

Regional Youth Conference held here this weekend

by Alan Kieffaber

Regional Youth Conference is an annual event on the McPherson College campus, sometimes involving over 200 youth and their advisors from Churches of the Brethren in as many as six states.

The conference will begin tonight and will continue through Sunday until about noon. This year the guest leader is Dr. Robert W. Neff, executive secretary of the national Church of the Brethren with an office in Elgin, Illinois. Dr. Neff is an Old Testament scholar and an excellent public speaker. In addition to presenting several sessions and the Sunday morning sermon in the Church of the Brethren he will address our convocation on Monday, April 26.

It is traditional for the high-school-aged visitors to bring sleeping bags and stay with Mac students in the college dorm rooms during the two nights that they are here. This calls for a lot of flexibility and responsibility because this is an excellent opportunity to help the guests on our campus have a good time. It also provides an opportunity for Mac students to provide them with some insight as to what college life is about in the best sense. Many of these visitors will be Mac students in the future. Twenty of the high-school seniors enrolled for RYC are already pre-enrolled for McPherson's fall semester of 1982.

Most of the meeting will be in the Church of the Brethren Friday evening and Saturday. College Students are welcome to attend. Our guests will be seen in Brown Auditorium on Friday evening for the ACCK Choir Festival Concert, in the bookstore and student union and at mealtimes when the schedules may be slightly modified.

Your help in being good hosts, and especially in sharing your own floor space, is much needed and appreciated. The RYC planning committee this year consists of Tina Wagner, Sandra Stump, Carol Swank, Darla Keasling, Mik Hoffman, Bruce Spitzer and Jerel Eller.

In conjunction with the RYC weekend, Mary Cline Detrick (also from Elgin) will be on campus to hold workshops with visiting youth advisors who accompany the RYCers.

Robert Neff will hold a Regional Pastor's Workshop on campus April 26-28 for 45 ministers of the Church of the Brethren. Some of these visitors will be people you know, parents of students and prospective students. Let's welcome them!

Stuco makes final changes in policy

Student Council has been busily working on finishing up some of its business before the end of the year. Two special proposals have recently been adopted by Student Council that may be of interest to the student body.

The first proposal is designed to improve the homecoming court selection procedure. The Homecoming Court Committee has tried to make the selection of candidates and the tradition more meaningful by establishing a few criteria.

The combined junior and senior classes will now elect three males and three females to comprise the homecoming court from an initial ballot of all students who have achieved junior or senior status. If a tie occurs for the third position during the election of the candidates, there will automatically be eight candidates. The student body will then elect a King and Queen from the homecoming candidates.

The rationale behind the proposal is that the homecoming tradition will hopefully be made more meaningful by the selection of candidates better known to the entire campus community and candidates who have been active participants at McPherson College. The distraction of the selection of a large percentage of the student body as candidates would also be avoided.

The other proposal adopted by Student Council dealt with the issue of Student Council salaries. The paid Student Council salary positions are: Student Council president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, SAB chairperson, Spectator editor, managing editor, and business manager, and the Quadrangle editor and business manager.

