check it out if you will.

The album, "Rose Royce Strikes Again," by producer Norman Whitfield and Rose Royce (their third lp) disappointed this writer by not being quite as funky as their last effort, "In Full Bloom," but the group's popularity will probably carry it past gold. Finally, in October, be sure to catch the new E,W & F album. It contains the track, "Got To Get You Into My Life," from the movie Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

Kool Jazz: Are you wondering why that, "Night Watch," lp by Kenny Loggins is so hot? Well, ask jazz pianist Bob James, he produced it. Quincy Jones knocked em' dead with his, "Sounds... and Stuff Like That!," album, which is almost a phonographic equivalent of an all-star Hollywood movie.

Guest artists featured included Erie Gale, Ashford and Simpson, herbie Hancock and Chaka Khan, just to name a few. The album should be double platinum by the time you read this. And, last but not least, is the third album from the award winning group, Caldera, entitled, "Time and Change."

This ought to hold you for now. Until next time, adios—Cisco.

Orientation of new arrivals

How do you tell someone all about college in a few hours? That was the problem faced by 37 orientation leaders and administrative personnel as they prepared for Orientation-1978.

Dr. Edward Butler, Vice-President of Student Services, Joanne Hamlin, Assistant Dean of Students, and Mitch McGee, Career Counselor, conducted an all day work session on Aug. 26 for those sophomores, juniors, and seniors who helped with the orientation activities.

Orientation is designed to get new students better acquainted with the school and its operations. There is also opportunity for questions to be asked and time for meeting others.

In previous years, the new students have been taken to a camp site where their orientation groups met. This year, the groups did not rough it in the wilderness, but met in dorm rooms in Bittinger Hall for group meetings.

Some of the purposes of this year's orientation activities included helping the new students to actually express what types of goals and values they hold, as well as letting them meet some of the others who would be attending McPherson College.

A few of the activities during orientation included an address to parents and new students from college President Paul Hoffman, an orientation hunt and tours of McPherson.

As could be expected, reactions to orientation were varied. When asked why he did not attend some of the group meetings, Lloyd Snell, fr., McFarland, Calif., commented, "I was just busy around the dorm getting the room ready and getting to know the other guys better."

Mary Jane Mason, one of the orientatin leaders, jr., Udel, Ia., said, "I really enjoyed orientation and I think I had more fun than my group did."

Tom Crist, fr., McPherson. stated, "I felt that I was well oriented, but being a Mac resident I knew a lot about the college already."

Melody Sweeney, fr., Floyd, Va., said, "I thought most of the activities were boring, but I enjoyed meeting the other people."

If anyone has other views they would like to express or improvements which could be implemented into future orientation schedules please contact one of the administrators in the Student Services office.

Gragg brings experience

McPherson College acquired a new football coach this year, and it appears that a successful season is on the agenda. Our new football coach is Johnnie Gragg.

Gragg who has been married for twenty-two years and has three daughters, started his football playing career in high school at Cherokee, Oklahoma. He started on the team all four years and two of those years his team won the state playoffs.

From high school he went to the University of Oklahoma for one and a half years, and then on to three years at Austin College in Sherman, Tex. There he played defensive halfback his first two years, and both defensive halfback and offensive halfback his senior year. He was a three year letterman and co-captain.

After college football, Gragg began a seventeen year high school coaching career in Texas and Oklahoma. Fifteen years of his seventeen years at coaching, his team either won or was runner-up in their league or conference.

When he coached football at Minco, Okla., his team won the state championships in 1968 and 1970. Also while at Minco, Gragg's team held the record for the best three year record in the state with 38 wins and one loss.

Foreign students enroll

by Tim Krehbiel

On August 23, three Ugandan citizens stepped off a jet at Wichita's Mid Continent Airport. These three young men were in the United States for the first time. They were about to begin their college educations at McPherson.

"I like it. The people are friendly," related John Hermans Mukalazi, after his first two weeks at McPherson College. Also on campus from Uganda are Andrew Nyakatura and Sam Rwakoojo.

Five more Ugandan students should arrive shortly.

The ACCK, working cooperatively with African Enterprises, an international Christian organization, has arranged for 30 Ugandan students to attend ACCK colleges this year.

Currently, their country is in a state of political turmoil and constant terrorism. Andrew, John and Sam will remain in the United States for the next four years and continue to pray that Uganda will once again become free and peaceful.

Living in the U.S. and attending college in McPherson has given them freedoms they could not obtain in Uganda. But with his face reflecting deep thought, Sam explained, "I love freedom. I love everything about this country. But home is home. Home is best."

