'Tis the season for financial statements

by Carol Spate

Christmas! What a wonderful holiday! Time for sleeping, time for roasting chestnuts over an open fire, time for snow, Christmas eve services, lots of scrumptious goodies, and time to start thinking about filling out the FFS (Family Financial Statement).

Although most of us do not look forward to working on the FFS during Christmas vacation, it is a good idea to plan ahead and get forms in early for next year.

John Wagoner, director of financial aid, gives a few suggestions which may help make this process a little less difficult.

First, if you do not wish to apply for state or federal funds, you do not need to fill out the FFS. If you are currently receiving aid directly from the college (such as grant or scholarship money), during the spring you will need to fill out a questionnaire which will ask you the amount of aid you received this year. Your aid for the next school year then will basically be determined on the same basis as it had been for this year.

Secondly, try to have your parents get their income tax returns prepared as early as possible. Use the information from the completed tax return to fill out the FFS. Please do not use estimates. This will save you both money and time. Since financial assistance from Washington is in question for next year, those who get their forms in early will have the best chance of a good financial aid package.

Third, John encourages all Kansas residents to complete section H of the FFS which deals with filing for the Kansas State Tuition Grant.

Fourth, read instructions very carefully.

Once the FFS is completed, send it off with your blessings to ACT. Make a copy of your tax return (form 1040 or 1040A) and send it directly to the college. Do not send a copy of the income tax return to ACT.

John encourages any students having questions about filling out the FFS to ask him about it before sending in the forms. This could save time by not having to make corrections later.

MERRY CHRISTMAS - The college spreads the Christmas spirit with lights decorating the tree in front of Mohler Hall. Adrian Fishburn, fr., Lawrence, helps Merrin Godfrey, (on the ladder) superintendent of buildings and grounds, string the Christmas lights.

Self-study begins for accreditation

by Trudy Christy

Several study committees have begun an evaluation process of various aspects of McPherson College as part of the accreditation by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

This self-study and evaluation process, which results in a college profile book consisting of seven chapters written by the committees and approved by the trustees, is completed prior to each regular North Central team visit.

On the average of every five years, each school and college is accredited by a regional association. McPherson College falls under the jurisdiction of the North Central Association and is fully accredited by them. Their evaluation team will be on campus sometime during the spring of the next academic year.

The North Central team will review the reports prepared by each committee for the college profile and observe the campus, and then recommend an amount of time for which McPherson College should be accredited. The accreditation period, that is the time between evaluations, can be no longer than 10 years and averages around 5 years.

According to Dr. Norma Tucker, the self-evaluation is the main value of the accreditation process because it causes members of the institution to look at what it is doing, what it intends to do, and how to do it better.

Dr. Tucker also explained that accreditation by some association is necessary because it makes it possible for institutions to trust each other's credits when student transfer. If a college is not accredited, questions arise as to the quality of the courses for which one receives credit, and the quality and purposes of the institution itself.

The seven study committees at work now are made up of all campus constituencies; that is faculty, staff, trustees and students are involved in the self-study of the college.

The committee responsible for the profile's first chapter, concerning the institutional mission and purpose, has already completed its work so that the other committees may write their chapters in view of the overall purpose of the college.

The other chapters concern recruitment, admissions and student services; faculty, library and instructional resources; financial resources; educational and learning experiences; institutional governance, organization and administration; and institutional planning.

Eight named to Who's Who

Eight McPherson College students have been selected to have their names appear in the 1982 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges," according to Dr. Norma Tucker who announced the names this week.

The eight seniors who were chosen by the faculty are: Thomas Crist, biology, McPherson; Alan Gumm, speech-theatre and music, McPherson; Charlotte Hayes, philosophy and religion, Geneseo; Lisa Irle, speech-theatre, Warrensburg, Mo.; Celeste Lewallen, special and elementary education, Bisbee, N. Dak.; Patricia Lusk, business administration, Rocky Ford, Colo.; Susan Sundahl, art, McPherson; and Dale Ziegler, industrial arts education, Elizabethtown, Pa.

The seniors are nominated and elected by all faculty members who have been here at least two years. Students are chosen to be on the list on the basis of four criteria: academic ability, service to the institution, involvement in extra-curricular activities, and promise for the future.

They join an elite group of students selected as being among the country's most outstanding campus leaders from more than 1,300 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states and several foreign countries.

Off-campus proposal: standstill

by Memo Zavala

It may be some time before students get a definite reply from the administration concerning the off-campus living proposal which began its way through the proper channels about a year ago.

A year ago last spring, the off-campus living proposal was under consideration by Student Council.

After Stuco's approval, the proposal received approval by 91 percent of the student body itself.

The final three stages which it must pass before it could be put into effect are: to be reviewed by the administration, by President Hoffman, and finally, to be voted on by the trustees.

Off-campus living is a very controversial topic on campus. Separation from the campus community and loss of monies to the college from student's payment on housing are the main arguments against the recommendation.

However, others feel that there must be an alternative to dormitory life. As the policy is now, a student must remain on campus if he or she is under the age of 23, a non-McPherson resident, has attended McPherson College less than four years, is a full-time student, or is unmarried.

Marie Neher, jr., Grundy Center, Ia., and Stuco president, feels that off-campus living for students who qualify under the proposed guidelines (senior status or over 21 years old) would be a super addition to a student's liberal arts education. "You can learn a valuable lesson about living and budgeting," she said.

