KANSAS TUITION GRANT checks for grants and scholarships are here. Please go to the Business Office and sign yours. All checks that aren't signed by Wednesday will be sent back and you will not get your grant.

BRETHREN COLLEGES ABROAD is now accepting applicants for their junior year abroad in Germany, Spain, France or England. Why not get away from it all and experience life in Europe first hand. The European university centers offer a wide variety of options in study, and any major can be worked out. You don't have to be a language major to go. Opportunities for Rotary club scholarships exist, but you need to start planning now for the year of 1980-81, since the scholarships are awarded a year in advance. For more information concerning a junior year abroad, BCA, and the Rotary Club scholarships, contact Jan van Asselt.

DON'T FORGET THAT Tuesday is the last day to register to vote in the Nov. 7 general election.

PIZZA NITE WILL be Wednesday at 9 p.m. Each person can create their own pizza by piling on as many ingredients as desired. Each different topping will cost ten cents and that's the entire cost for the pizza. Come on and join the fun!

THE NEXT CONVOCATION is scheduled for Thursday. Speaker Jan Gleysteen will be discussing "European Roots of Anabaptist Past."

OFF-CAMPUS STUDENTS, FACULTY and staff: Cost of the food getting you down? Beat inflation, eat at the cafeteria. Buy $12.00 worth of meals for $10.00. Purchase this fabulous ticket in the cafeteria office.

CONGRESSMAN DAN GLICKMAN recently notified the McPherson Associated Colleges that they will be receiving $185,500 in funding through the Basic Institutional Development Program for the period from Sept. 1, 1978 to Aug. 31, 1979. According to college officials, the funding will be used to support and expand programs in student services, faculty development, career planning and development, and administrative services. McPherson College and Central College comprise the McPherson Associated Colleges.

D. EUGENE LICKTY has been named acting Director of Development, Dr. Merlin Frantz announced last week.

ANYONE INTERESTED in the position of campus editor for the ACCK Creative Arts Magazine should contact Bob Green or Cindy Mines. One editor from each ACCK school is in charge of soliciting material for the magazine from students on their campus. Students interested in submitting poetry, fiction or art work should also see Green or Mines.

Students practice teaching

by Keith Hunter

Interest in teaching remains high at McPherson College, and once again students have been placed in area schools for a semester of student teaching.

Thirteen seniors have already begun Wednesday observation sessions of the classes they will start teaching Oct. 23.

It is good news for them that 80 percent of last year's McPherson College graduates in the field of education actually got teaching jobs. Of those who were able to move to the places where jobs were offered, 90 percent are now teaching. These percentages are far above those for other Kansas colleges and universities.

Many of the college students will be teaching at elementary schools. At Washington Elementary will be: Karen Burkholder, Buhler, third grade; Sharon Gumm, Des Moines, Iowa, third grade; Jana Koehn, McPherson, special ed.; Robert Neill, Quenemo, fourth grade.

Linda Atherton, Maize, first grade; Tina Roesch, Quinter, special ed. and Peggy Stucky, McPherson, first grade will all be teaching at Lincoln Elementary during this semester.

Park Elementary is where Marie Heddings, Newport News, Va., will be working with special education students. Judy Tharrington, Caldwell, Idaho, will be instructing at Wickersham Elementary.

One student teacher comments, "I enjoy the freedom of working with the elementary students. The classes are fairly well behaved and I'm really looking forward to teaching myself."

Those student teachers facing the challenge of high school and junior high school are as follows: Roger Carswell, Quenemo, will instruct history at Buhler High School and Marjean Claassen, Armstrong, Iowa, will teach home economics at Inman High. Also working on the senior high level is Debbie Stong, Ankeny, Iowa, in the area of speech and drama. Celia Stover, Manhattan, will be teaching physical education on the junior high level.

"I feel we have a very qualified group of college students out teaching in the area schools this year, and I am hoping to develop some fine teachers from McPherson College," comments Monroe Highbanks, professor of education.

Maintenance workers renovate; new faces for two dorms

Besides the regular annual cleaning done to campus buildings each summer, the maintenance department took on other major projects.