Soccer season begins

The McPherson Soccer Club played its first game of the season September 7 against Central College. The team is playing a series of games that are non-league games during the off season.

Last spring, McPherson, with a 7-1 record, acquired a second place honor in the Kansas Soccer League. The league is affiliated with the Heart of America Soccer League, and offers a broader competitive opportunity to the teams involved.

The team plans to enter the Kansas Soccer League during the spring season, and for now, concentrate on organizing team members. They also need to budget enough money to acquire some equipment and pay their league fees.

The team is organized on a volunteer basis and welcomes anyone interested in spending one hour a day in practice and playing occasional games this fall. For additional information, contact Ruben Carrion or come to the daily practice at 5:30 pm in front of Fahnestock Hall.

The results of the game against Central were Central 2, Mac 1. Some comments from the players revealed that they believe more practice, more games and perhaps support from a regular coach who could organize the team would be beneficial.

Sports update

Tennis; Cross Country

Mac's women netters are on the courts again. For the past two years, the team has won the KCAC championship. This year's nine member team exceeds the turn out that Coach Doris Coppock had expected.

"I predict a winning season!" stated Coach Coppock. Because the team consists mainly of underclassmen, has a bright outlook for the next couple of years.

Karen Burkholder, the only returning player, seems ready for the approaching season. She and the other players expect to have a lot of fun on the trips to the various regional matches.

The first match of the season took place Wednesday at Bethany. The Swedes are usually one of the women's toughest competitors, but no results of the match were available at press time.

Today at 2 pm, the team will meet Southwestern, another tough opponent, in their first home match. Tuesday, they will meet Bethel in another home match at 2 pm.

Today four members of the cross country team will head for Wichita to participate in the Wichita State University Classic. It should be a big meet, and Coach Don Rominger states that the runners will actually just take advantage of the opportunity for some practice.

But as for the rest of the season, Coach Rominger believes that, "the conference runner-up title would be a reasonable prospective for the team." Kansas Wesleyan is viewed as the favorite during the 1978 season.

Running the distance for Mac are Lyle Grosbach, fr., Enders, Nebr., Jim Kitson, jr., Haven, John Moyer, fr., Leoti, Harold Spencer, soph., Kansas City and Albert Zavala, sr., Rocky Ford, Colo. Albert will not be participating in the WSU competition.

Even without the outstanding times of Dave Burgess, a cross country star during his years at Mac, Coach Rominger still sees the team as "about as good as last year's." He cites the hard individual, pre-season training that the team has gone through as a big factor in his successful outlook.

During a recent women's volleyball practice, Peggy Davis, jr., Quinter, concentrates intently on her serving technique. Practice began Sept. 1. The 13 participants meet at 3 pm each weekday and 8 am on Saturdays. Their first match is a triangular, Sept. 19 at McPherson against Cloud County and Central College.

Bulldogs ready for action

by Greg Upshaw

McPherson's Bulldog football team is expected to have a good season this fall. They hope to start climbing back up to a competitive level. Currently, the squad consists of 67 players, 52 of them freshman. This shows the outstanding recruiting job the coaches did for the coming season.

Coach Larry Latimer states that, "Most of the players are very tough." Another assistant coach, James Brooks says, "There are a lot of fine freshmen out there this year, and some good freshmen kickers. With a lot of timing on offense they could be tough."

I also am looking forward to a better season," adds Head Coach Johnnie Gragg. His special goals are to make the Bulldogs good enough to be a competitive team again and to win the KCAC.

Mac's strengths lie in the depth of its running backs, (who were recruited in the fall) and the power of its defense, which is very strong again this year.

Their weaknesses lie in the fact that they are a very young, inexperienced football team.

Lester Finney, offensive guard believes, "The people out this year are very aggressive ball players, especially at the running back positions." Lester also comments that he would "hate to be the coach who has to pick the starting backfield."

Keith Hunter, offensive running back, says, "We are going to have a better season than last year." Keith's personal goal is to work hard enough to get into the starting lineup.

Here are some key players to watch for: Offensive strong side guard Bart Odyer, Butch Jones, a strong side end and punter, and Keith Hunter, Odell Crawford, Darcey Schwindt and Excell Lafayette, running backs. Quarterbacks Johnny Rutledge, Johnney Leger and Jerry Legins will see action.

Key defensive players you'll be watching include, inside linebackers Steve Lockett, Mike Baker and Don Peterson. Frank Freeman will be in the defensive tackle position for Mac.

From the looks of things, the Bulldogs are looking forward to winning some games, and the season should be a fair one. McPherson will open its season in an away game at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow against the Sterling Warriors.