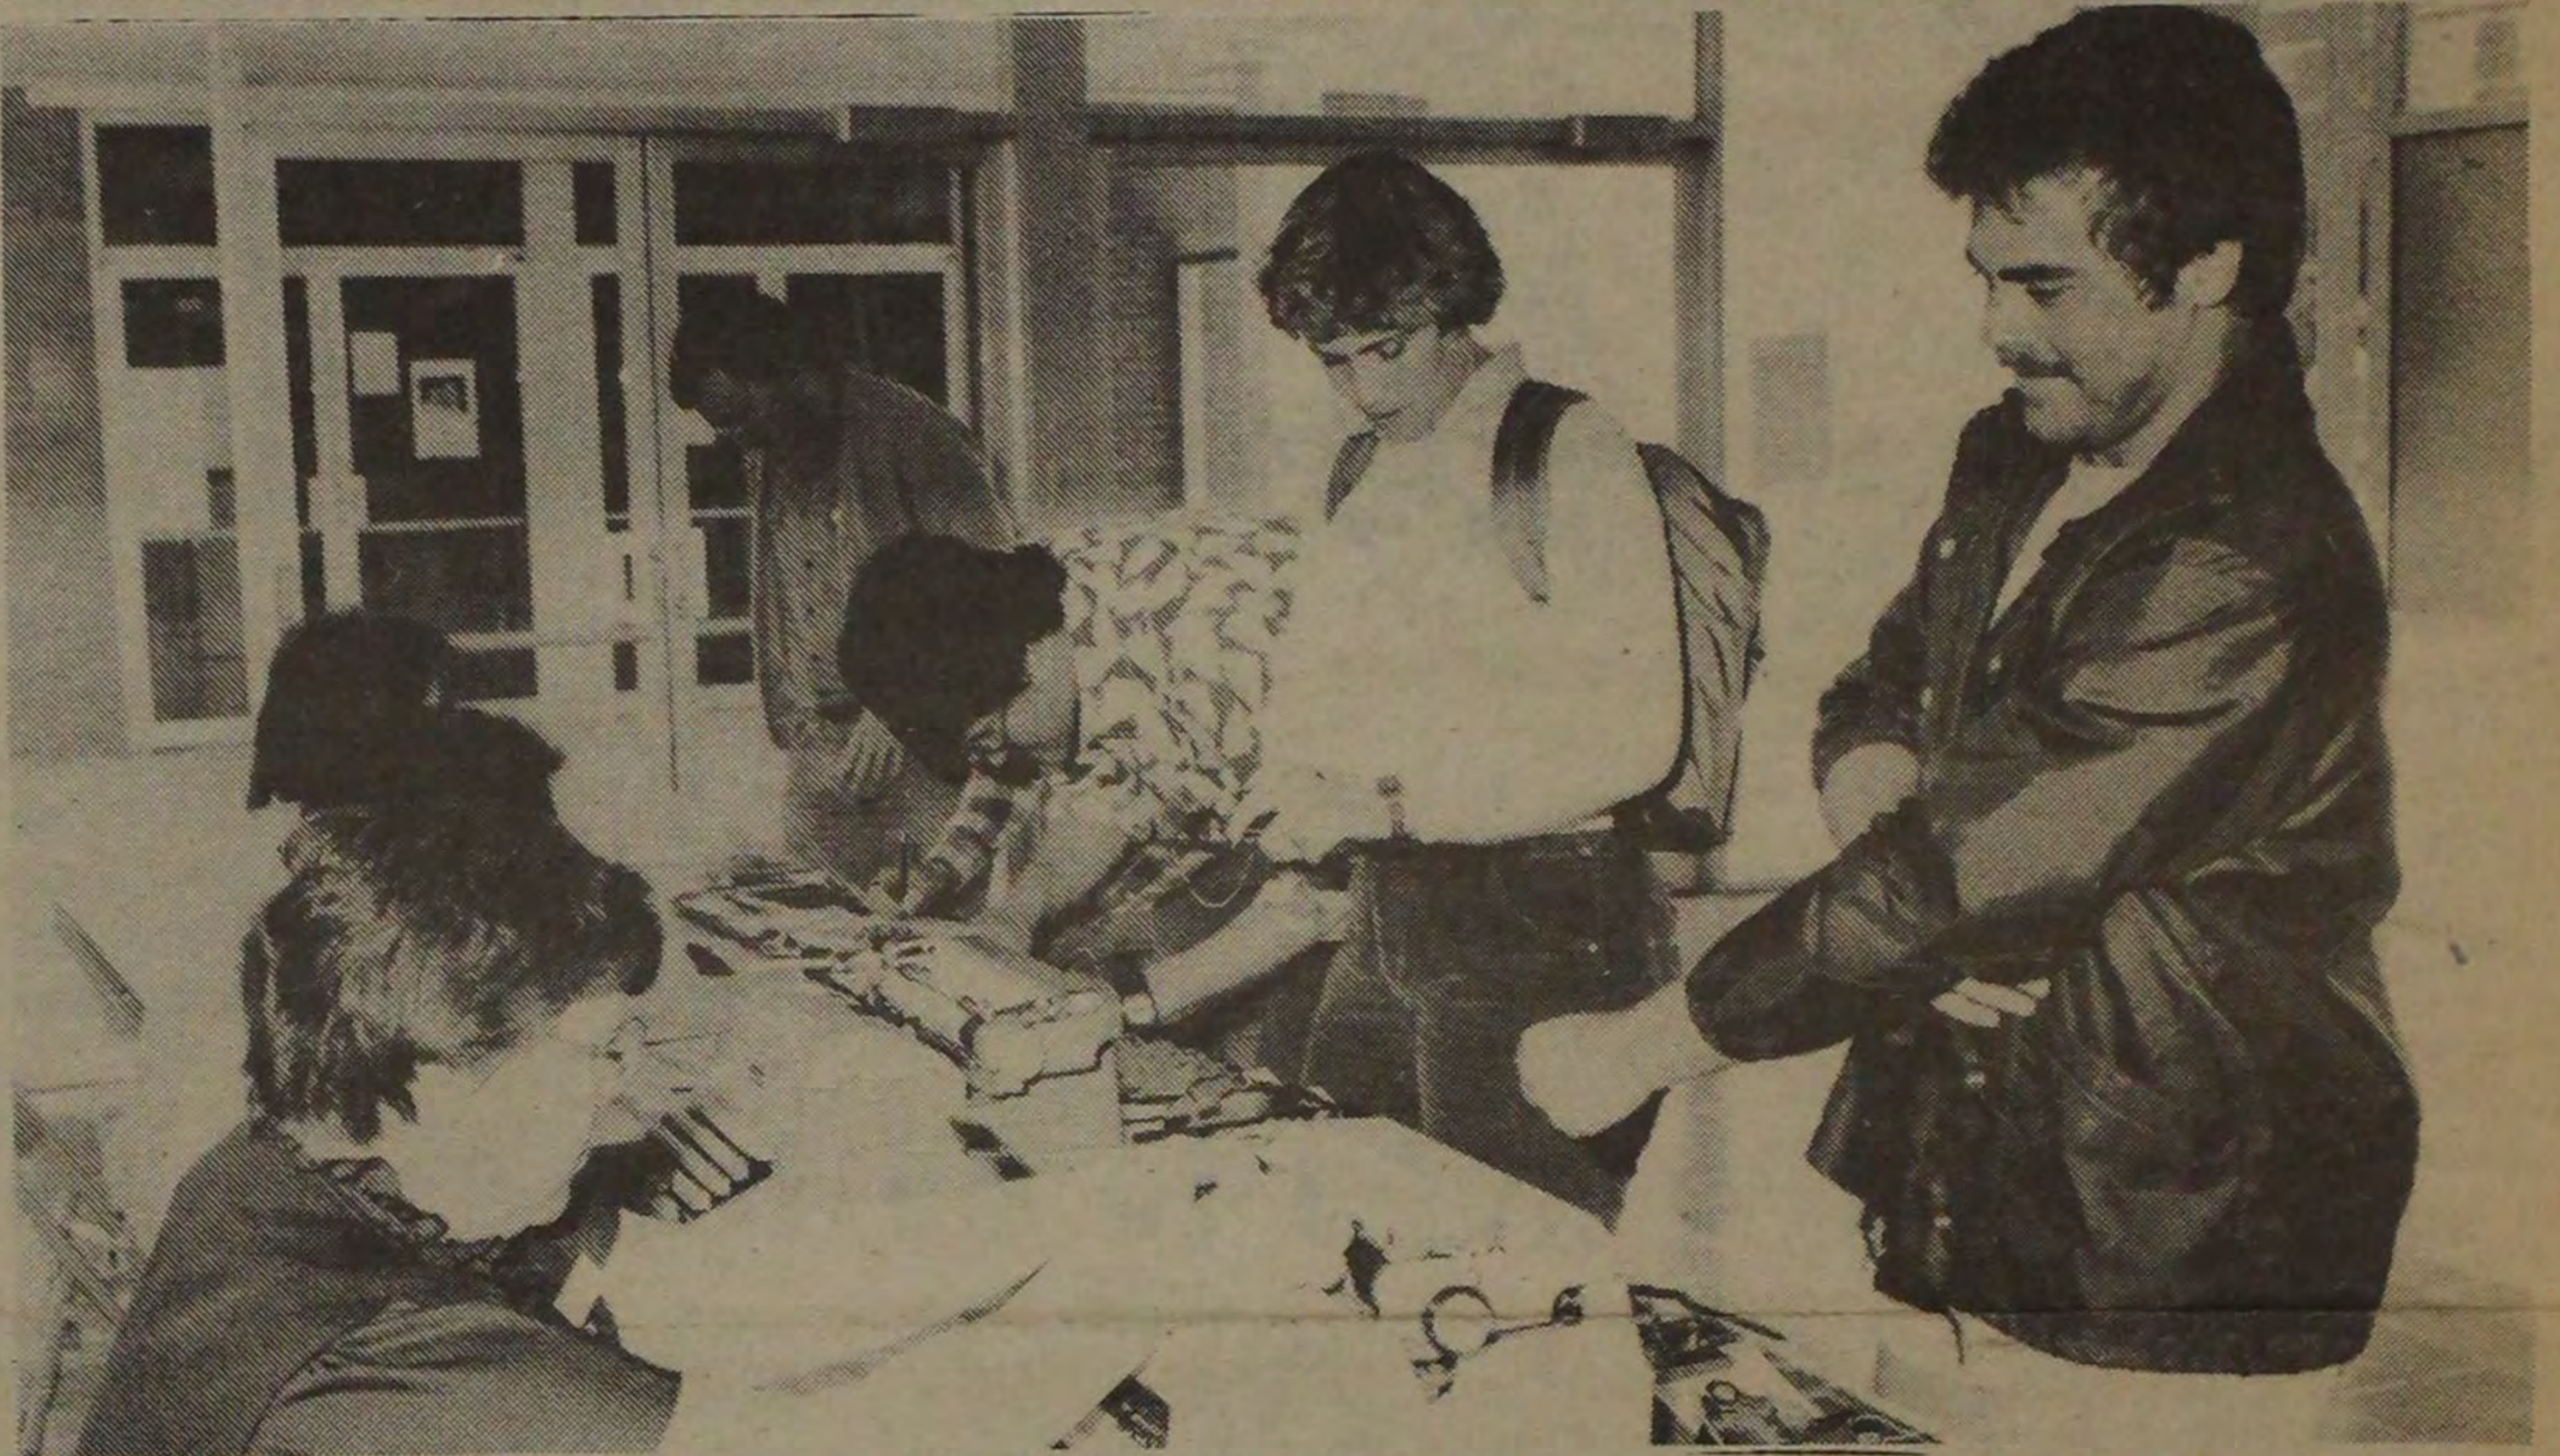

Starting next fall, the salaries will increase by nearly 50 percent of the current salary allocation, which will be about a $937.50 increase for the year.

Student working on this committee supported this proposal for several reasons. They felt that the persons currently holding these offices are seriously underpaid, and that an increase in salaries will help provide a boost in the morale of the persons accepting these positions. Also, because of the amount of time that is required to carry out the duties of this job, an outside source of income may not be possible.

Attracting good business managers for the Spectator and the Quadrangle may also help save the publications enough money to help cover the increase in the salaries.

It should also be noted that when many of the former salaries were divided by the estimated number of work hours, most students were receiving an average of 25-50 cents per hour.