"I feel that the administration is letting it die by sitting on it until the students become burned out on it," Marie added. "It obviously isn't one of the administration's priorities and has taken last place to other things on their agenda."

Annual fund drive nets $53,000

McPherson College's annual city campaign at the beginning of this month was a success with 85 percent of the $60,000 goal reached within the first days of the drive. At this point the drive has netted $53,000.

Each year the college chooses a prominent business person to spearhead this effort. This person then chooses ten business people, who in turn select three others each to be "callers" who solicit funds. These forty people are matched with forty faculty-staff members from McPherson College. Then these forty "teams" spend a morning asking local businesses for donations to the college.

Max Gumm, associate director of development, says "our goal is $60,000. We have around $53,000 in gifts and pledges now, and we just might reach our goal if a few more businesses come through."

Don Steffes, of McPherson Bank and Trust, was this year's chairperson for the drive. In a letter, he tells us why businesses are so generous with their gifts. "It is obvious...that McPherson College is an exceedingly important part of the community....It is in everyone's best interest, particularly the business community, that the college continue to grow and prosper."

This annual drive nets between 3 and 6 percent of all gifts given to the college each year. Gumm says, "A bad year could make a big dent in scholarship aids."

Choir to sing Bach's Magnificat

by Ken Turner

The McPherson College Choir will present a Christmas Concert consisting of music from J.S. Bach this Sunday at 4 p.m. in the Church of the Brethren.

The feature piece the choir will be performing is Bach's "Magnificat." It was written in 1723 for a Christmas service and according to Prof. Stephanie Graber, choir director, "it is without a doubt one of the greatest choral works ever written."

"The Magnificat" will be performed with a 20 piece orchestra made up of student and community musicians.

Six college faculty and several members of the Church of the Brethren will be singing with the college choir.

Another editor says farewell to troubles and joys of job

Every year the editor of the Spectator has sat at this desk in this deserted office and used this same typewriter (obviously for many years) to write a farewell to his or her readers.

I will follow tradition. Since this tradition has been carried out for many years, it is a little difficult to say anything original. But I do thank the volunteer reporters and photographers for a job well done.

Carolyn Spate has been a tremendous help as managing editor (which translates into "the one who does the dirty work"). She will take over the editorship next semester.

Kevin Burton, who served as campus editor, has also contributed greatly. His flair for journalistic writing was especially appreciated.

On the business end, Dan Coffman kept us in the black by faithfully selling ads each week.

Carolyn, Kevin, Dan and I together with the rest of the small but hard-working staff got the newspaper finished and to you each Friday. (Sometimes it was very doubtful whether everything would actually come together but somehow it always did with everyone's help.)

With this issue of the Spec., I will join the ranks of the editors of the past. Probably all of us editors have wrestled with the same question: Whether this little four-page weekly is worth all the late nights, all the frenzied rush to meet deadlines, whether it's worth writing last minute stories that reporters "forgot" to write, trying to present a fair view of the news, refereeing student opinions, and managing a staff of reporters and photographers.

But in the final analysis it's very worthwhile and gratifying. As a student publication we have served our purpose of not only presenting the news and reflecting student opinion, but also of recording it for future generations. We tried to entertain a bit along the way also. Hopefully you, as readers, also think we have served this purpose and served it well.

I have enjoyed my editorship amidst all the behind the scenes troubles associated with it. I have learned a great deal from the experience. Now I turn it all over to Carolyn Spate, including this reserved space of page 2. Best wishes Carolyn.

'And there were many abiding in the dorms who had kept watch over their books all night . . .'

Editor's note: As the days of reckoning approach, the library becomes the most popular place on campus and lights in dorm windows shine through the night, it is appropriate to reprint this clever piece concerning finals.

This was submitted by Roy Pfaltzgraff and was first printed on May 15, 1964.

And it came to pass, early in the morning of the last day of the semester, there arose a multitude smiting their books and wailing. And there was much weeping and gnashing of teeth, for the day of judgment was at hand and they were sore afraid. For they had left undone those things which they ought to have done, and they had done those things they ought not to have done and there was no help for it.

And there were many abiding in the dorm who had kept watch over their books all night, but it naught availeth. But some there were who arose peacefully, for they had prepared for themselves the way, and made straight the path of Knowledge. And these wise ones were known to some as the burners of the midnight oil, but by others they were called the curve raisers.

And the multitudes arose and ate a hearty breakfast; and they came unto the appointed place, their hearts were heavy within them. And they had come to pass, but some to pass out.

And some of them repented of their riotous living and bemoaned their fate but they had not a prayer. And at the last hour, there came among them one known as the Instructor, he of the diabolical smile, and passed papers among them and went upon his way.

And many and varied were the answers which were given, for some of his teachings had fallen among fertile minds, others had fallen among the fallows, and still others had fallen flat. And some there were who wrote for an hour, others who wrote for two, but some turned away sorrowful.

And many of these offered up a little "bull" in hopes of pacifying the Instructor, for these were the ones who had not had a prayer. And when they had finished, they gathered up their belongings and went away quietly, each in his own direction, and each vowing to himself in his own manner:

"I shall not pass this way again, but it is a long road which has no turning." — HIT & MISS, Vol. III, No. 1.