After general repairs were completed, all rooms and hallways in Fahnstock Hall were repainted. Ceilings in second and third floor rooms were lowered and false ceilings installed in all hallways. Dotzour's halls were repainted.

Lounge and room furniture were reupholstered in Dotzour, Fanny and Metzler. A certain amount of reupholstery work is done each summer.

Administrative changes

Hoffman reorganizes positions

McPherson College's administrative staff has two vice presidents this year and plans are being made for a third, as a part of President Hoffman's proposal for restructuring the administration.

The reorganization did not involve adding new staff. Since President Hoffman has been in office, staff positions have actually been decreased. "I think in our restructuring, we did not increase, although we did add a person in admissions," comments President Hoffman.

We no longer have a Dean of Students. Instead, we have a Vice President of Student Services. The position, held by Dr. Ed Butler, coordinates the work of housing, admissions, athletics, financial aid, counseling, campus activities, placement, orientation, and campus ministry, as well as the previous responsibilities of the Dean of Students. Dr. Merlin Frantz, Vice President of Administrative Services, gives leadership to the development of institutional finance and continues with his previous job as Academic Dean.

Eventually, there is to be a third vice president whose duties will deal with academic services. As of yet, no announcements have been made regarding the third position.

When all the jobs have been filled, the three Vice Presidents will work together. They will meet every week to review business and keep each other informed on pertinent concerns.

A number of reasons prompted President Hoffman's decision to restructure the administration.

The College's former president, Galen Snell, set a direction which President Hoffman is continuing. It involves "the president playing a major role in fund raising and in cultivating churches and major gifts and things of that type."

The president's need to be out of town such a large percentage of the time constitutes the background for President Hoffman's first purpose in restructuring the administration. As he says, "we need to have decisions made on campus when the president is gone."

"The second reason is that if you have so many varied people reporting to the president, it limits coordination because coordination has to be at the president's office," stated Hoffman. When everyone must get the president's reaction before they can move on a situation, it delays the solution of that problem.

Hoffman describes his absences before the restructuring as times when "there was a lot of standing still, a lot of inaction." With the new organization of the administration, this situation should be remedied.

President Hoffman recalls that at one time, he had eleven people who reported directly to him including the campus minister, the directors of development, admissions, athletics, and institutional research, the business manager and treasurer, and others. With so many people reporting straight to him, he did not have the time needed to work with his financial duties.

"The reasons for not having just one vice president is the same reason that you would not have eleven people reporting to the president," says Hoffman. "It's just an overwhelming amount of work and unnecessary."

"Narrowing up the administration and making position descriptions and so on is what is seen as a good direction in higher education," comments President Hoffman. The North Central Association, the accrediting agency for McPherson College, "was pretty concerned about our administrative structure" when they visited the campus last spring.

Through these improved channels, the president expects to put more emphasis into peer counseling, vocational testing, and vocational counseling, with extra stress on student retention. Overall, how does President Hoffman think his restructuring will effect the college campus? "I think it's going to help us get answers a lot faster."

Royalty candidates selected

Homecoming royalty candidates for 1978 consist of students with a variety of interests and backgrounds. Queen candidates are Karen Brubaker from La Mirada, Calif.; Tina Roesch from Quinter; and Lynda Atherton from Maize. All are seniors majoring in education.

Freshman Attendant Candidates for the festivities are: Tammy Roesch, an education major from Quinter; Melody Sweeney, an interior design major from Copper Hill, Va.; Brenda Pote, a biology major from Wichita; and Karla Wilson from Wichita.

Alan Gumm, a computer science major from Prairie City, Iowa; Tom Neher, a psychology major from Quinter; Dallas Darling, a history major from Inman; and Armando Alvarez, a psychology major from Orlando Fla.; are the Freshman Escorts.

Students rough it on wilderness trip in Colorado

Jana Flory

The rugged Weminuche Wilderness region, the second largest wilderness area in the United States, was the scene of a study of natural history, ecology, and conservation in the context of camping and backpacking this summer.