Bruce Bauman, jr., Chapman, Kathy Gribben, soph., Holyoke, Colo., Dennis Stichter, auto restoration instructor, and Doug Duncan, jr., Evergreen, take care of some initial information as they prepare to give blood on Monday, April 19 in Friendship Hall. The Bloodmobile unit collected only 75 pints, which was less than had been hoped for.

Maintenance busy with improvements

by Kevin Burton

Have you noticed? Recently the maintenance staff has been making a lot of subtle changes to make McPherson a more pleasant place to stay.

Residents of Bittering third, those wires coming out of your ceiling are not part of a buzzer system. They are a part of the much improved fire-alarm system that will be completed by next year. That is according to Merrin Godfrey, who is the maintenance director here at McPherson.

Godfrey lists some of the other improvements made recently. "Where you see the grass torn out, we're going to plant flower beds. The Park Department is growing some flowers for us right now in exchange for some equipment that we share with them."

We've rebricked the wall in front of the Student Union, and we're hoping it will stay put this time. We've planted a lot of new shrubs and bushes, especially around Dotzour. Also, we've partially replaced the fence around the tennis courts."

New clocks are popping up everywhere too. "Different people asked for them," said Godfrey, "so we have put a lot of them up."

Godfrey says that the football field has been reseeded, and that the finishing touches have been put on our new scoreboard.

Stuco members are selected

by Chuck Cuthbert

The results are in! Student Council representatives for next year will include: Linda van Asselt, jr., McPherson; Dave Zook, fr., Dixon, Ill.; Diana Shenefelt, soph., Council Bluffs, Iowa; Memo Zavala, sr., Rocky Ford, Colo.; Scott Carpenter, jr., Preston; Tom Shoemaker, fr., Phoenix, Ariz.; Sandy Reisinger, jr., Manheim, Pa.; and Ruth Baldner, jr., Dallas Center, Iowa. These students will serve as representatives at large and their function will be to represent you, the student.