Stuco pres. reviews active semester

by Marie Neher
Stuco President

Student Council may seem like the name of a familiar group, but do you know what Stuco is really all about? Student Council is made up of four officers, class representatives, dorm reps., and eight at-large representatives.

This semester we have successfully helped clubs in financing and are in the process of chartering two new clubs, Alpha Psi and the Economics Club.

SAB (Student Activities Board) has done an outstanding job of sponsoring frequent activities. This has included fairly regular movies plus various other activities that are bound to interest everyone at some time or another. A few of these activities have been the Air Band Contest, the mystery van, and computer date night. The work of John Snell and active SAB members are appreciated.

Stuco has also actively taken a look at things to be improved. Early in the year a proposal backed by the student body was sent to the administration to change the off campus living policy. There has been no administrative action on the proposal.

Two study committees were assigned. One was to investigate the tradition of the homecoming court, and one was assigned to write a proposal for spouses of married students to get into activities at a reduced cost per semester. The committee on Homecoming is still working on their project. The second committee completed their work and now the administration is giving this proposal serious and favorable consideration.

Student Council's largest service project is that of sending books to new schools in Africa. The project, headed by Pam Higgins, has involved gathering books from all departments here at the college and other schools in the McPherson area. Recently the collection was completed and a final count was taken. The books collectively weighed 1,500 pounds and cost 40 cents per pound to send. Stuco has raised a small amount of money but the bulk of the $600 for the mailing cost will be covered by the local Rotary Club. We are excited that this project has become an entire community project and have hopes that it can be done in the future.

Next semester we will again be providing the book co-op, a service to all who want to save money on the cost of textbooks. The book co-op is a system where a student fills out a card for each used book he or she is willing to sell. Students interested in buying the book listed may then contact the person with the book.

Stuco will also be wrapping the books collected this semester to send to Africa and hope to complete work on the issue of the Homecoming court.