"My appreciation of the wilderness was increased because of the trip," stated Gary Hogle, sr., Conrad, Iowa, one of the 14 participants.

For the seventh consecutive year, Dr. Gilford Ikenberry, professor of biology, and his wife, Nelda, sponsored the wilderness experience which took place June 2-21. The class was designed "to develop in the participants an understanding of an appreciation for the conservation of mountain wilderness, its wildlife, its natural resources and its beauty."

A Hesston College professor and students from Tabor, Bethel, and McPherson, as well as two graduates, comprised the group. They traveled by van from McPherson to set up camp in the San Juan National Forest near Durango, Colo.

During the three week excursion, these people learned to know each other very well. "It was interesting to watch the group become closer as we progressed along," Gary observed.

While at base camp during the first two weeks, two trips were made into Durango for supplies, day hikes were taken to areas near base camp as well as two overnight hikes of increasing difficulty into higher elevations.

The hikes included informal instruction by Dr. and Mrs. Ikenberry on flowers, trees, birds, and mammals.

The wilderness experience was offered for four hours of graduate or undergraduate credit. The course requirements included keeping a daily log, writing a journal and doing a project of personal choice. The van became a large portable library; a source of reading and research material for the students.

The final week was to involve riding the historic Durango to Silverton narrow gauge railroad followed by an extended backpacking trip into the San Juan primitive areas. However, huge amounts of snow prevented the completion of the planned pack trip. Consequently, the group subdivided and traveled on their own.

With no trail to follow, Ken Hogle, soph., Conrad, Iowa, Gary Hogle, and Don Swank, sr., Poplar, Mont., hiked through a valley and up a mountain.

They were far from any clearings, which made it especially difficult to set up camp for the adventure.

"It was important to me," says Gary, "to try and realize how I would adjust to a totally different environment. At times you want to escape from adjusting, but that's not reality. You must make yourself absorb what's around you."

Sonja Andreas, jr., McPherson, Gayle Frantz, soph., Wichita, and Barb Ramsey, sr., Washington D.C., used a map and compass and hiked above timberline to Frozen Lake for two nights.

Because of the severe cold, they were forced to retreat to their sleeping bags for warmth at 7:30 p.m. each night.

Describing it as her most meaningful experience, Barb enjoyed the three day outing and the excitement of trying to survive on their own.

Previous camping experience was not a prerequisite for participation in the wilderness experience. But persons involved were encouraged to above average physical activity primitive living conditions wilderness.

"It was a great experience," Kay Ann Porter, sr., Quinter, "scenery was super." The meaningful part was "being away from civilization and just being a meditate. Getting away from race makes you think about what really have here."

College students assist day care center

by Greg Fenno

When I was assigned to do a story on the McPherson Early Childhood Development Center I thought, "I know as much about this as I do cooking," which is nothing. When I walked into the Center (located in the Church of the Brethren education building) to interview Margaret Bender, the new director of the Center, she was not in her office.

Proceeding down the corridor, I heard a television screaming out an advertisement. I walked toward the noise and came to a doorway. Inside, I saw a young woman watching the television. She was surrounded by approximately 30 small children resting on small green cots.

I saw an occasional eye open, then immediately shut. They were watching me too.

We left the naproom and I spoke with

Mrs. Bender about the Center, the children and the McPherson and Central College students who participate there as volunteers.

The students work as observers and aides at the Center in connection with psychology and child development classes.

Harold Spencer, soph., Kansas City says that some of his activities at the Center include keeping a log of the children's activities as well as participating in these activities. He says, "They (the children) have adapted to us really well. We try to emphasize individual attention."

Mrs. Bender, a former elementary school teacher in Claflin, Kans., worked at McPherson College for about a year in the Student Development office. But she told me, "It just wasn't for me, I wanted to teach."

The McPherson Early Childhood

Development Center has been in existence for five years and is self supportive. Its size has doubled since it began, and now 36 children between the ages of two and six are cared for there.

Five children of McPherson College students attend the Center and one child of faculty members also attend.