Marie Neher, jr., Grundy Center, Iowa, was elected as an off-campus representative. Dotzour Hall representative will be Jan Esgar, soph., Wiley, Colo. Dan Rogers, jr., Guthrie, Minn. will serve as the senior class representative, Dan Huffaker, soph., Md. will serve as junior class representative, and the sophomore representative will be Galen Switzer, fr., Hutchinson.

Two College Courts representatives, one Bittering Hall representative, and one Metzler Hall representative still remain to be selected.

It's time to re-evaluate our position on athletics

Dear Editor:

Well it happened again, another McPherson coach is resigning. Coach Fairbank is now the latest to join the club. I thank Fairbank for his honesty and integrity in hitting the nail on the head by saying that he and this college have a difference of philosophies.

As an institution with roots in the Brethren tradition of education, McPherson College fails to commit itself to the development of the entire person. This tradition manifests itself in the ailing and failing intercollegiate program here at McPherson College. Here at McPherson the student is not provided quality diverse opportunities to develop as an athlete or to develop a sound body.

In my years at McPherson College, the role of intercollegiate athletics has failed miserably to meet the diverse needs of the everchanging student body. Unfortunately college sports such as football, basketball, etc., are now a business — Big Business. The attitude here is 20 years behind the times in that we still believe in these activities as sports. McPherson College over the years has recruited some fine talent, but like always, they leave and then the coach follows.

I believe that McPherson College should either (1) get with the times and look at our woeful record in recent years and do something about it like our direct competitors, or (2) shelve the football and basketball programs. If you're not going to serve the needs of students at any level, intercollegiate athletes and the less gifted casual participants, then why continue to embarrass the name of this institution with 2-7 and 1-23 records respectively. No athlete from a winning program in high school is going to want to come to a perpetual loser.

And what about the quality of our coaches?

In my four years here I've seen four different coaches come and go and now Fairbank is leaving. It is clearly a difficult situation for a coach. How long can quality coaches such as Fairbank and Cripe stay in this sinking boat? I say to you: either back the intercollegiate programs financially, all the way, or just alleviate this embarrassment and we'll do without.

Sincerely,
John Brill

Spring campus improvements seem to be cropping up everywhere. Benjamin Franklin, Jr., Inkster, Mich., and Coach Larry Latimer do their part to help by planting some new grass around the athletic scoreboard.

It's too good to be true

Once upon a time there was a certain editor who finally realized that the semester was rushing by her and that there were only three more issues of the Spectator left for the semester. "How can I let students know that the opportunity to express their concerns through letters to the editor and verbally is rapidly coming to a close?" she asked herself. In an attempt to help remind students, she decided to publish a short note in the paper expressing this concern.

Upon reading the article, the student body was suddenly struck with a wave of panic. Students became worried that they would fail to take advantage of this opportunity and so the letters started pouring in. In fact, there were so many letters that it took up four pages to print them which left no room for other activities. So the Spectator (much to campus-editor Kevin Burton's delight) was extended to a double issue.

But students were still hoping that they could do more to help out this concerned (but delightfully amazed) editor, and so they also began asking if they could possibly move into an editorship position (much to future-editor Memo Zavala's delight). Too many people asked to help, and so the staff had to start requiring them to fill out applications.

The business manager was plagued by eager assistants asking for the opportunity to sell ads, and the staff increased greatly day by day. Photographers were constantly at the door begging the staff to take just a quick glance at a few of their photographs.

And the "KU Kansan" staff looked at the Spectator, green with envy at the thought of a small college being able to put out such an extensive and wonderful paper. Subscriptions began to pour in, the staff began to think about sending the paper overseas in order to keep them from dwelling in their state of ignorance.

The editor was amazed. Everyone was so willing to help that she decided to hand over all of the responsibilities to her assistants for the week and take a vacation.

It was too good to be true. She woke up and turned off the alarm.

Will Fanny become another 'white elephant'?

by Kevin Burton
Old rumors, like old soldiers, don't die. They just fade away, or so the saying goes. But some rumors don't die or fade away. Some become true.
It's been rumored for some time that Fahnestock Hall would be closed. Although nothing is definite at this time, that rumor is now one step closer to reality. Recently an ad hoc committee comprised of faculty, staff and students made a recommendation to Dr. Ed Butler, vice president for student services, that Fahnestock be closed. Much discussion is underway and will continue until a final decision is made sometime before the end of the year.

James Dodson, business manager and treasurer for the school says, "For the long run benefit of the students, I'm in favor of closing Fahnestock Hall." Dodson estimates that $15,000 will be saved if the Hall is closed.