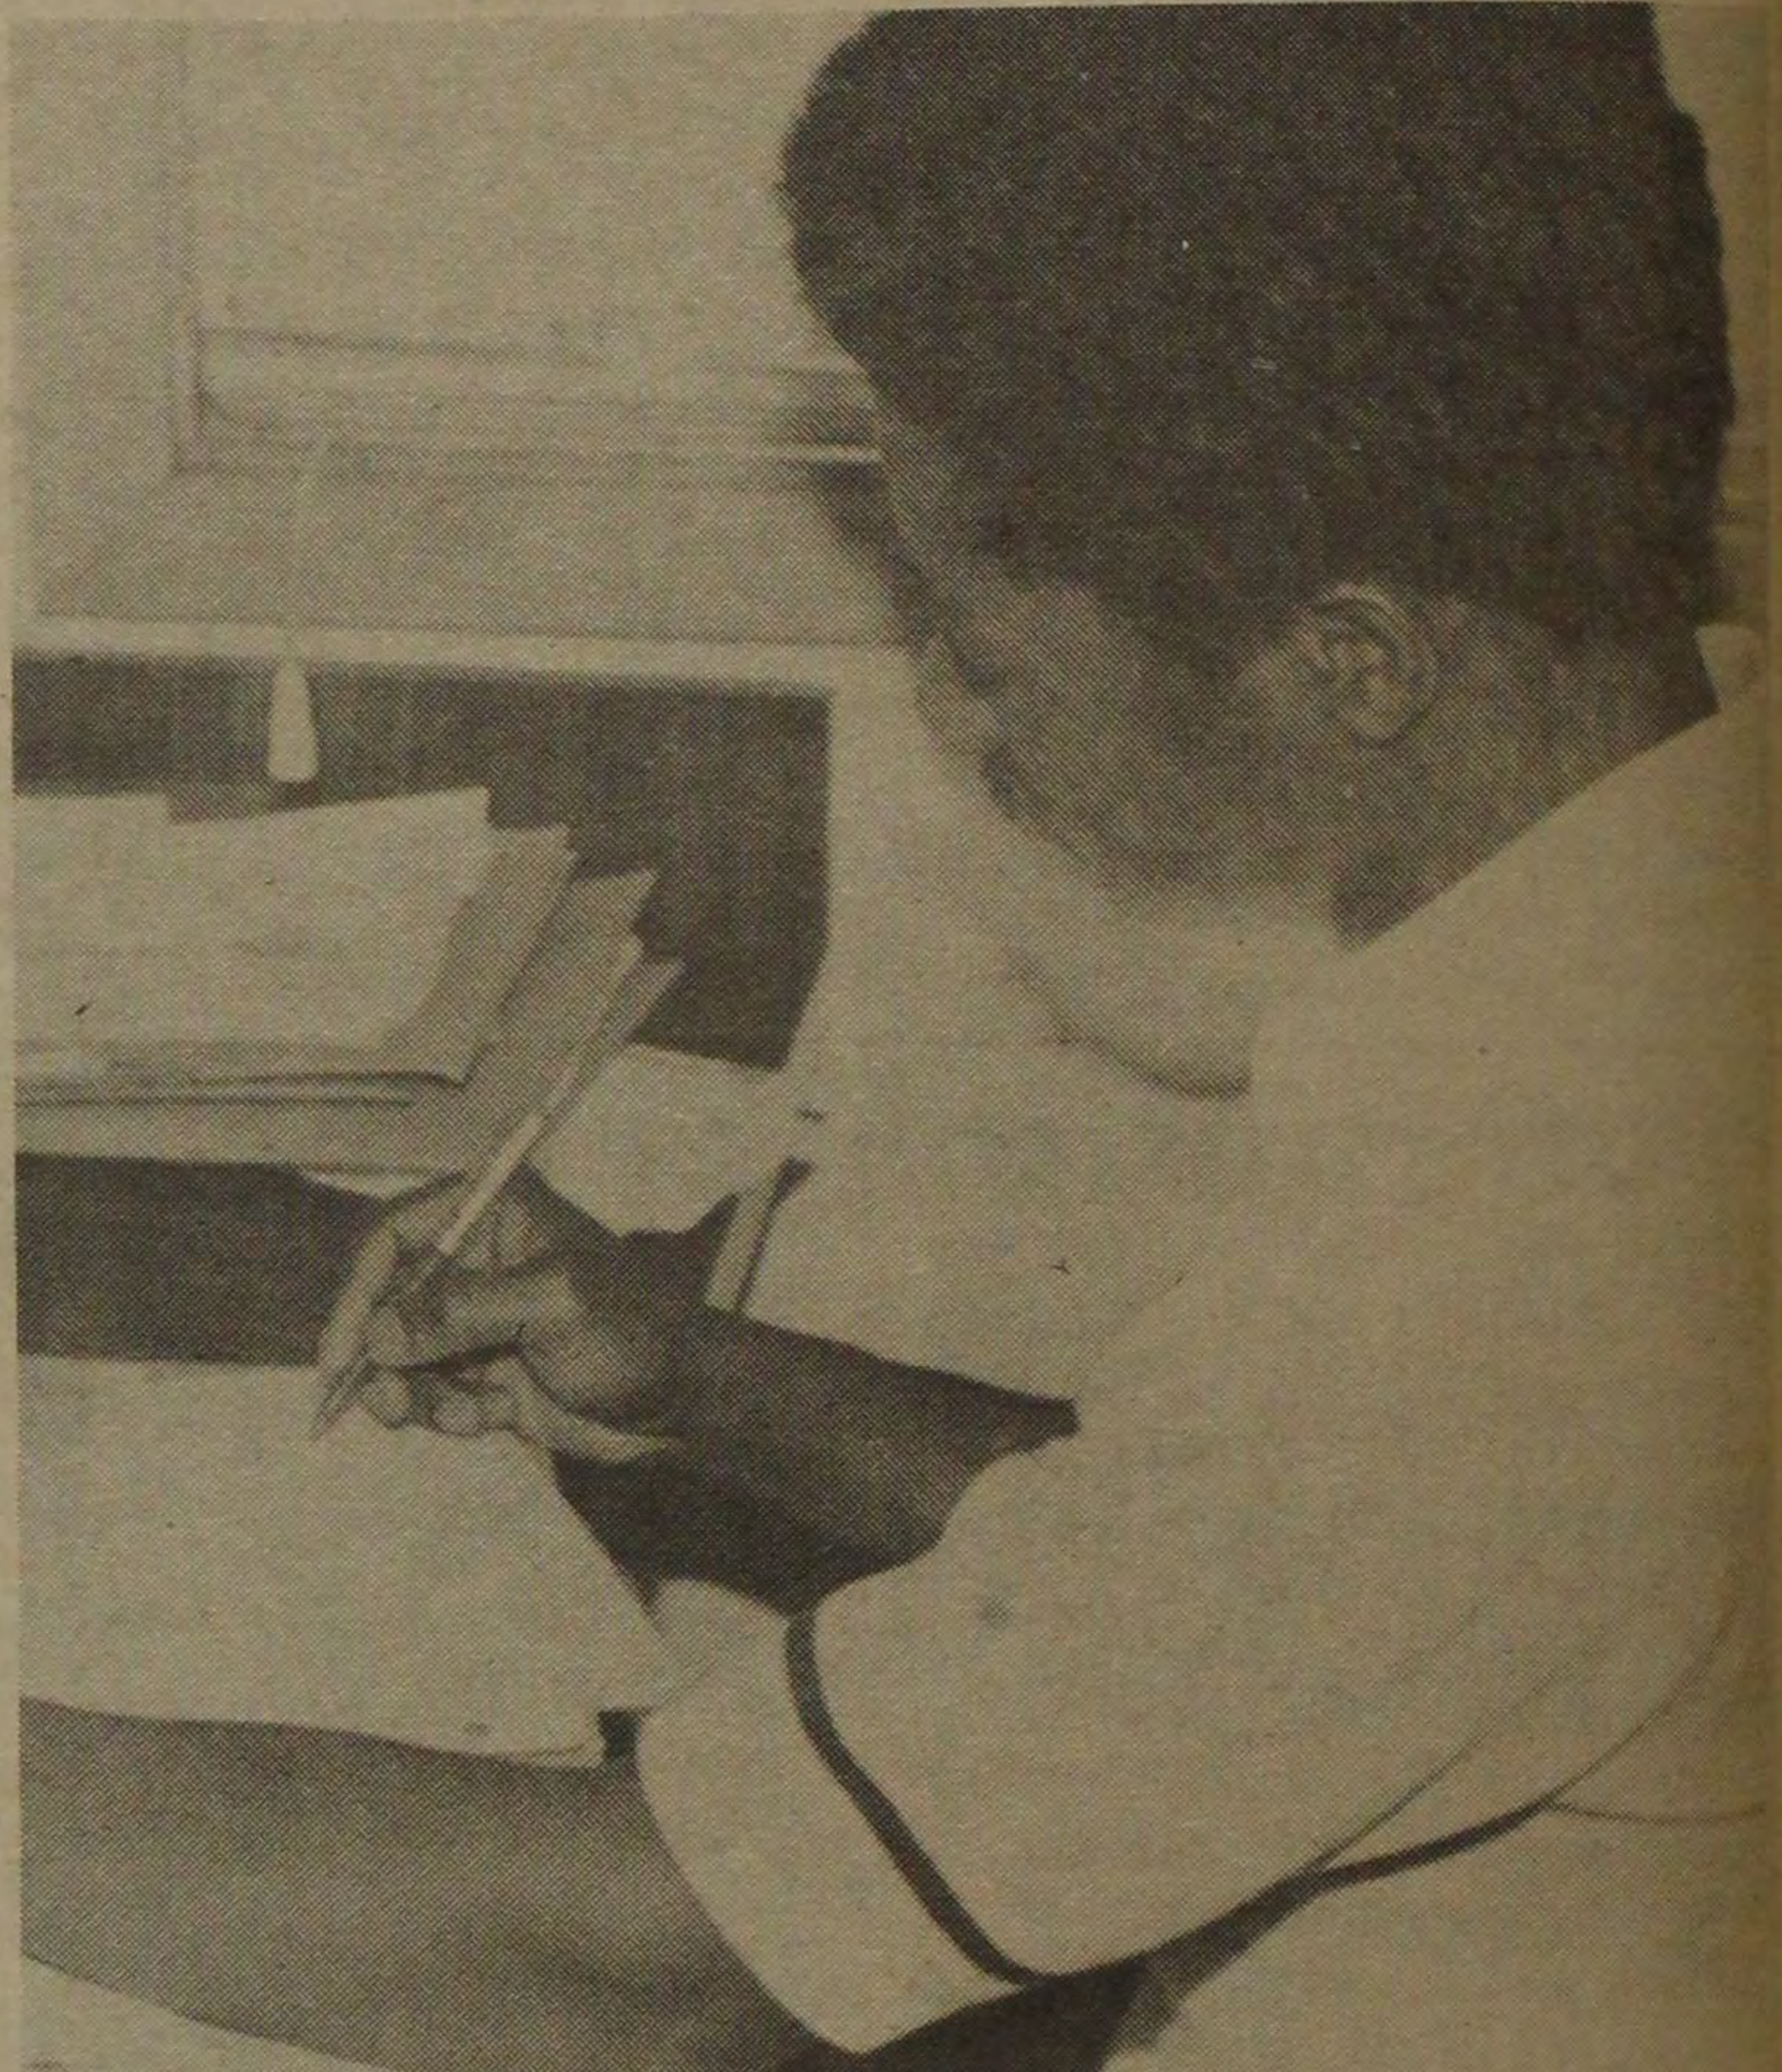

The officers will be working on putting together a book about Student Council procedures and duties. As it is now, we have to go through old minutes or find out by word of mouth as to "what to do and how to do it." We feel this will be very helpful to future councils.

Meetings are open for your input, join us at 9:30 on Tuesday mornings.

College honors plan approved

by Chuck Cuthbert

Recently a college honors plan was approved by the administration. That plan, which was developed by faculty members, will open up a new intellectual branch for students who excel in their work.

Dr. Leland Lengel, professor of history and political science, explained the college honors program as a worthwhile and useful extension of a college education. Its purpose is to establish a climate of endeavor and discussion among outstanding and knowledgeable students on campus. Through this climate the honors congress hopes to raise the level of intellectual awareness and provide a platform for debate and discussion among the entire student body.

The college honors program is open to all McPherson College students. However, when the program will begin is another question yet to be answered. Hopefully, it will begin in the near future.

Requirements for the honors congress are as follows:

1. You must have a faculty member nominate you for the congress.
2. Students in the congress may also nominate members for the honors congress.

Anyone who is interested in the program and would like more information should contact Dr. Lengel in his office.

Academic program scores high in new student survey

by Carolyn Spate

What were the most important factors in making your final decision to attend Mac? Have any family members attended McPherson College in the past? Did you plan to graduate from Mac when you began the semester? Do you now plan to graduate from Mac?

These are a few questions from the new student survey which has just recently been completed and the results compiled. Coordinated by Joanne Hamlin, director of housing, the survey was given to all new students, both freshmen and transfers.

Dr. Ed Butler, vice president of student services, explains that the survey is intended to help the staff and faculty determine how well new students are adjusting, identify any problems, and discuss ways by which the college can be improved.

The survey also helps new students to become more familiar with a staff person other than their academic advisor.

The first section of the survey deals with the basic question of how the student became acquainted with McPherson College and the major factors influencing that decision.

The survey continues with questions about financial aid, the student's intention to graduate or not to graduate from Mac, his or her major course of study, and feelings toward the orientation and enrollment procedure.

Information from several questions may be of particular interest to students. Nearly one-third of the 114 students interviewed indicated that they had become acquainted with the college through family members. One-fourth claimed the church and friends as their primary source of information.

For the last two years, half of the students seem to have made the decision to attend the college during the spring or summer months prior to enrollment in the fall.