Both youngsters and college students benefit from the arrangement children's favorite daily activity their singing session and the volunteers are right there joining

Mrs. Bender and the rest of Center staff would like to invite McPherson College community Center's annual Halloween program 7 p.m. Oct. 26.

Paul—everybody's friend

by Kathy Cotton

Located in the Student Union is the office of Campus Minister Paul Miller. Coordinating religious activities is the Rev. Miller's main role at McPherson College. Included are Bible studies, vesper services, counseling and prayer breakfasts.

Vesper services are each Wednesday evening at 6 p.m. in the SU Quiet Room. Students and professors alternate in sharing their faith with the group. The Rev. Miller explains, "One week a student will share and the next week a professor will share with the group."

responsible for McPherson College's Christmas convocation each year.

His ministerial background includes a pastoral position at Fresno, Calif. Church of the Brethren for six years before coming to McPherson. He was an Associate Minister of Youth for three years at the LaVerne, Calif. Church of the Brethren, had 21 years of experience at Panther Creek Church of the Brethren in Iowa and served five years in Illinois.

The Rev. Miller attended Iowa State University his freshman year of college and completed his undergraduate studies at McPherson College. He then attended Bethany Seminary in Chicago, Ill. In 1956, the Rev. Miller was awarded an Honorary Doctorate from McPherson College.

Reading, woodworking and golf occupy the Rev. Miller during part of his spare time. He enjoys reading novels, history and biographies, but is "not above reading westerns and sports," he admits jokingly.

Hand crafted candelholders, a dining room table and a coffee table can be found in the Miller's home. The Rev. Miller has constructed these and other projects throughout the years. His current project is a modernized chest of drawers with a walnut finish. He has not had much time for woodworking since he's been living in McPherson, but still enjoys "goofing around" in his workshop.

Playing golf and coaching the team at McPherson College helps the Rev. Miller keep in shape. Coach Miller has led the team since he came to McPherson five years ago.

Although the Rev. Miller has many roles and is involved in various activities, he always has time to listen. The Rev. Miller sums up his feelings by saying, "I try to be available when I'm needed, and I hope I am."

Intramurals begin

It's time again for intramurals. Play began last week with intramural football for the men and tennis for the women. This year several new rules, which were set up by the ACK Intramural Board, will be used in the football games.

Some of the teams which are in the league this year are: Dick's Happy Service, managed by Kevin Carmen; Coconuts, managed by Craig Holman; Dematteo's Team, managed by Tom Dematteo; and the Sooners, with no manager.

At the end of each intramural session, the ACK is going to sponsor intercollegiate championships in which the teams with the most wins from each school will meet.

Supervising the intramural program this year are Micheal Baker and Joni Redmond. Mike says, "This year, the organization of intramurals will be set up a little differently. In each event, there will be awards given for the best athlete in the league and the best team in the league."

At the present time participation is low here at Mac. Joni seems somewhat disappointed in the turnout. "No one seems willing to commit themselves. I was real unhappy with the number of people that we got to sign up for the teams, especially women," she said. Joni added that aside from participants, officials, time keepers, and others are need to help out.

Cross country

Last Saturday, the McPherson College Cross Country team finished fifth at the Bethany invitational.

"I feel this was our best performance so far," said Coach Don Rominger. He believes the team is improving every day.

There are just five people out for cross country, so the squad lacks a great deal of depth. Those five are Jim Kitson, Albert Zavala, Harold Spencer, Lyle Grosbach, and John Moyer.

Tomorrow, the Bulldogs will face the Alumni. This is a very respectable alumni squad, with two former conference champs, Dwayne Jackson '76 and Dave Burgess '77, participating. Other alumni will be Robert Rozallas, Vic Doll, Don Goodfellow and Ivan Torrttes. The race will be a two mile run around the campus area.

"This is a highlight in the cross country team's season," says Coach Don Rominger.