Some of the savings would be realized in that the school could shut down the boiler used for Fahnestock. The boiler is smaller than the main boiler, but as maintenance director Merrin

Godfrey says, "It takes just as long to check as one of the big ones does."

The residents of Fahnestock naturally do not want the hall to be closed. The general feeling is that if the move must be made they would like to have a section in Bitteringer reserved for them. Many feel that this solution would preserve the feeling of community that exists now in Fahnestock.

If Fahnestock is closed it would join Kline and Arnold in a "herd" of white elephants in the middle of the McPherson campus. This is a concern expressed by the administration.

Dr. Butler says, "We're concerned about having another vacant building on campus. It might convey a negative feeling..." President Paul Hoffman adds that "Residence halls have personalities...sometimes if the building closes the personality is not continued...The college is not going to close if Fahnestock isn't open...it's not that intense..."

Numerically speaking, Dotzour and Metzler would be enough to house the 320 residential students projected for next year. This was never considered according to Joanne Hamlin, director of housing, because, "You have to give the students some kind of choice, at least some leeway."

All this talk of closing Fahnestock raises an interesting question for the resident assistants who were selected for next year. Joanne Hamlin says, "If we need to, we may try to utilize them in another manner, but we're not sure."

Keep in mind that no final decision has yet been made. It will be two weeks at least before a final decision is made.

What are the goals of the graduates of the '80s?

by Carolyn Spate
We are the leaders of tomorrow, or at least this is what we are often told. As tomorrow's leaders, what goals, priorities and values do we hold for the future?

Professor Alexander W. Astin, president of the Higher Education Research Institute and professor at the University of California at Los Angeles, was recently interviewed by a reporter of the U.S. News and World Report staff on the values of the graduates of the '80s. The article appeared in the Jan. 4, 1982 issue of U.S. News and World Report.

U.S. News and World Report asked the professor: "How do today's college students shape up in terms of their potential contribution as adults in the 1980s?" The professor responded with: "Our research indicates that many will be less skilled, more materialistic and less philosophically committed than young people of a decade or so ago."

The article goes on to support its findings with facts. The poll administered by this research group found that students themselves admit that their academic abilities have decreased. Sixty percent felt that grading standards in high schools are too easy.

While there is a shortage in the number of students opting for the hard sciences and humanities, there is a continuous growth in the number of students citing a business major. Astin states,

"More students than ever before in our survey say that they want to become well-off financially, that making money is an important goal in life, that they want more power, more recognition, more status."

Another claimed characteristic of the student of the '80s is the declining importance to them of developing a meaningful philosophy of life. This used to be one of the most appealing life goals for college freshmen back in the mid-60's.

Students of the '80s are not as interested in having large families, and are not as interested in early marriage. Most attitudes seem to support the fact that students are accepting the changing role of women.

The article continues on to say that there would probably be a lot of resistance to a military draft, and that today's students are now more cautious about getting involved in politics.

Of course, not every student fits into the "typical student of the '80s" category. Astin admits that there are many thousands of bright and motivated students with highly developed skills, and he reminds his readers that he is talking about averages and trends.

Dr. Norma Tucker, vice president for academic services, feels that we must carefully examine Astin's research. Many times, she feels, declining test scores and grades may not be a good indicator of psychological maturity and adult effectiveness. Dr. Tucker also feels that, although students are not as visibly active as they were during the '60s, today's students are still committed strongly to what they believe.

She points out that most high schools and colleges are working on improving their basic communications skills programs, and that we must also realize that students differ in their abilities.

Dr. Tucker does, however, agree that there is a national trend toward increasing materialism. Students are now more concerned than they used to be about "what am I going to do to make a living?"

Dr. Dale Goldsmith, professor of philosophy and religion, agrees that education does not seem to be as psychologically satisfying as it used to be and that it is considered more as "job training." He feels that students are less inclined to feel that they can have an impact on political affairs or on changing situations. Goldsmith also stated that we must realize that students are a product of the society and environment in which they live.

The primary question that must be raised is this: "Are McPherson College students to be excluded from or included in this student classification?"

President Paul Hoffman feels that McPherson College students do not fit the national norm. His support for this stand will be presented in a following Spectator issue.

McPherson College — Community asset
by Chuck Cuthbert
During the trustee sessions several weeks ago several interesting observations were brought forward about McPherson College. These points were discovered through interviews with local officials, businesses, and alumni. One local leader rated McPherson College a "9" on a scale of "10." He based his observation on how responsible and reliable Mac students now appear as compared to a few years ago. He also noted that Mac students are a much more dedicated group than those of the past. Several area businessmen also commented that they have hired Mac students on a part-time basis and have found them to be excellent employees.