In answering the question of why one chose McPherson College, fifty percent indicated that it was due to a good academic program and the fact that Mac is a small college. One-fourth indicated geographic location and athletics as the primary reasons for attending the college. The amount of financial aid was also mentioned as an important factor.

Approximately 85 percent of the students had visited the campus prior to coming to

Eighty percent felt that their academic advisor had been helpful to them and ninety percent said that the classes they are enrolled in are meeting their expectations.

The friendliness of people, the closeness of persons in the residence halls, and the professors-staff interest in them as individuals were the three most frequent answers for what has impressed them most about Mac.

The three most frequent responses to what is different about the college than what they had expected are: a freer atmosphere, classes are tougher, and the fact that the president knows students' first names.

Suggestions for improvements included a new athletic facility, more dialogue between faculty and students concerning their field, better contacts with off-campus students, and more involvement of all students in campus activities.

Quad theme will use former logos

With a staff of five people on layout and eight photographers the yearbook is coming together nicely according to co-editors Cindy Dell, soph., Beatrice, Neb., and Angie Henson, jr., Wichita.

The theme of this year's Quadrangle will incorporate the logos McPherson College has had in the past.

The yearbook has had some trouble getting completed in recent years, but "This year we are putting it together slowly so we don't have to rush at the end of the year," said Cindy.

She added, "If things work out financially we plan to have five to 10 pages of color photos."

College Board defining new standards

The College Entrance Examination Board has announced a ten-year program to improve the quality of secondary and university education by setting well-defined standards of academic preparation.

The project is called "Project Equality," with the "E" standing for equality of access to education and the "Q" standing for quality.

The College Board intends to provide colleges and high schools with a set of definitions of educational tasks. The high schools would prepare students to meet the standards, and the colleges would be asked to accept the standards as part of their admissions criteria.

The College Board, which sponsors the Scholastic Aptitude Tests, widely used examinations for college admissions, would presumably provide the instruments to test whether students have met the academic standards.

The Board has already worked with large numbers of educators to begin to define the skills that would be specified in the new standards. Six areas of competence have already been defined. They are reading, writing, speaking and listening, mathematics, reasoning and studying. A seventh area, observing, would deal with more artistic perceptions, and is currently being worked on.

The following is a selection from a larger number of competencies that have been defined by the College Board in the first three areas:

Reading

The ability to identify and comprehend the main and subordinate ideas in a written work and to summarize the ideas in one's own words.

The ability to use the features of books and other reference materials such as table of contents, preface, titles and subtitles, index, glossary, appendix and bibliography.

The ability to recognize different purposes and methods of writing; to identify a writer's point of view and tone; to interpret a writer's meaning inferentially as well as literally.

Writing

The ability to conceive ideas about a topic for the purpose of writing.

The ability to improve one's own writing by restructuring, correcting errors and rewriting.

Speaking and Listening

The ability to engage critically and constructively in the exchange of ideas, particularly during class discussions and conferences with instructors.