Swedes pass by Bulldogs, 38-14

McPherson's Bulldogs lost a bid for the lead in the KCAC against powerful arch-rival Bethany by a 38-14 score last Saturday at Lindsborg. An early lead over the terrible Swedes, seventh ranked in the nation in the NAIA, with a 13 game winning streak, and before a capacity homecoming crowd, evaporated under a withering passing attack by Bethany.

The Bulldogs came out like gangbusters, playing some of their finest football for the first one-and-a-half quarters, posting a 7-0 lead, but then were sent reeling by a 17 point second period blitz by the Swedes.

Both teams were held scoreless during the opening period, although a fumble pickup, returned for an apparent touchdown by McPherson, was called back. Ignited by this turn of events, the offense took the ball and drove up the field, scoring on a spectacular 32 yard scamper by Darren Staton.

But the resulting ecstasy of McPherson players and fans was short-lived, as Bethany answered with two touchdowns of their own, from 5 and 3 yards out, respectively, by the end of the second quarter. The Swedes also tacked on a 46 yard field goal as time ran out in the half, sending the Bulldogs to the locker room with a 7-17 deficit.

Throughout the second half, McPherson could not get untracked offensively until late in the game, when the score was only academic. Meanwhile, the Bulldog defense, which had been rated 12th best in the nation against the rush, was picked apart by Bethany's vaunted passing attack, which netted fully 359 aerial yards against the hapless Bulldogs.

Bethany scored two touchdowns in the third period, from 1 and 3 yards out, and for the coup de grace, added a 76 yard touchdown bomb in the last quarter. McPherson, however, regained enough composure and pride to engineer a touchdown drive, sparked by a bootleg executed by Johnnie Rutledge for a long gainer, and finished by Butch Jones' acrobatic one-handed catch in the end zone, thrown by Rutledge, from 10 yards out.

On a day when there were few bright spots after mid-way through the second quarter, Coach Johnnie Gragg mentioned some, including Station's touchdown sweep, which was set up by fine pulling blocks; Rutledge's bootleg, which almost went all the way; and Excell Lafayette's reverses, supported by more fine blocks by guards Lester Finney, jr., and Bart O'Dwyer, fr.

Coach Gragg was a bit disappointed that the team did not respond better to Bethany's challenge in what might have been one of the most important games of the players' careers. Insufficient conditioning may have affected the player's performances during the late stages of the long, hot afternoon, when Bethany ran plays from one side of the field to the other.

Kansas Wesleyan will be the opponent for tomorrow's homecoming game. The Coyotes lost a close contest to Sterling last week, 33-26, so they may be tough for the Bulldogs. But our team is due for a big game, and K.W.U. could be the target for the releasing of frustrations pentup from losing 2 of the last 3 games.

Activities scheduled for women

Tennis

In the ACK Tournament at Hillsboro last Saturday, the women's tennis team placed fourth.

Karen Burkholder, playing No. 1 singles, placed third for McPherson and Diane Wyatt, No. 3 singles, also placed third. The No. 1 doubles team of Karen and Kathy Burkholder placed second, and the No. 2 doubles team, Diane Wyatt and Gail Coon, placed third.

Another away match is scheduled for Monday when the team will face Marymount College in Salina.

Wednesday, the team traveled to Wichita to meet Friends, but results of that match were not available at press time.

Oct. 18 and 19 McPherson will participate in the KCAC tournament at Southwestern. The, Oct. 27-28, McPherson will host the State Small College Tournament.

Volleyball

Women's volleyball has seen a lot of action this week. The team has been involved in three different tournaments. They played here Monday, were in Wichita Wednesday and Salina on Friday.

Meeting Bethany and Tabor here on Monday, they lost to Bethany 15-9, 15-10, 15-11, and to Tabor 15-9, 15-10, and 15-9.

Results of the other matches were not available at press time.

Today, the team will travel to Salina for a 7 p.m. triangular meet with Marymount and Kansas Wesleyan.

Their busy schedule continues next week. Tuesday, the women again will head for Salina. This time to meet Kansas Wesleyan and Saint Mary of the Plains at 6 p.m. The team will play Sterling and Bethel here on Thursday at 4:30 p.m.