Both officials and businessmen agree that Brown Auditorium is becoming a center for community cultural events, and that the Miller Library conference rooms have been used for various community meetings.

The Chemistry Department also performs a community service by making analyses for local industries.

McPherson College has become a vital asset of the community and the community is excited about its future.

Alumni are also confident about the college's future. Several alumni commented on President Paul Hoffman's fine leadership, effectiveness, his efforts to keep in touch with the students, and his enthusiasm and energy that he applies to the operation of the college.

Mac drops game to Kansas Wesleyan

by Charles Ogwang

Last Sunday's game played against Kansas Wesleyan in Salina ended in an unbelievable 2-4 loss. The game was a thriller.

KW took the lead after about 25 minutes had elapsed in the first half when a hard shot deflected off one of Mac's defenders and dodged Bill Snyder, jr., Chesterland, Ohio the Mac goalkeeper who had already initiated a move to save the shot. After several attempts, Charles Ogwang managed to get the ball into the goal. The first half ended it a tie.

Mac players exhibited their best play so far of the season. The passes were very impressive and the defenders worked harder than they had ever done before. They were determined to win.

Just after the second half began, Ahmed Abo Bosha, Egypt, sent a long-range shot, from almost the midfield, which bounced close to the goalie who was moving out to save it and looped right into the net. Mac therefore took the lead and held it for most of the second half.

Then suddenly, it seemed as if someone had cast an evil spell upon the club. In the dying minutes of the game, KW went on a rampage on making goals. This turn of events is still a mystery because the Mac players had not run out of gas, nor had they started celebrating an apparent victory which could have caused a loss of concentration on the game.

Next Sunday's game is away against Wichita State. This will be the second time that the teams have played each other. Game time is 3:00 p.m.

Robert Taylor, fr., Widefield, Colo., leaps to clear the bar during an afternoon practice of the men's track team while Troy Slabach, fr., Clearwater, looks on. The track teams are working hard to prepare for the KCAC championships which will be held here next weekend.

Emporia upends Netters

by Chuck Cuthbert

"It's not a team effort that wins a tennis match, it is the individual. If you've got the horses to win you win, and if you don't you lose." That was Coach Jerry Holman's comment following an 8-1 loss to Emporia last weekend. Mac's sole winner in the tourney was the first doubles team of Les Glenn and Clayton Allen.

Coach Holman judged the outcome of last weekend's match on this event. "The win snapped their losing streak. Although we lost, that win satisfied me."

Coach Holman is very pleased with his team and its performance so far. He thinks the team is a good bunch and he is satisfied with the record thus far.

One must note however that the team is young and experience and skill levels are not what they have been in past years.

This weekend Mac takes on Southwestern and Cowley County. When asked how his team would fair against both teams Coach Holman said, "We'll be very competitive with both teams. However, with Cowley County being one of the strongest teams in the nation, I do believe we'll fall before them just as other teams have done. However, we will make the game very competitive."

In tournament action, there are four players that are vying for cedes. They are Les Glenn and Mark Scruggs, both at singles and Glen Snell and Wally Roberts in the doubles tourney.

Tracksters busy, season winding down

by Chuck Telk

With the track season winding down, both the McPherson College men's and women's track teams have been busy as of late. On Tuesday, April 13, the ACCK finals were held at Bethany College.

Even though the men didn't do very well as a team, several individuals did attain success. Jerry Hett, jr., Marion, placed third in the javelin and fifth in the high jump. Kip Coulter, jr., Garden City, took fourth in both the 800 and 1500 meter runs. Roy Grosbach, fr., Enders, Nebr., finished second in the 10,000 meters. Jim Spurlock, fr., San Diego, Calif., took second in the high jump, and Everett Bradley, jr., Marion, Ind., was fourth in the pole vault.

Throughout the men's season the major problem has been a lack of team members. McPherson's men's team has only 12 athletes out for track while other schools have up to 53 men on the team. That's quite a handicap since some schools have two or three people in each event, while McPherson only has participants in about half the events.

Coach Dave Cripe summed up the season. "I've been pleased. We have some good individuals, but as far as the team goes, we just don't have enough men."

The women's track team has had few problems as they walked all over everyone at the ACCK meet, taking a convincing first place as a team.