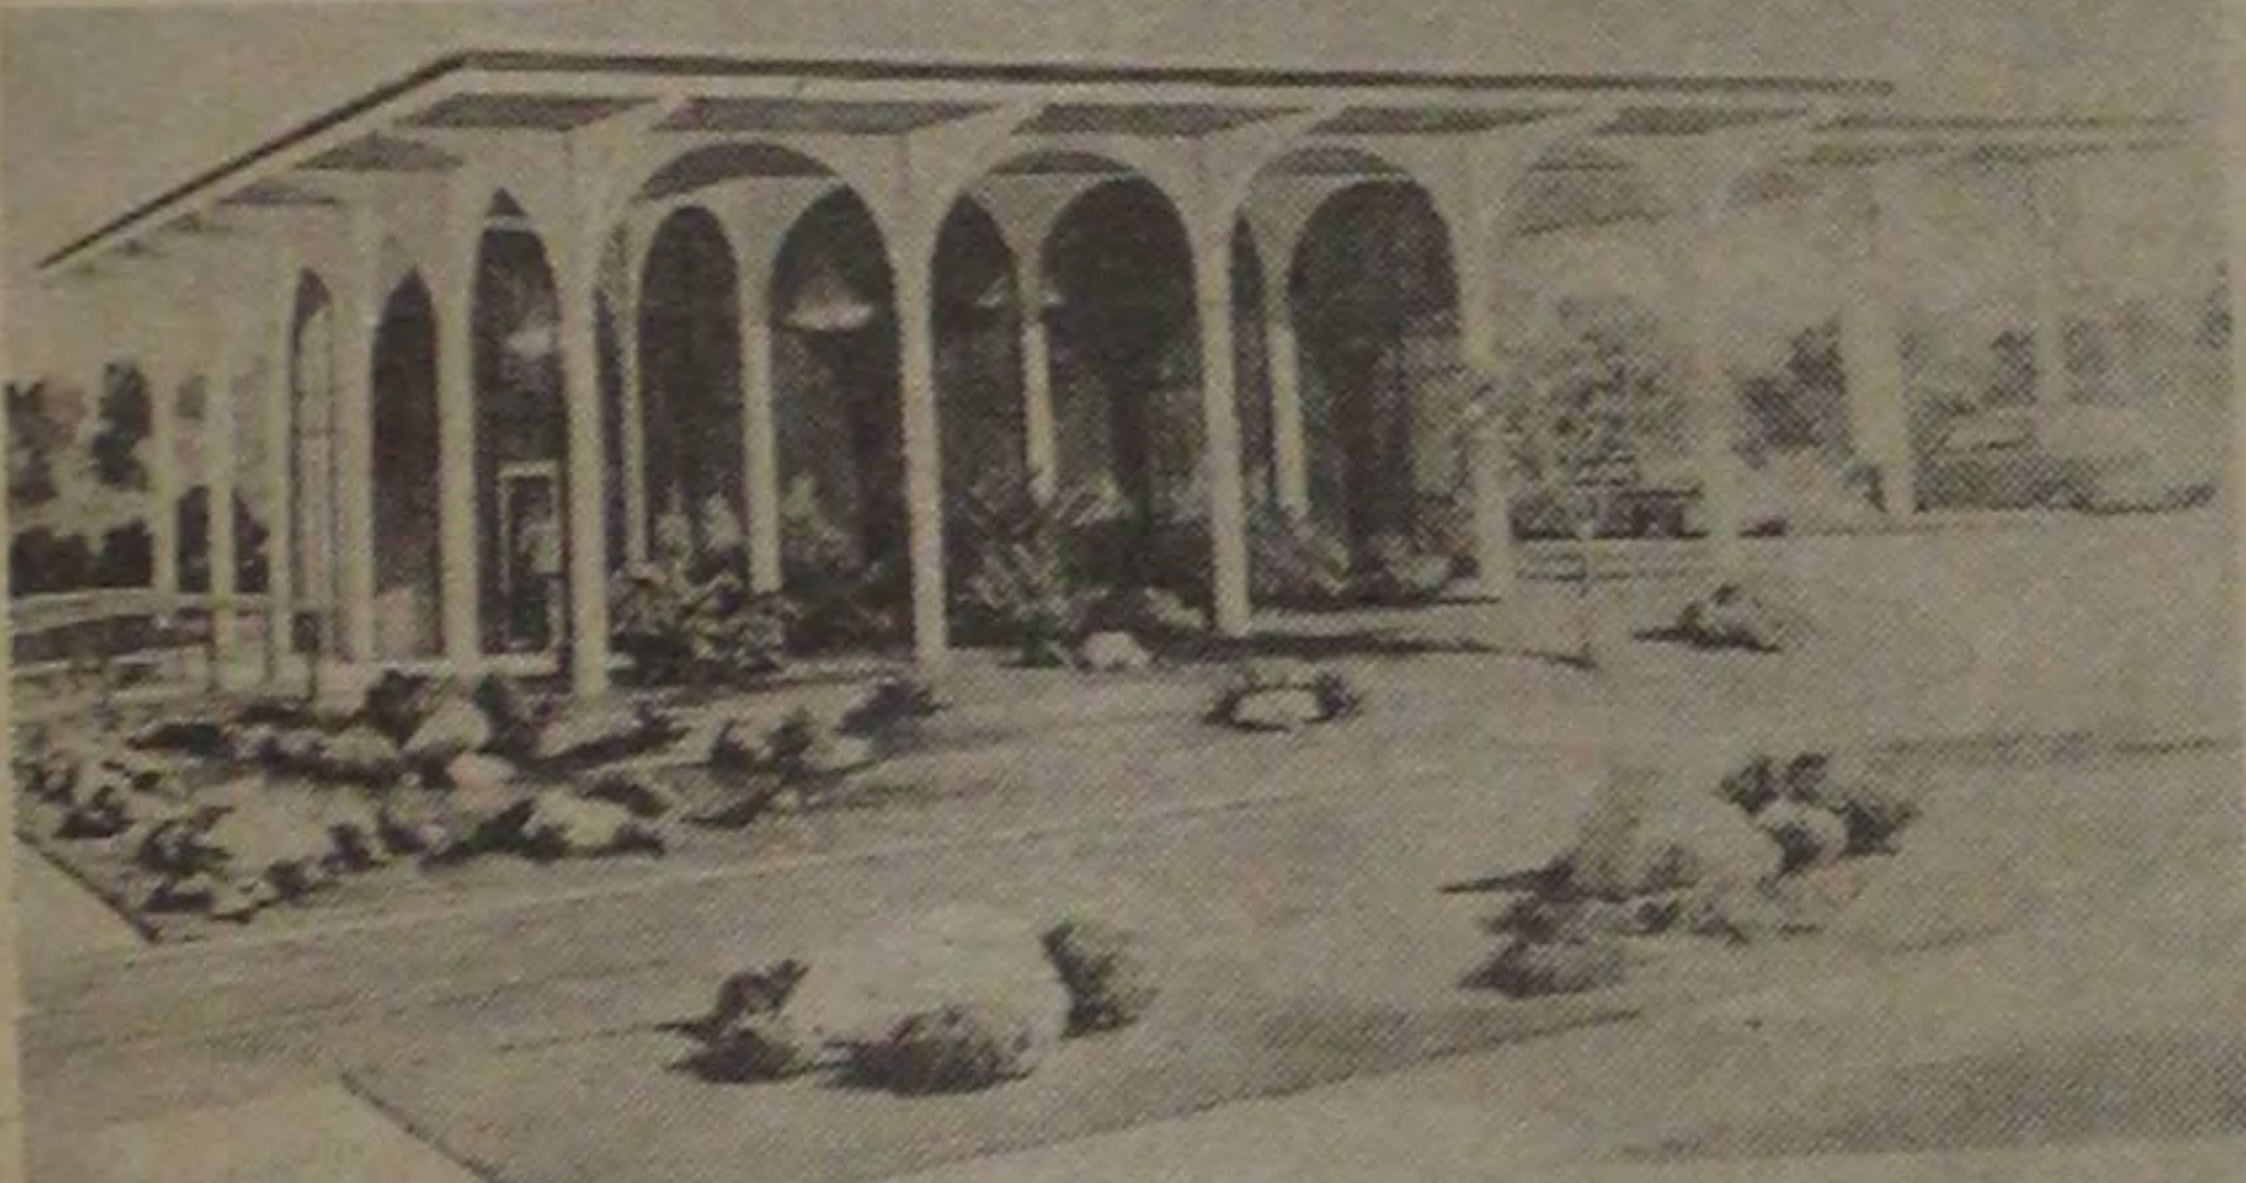

The ability to vary one's use of spoken language to suit different situations.

Mathematics

The ability to perform, with reasonable accuracy, the computations of addition, subtraction, multiplication and division using natural numbers, fractions, decimals and integers.

The ability to make and use measurements in both traditional and metric units.

Lady Red basketball machine rolls in quest of conference title

by Deb Rettele

The Lady Red Basketball Machine is again in operation, and thus far has compiled a 4-2 record, overall and remain undefeated in conference games.

The Lady Bulldogs open their home conference schedule tomorrow night against the Warriors of Sterling. Game time is 6 p.m. at the Roundhouse. It should be an excellent contest as the Ladies try to maintain an unbeaten conference record.

In the opener against Marymount, the team was slow in getting started, but came away with a 65-53 victory over the Spartans on Nov. 20 in Marymount.

Scoring in double figures were seniors Susan Sundahl, McPherson, with 23; Deb Rettele, Fairview, with 12; and Susie Morales, jr., Lyons, with 10. Valecia Kelly, soph., Cincinatti, Ohio, dominated the boards with 16 rebounds while Rettele pulled down 12.

In the second game of the season, the Lady Bulldogs learned a tough lesson in a 50-43 loss to Hutchinson Juco on Nov. 24 in Hutch.

Again, the Ladies were slow in getting unwound and this time waited just a bit too long.

Rettele and Sundahl led the scoring with 14 and 13 points respectively. Again, Kelly dominated the boards with 15 rebounds.

In the first home game of the season, on Nov. 28, the women again faced the Marymount Spartans and came away with a 61-47 victory.

Three players were in double scoring figures, Rettele, with 21 points; Morales, with 17; and Sundahl, with 15.

The first conference game was on Dec. 1 at Hillsboro against Tabor. It proved to be a real test, but the Lady Red managed to overcome a 13-point halftime deficit to win a 49-48 point decision.

Again, there were three players in double scoring figures — Rettele, with 15 points; Morales, with 12; and Kelly Vinson, fr., Allen, Okla, with 10 points.

The next two games were non-conference road games on Fri. and Sat. Dec. 4 and 5. On the 4th the Bulldogs defeated Nebraska Wesleyan in Lincoln, 56-41.