Leading the team was Valecia Kelly, soph., Cincinnati, Ohio, who recorded a first place in the high jump, long jump and 100 meter hurdles. Lucy Martinez, jr., Firestone, Colo., took a first place in the javelin. Dian Profit, jr., Sterling, took second place in the shotput and discus and fourth place in the javelin. Joy Spangler, soph., Media, Pa., took second place in the 1500 and 3000 meter runs.

The women's team also took first at the Sterling meet last Saturday, and with only a little over a week to prepare, the team is definitely looking forward to the KCAC league finals which will be held here April 30 and May 1.

"We're looking forward to KCAC. This is the best that Mac has done in track in a long time," added Deanna Koehler, fr., Udell, Ia.

Sports Comment

with Kevin Burton

Here it is, the obligatory baseball preview. These things are supposed to be written before the season ever starts, that wasn't possible in this case.

This off-season players (and even a few managers) moved from city to city faster than you could say "last year was a croc." Interestingly enough, a lot of the players who were involved in strike negotiations have been traded away. But now things have settled down, so let's get on with the prediction.

N.L. WEST — LOS ANGELES should represent this division again this year. Only this time, they'll actually have to win the most games. Next should be HOUSTON. If they can just manage to score a few runs once in a while their pitching will hold them in the race. It's just incredible to think that a team could lose a J.R. Richard and still have the best pitching staff in baseball.

CINCINNATI lost their entire starting outfield from last year, primarily because they didn't want to pay their high salaries. They do have enough to squeeze into third, but it will be a distant third.

ATLANTA will be no worse than fourth, and with a little luck could take over third. The Braves pitching could give out at any time though.

SAN DIEGO and SAN FRANCISCO will likely assume their customary doormat position.

N.L. EAST — MONTREAL was only an inning from the World Series last year, and this year they'll probably make it there. The ST. LOUIS Cardinals will be a close second in the east. Now that Garry Templeton has gone to San Diego, the Cards' ship should sail a little smoother.

The rest of the division doesn't look very good. PHILADELPHIA is getting too old to run with Montreal's spring chickens. NEW YORK will probably hit a lot of home runs this year, with George Foster and Dave Kingman in the same line-up. PITTSBURGH is also getting old, and the lumber they used to carry to the plate is getting quieter each year. CHICAGO, poor Chicago. Although they might nudge ahead of Pittsburg or New York, they aren't expected to do very much damage at all.

A.L. EAST — Last year in the divisional playoffs, MILWAUKEE got the experience of pressure packed games. This should propel them past NEW YORK, although there should be a fight to the finish for this divisional crown.

BALTIMORE could win in some other divisions, but in the American East they'll have to settle for third. Baltimore seems to have taken over as the top home-run hitting club in the east, but that won't be enough.

Expect the CLEVELAND Indians to finally make themselves heard in this race. At one time they were the worst team in the league. But they've improved, although it's hard to see because they play in the toughest division in baseball.

DETROIT and BOSTON are not weak sisters, but they don't figure to be very close when it's all said and done. TORONTO plays in a major league city and park, wears major league uniforms and draws major league salaries, but they still play triple A baseball.

A.L. WEST — Royals fans, get ready for another playoff year. KANSAS CITY has the most overall talent in the west and over the long haul they'll prove it. Don't be surprised if OAKLAND stays in the race until the very end though. The A's use the same basic philosophy as Kansas City, and that is to make things happen, especially on the base paths.

CALIFORNIA, CHICAGO and TEXAS will take up the next three spots in the standings, in what order, who knows. Chicago is pretty much of an unknown quantity at this time.

SEATTLE wins sixth place by default over MINNESOTA. Minnesota's new home, the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome, looks as if it will be a better home run park than the Wrigley Field, Atlanta Fulton County Stadium or the Kingdome in Seattle ever were.

Women's softball team sees first action in Wichita

by Kerri Vinson

The newly organized McPherson Women's Softball Club travelled to Wichita last weekend to the Friends University Tournament for their first regular season action, which ended on a promising note despite McPherson's loss of three games in the tournament.

"I felt that we played well together, considering our inexperience," stated Mary Beth Sands, fr., Piper. "We did some things right."

The twelve member team was organized by Kathy Patterson, with Doris Coppock accepting the position as the faculty sponsor. Practice sessions are daily and, in spite of the fact that the club is not school sponsored and therefore has no coach, the team has managed to enjoy excellent attendance at these practices.

The next action for the softballers will be games with Marymount and Sterling, if all goes as planned. All games will be away and at the convenience of the opponents.