Saturday night, the 5th, proved to be a different story with the Lady Red losing to the University of Nebraska at Omaha, 74-43. This was the team's first game against an NCAA division I power, and nerves and underconfidence proved to be a problem.

Toledo injured, men start slow

by Kevin Burton

As most of you already know, the basketball season is well underway at McPherson College. The Bulldogs have gotten out of the gate slowly, dropping their first five games.

Late in the first game, McPherson guard Chris Toledo suffered a shattered fibula, and some ligament damage. Toledo had been expected to quarterback the offense this year, before the injury ended his season.

Next the 'Dogs took their road show to Ottawa, where a late surge by the home team downed the Mac cagers 77-69. Kelly Unruh scored 14, and Kevin Carlson scored 12 in the loss.

At Hillsboro, Tabor took it to the Bulldogs 100-60. The Blue Jay running game proved too much for the Bulldogs, who turned the ball over 31 times. Troy Koehn and Kevin Carlson each had 13 points.

Emporia State blew what was a close game wide open, beating Mac 86-62. The Bulldogs were down by only four at the half, but turnovers again spelled their doom. Alan Jamison led McPherson with 16 points, Kelly Unruh had 15.

Game number five, against Washburn, was much like the previous four, McPherson Coach Bob Fairbank gave a lot of playing time to all of the thirteen players on the trip.

With Toledo out of the lineup, the search is on for a player who can take over as the point guard. "Point guard is a demanding position," said Coach Fairbank, "There are a lot of decisions he has to make on the floor."

At this point Fairbank is using all his players equally. "Right now, we've got eight players who are more or less equal. Until some of them emerge as the stronger players, we'll be making a lot of changes, trying to find out what our strong points are."

The Bulldogs to this point have only lost one conference game. That isn't much of a problem according to Fairbank. "This conference is way too balanced for this one loss to knock us out of it. The conference champ will probably have at least four losses."

Tomorrow McPherson will be at home for the first time this year. Sterling, the opponent, isn't a running team — look for rebounding to be a big factor.

The men's game is set for 8 p.m. and will follow the Lady Red who will get underway at six, also against Sterling.
