ETHICS OF LAW.

By S. C. MILLER.

The great struggle of this universe lies between Cosmos and Chaos. Order must prevail and anarchy be suppressed. The one burning passion of all thinking men is progress. Our highest ideals are good homes, efficient schools, effective churches, peaceful communities, and a people who are living "The Simple Life." We look with contempt upon all discord in families, illiteracy, irreverence, strife, debauchery and oppression. Law is the foster nurse of order. She sits upon her throne and under the scepter of truth all order must be established.

When we speak of an ideal civilization, we refer to that state of affairs in which government is thoroughly organized, the people are well informed and their moral behavior is of the first order, science and art are highly developed and peace reigns supreme. If we fall short in any of these standards, our civilization is just so far from the ideal. No argument need here be produced to convince us that all men have not yet reached this high plane of living. The fact that each year there are millions of gallons of liquor consumed by our nation, will convince any Intelligent observer that we have many law breaking citizens stamped with immorality. Our civilization as a nation is measured neither by our highest types of genius, nor by the corruptions of the slums; but it is determined by the sum total of the masses. Every metropolis has its dens of vice and crime, where influences are degrading. Among them lawlessness, and low morals exist. With such a vast number of law breakers, our place on the scale of advancement is materially lowered.

All men do not maintain public tranquility because they do not have the inherent dispositions to do so. Hence, it is necessary to employ force and punishment. Too many seem to feel that their duty to the nation is a limited one; that obedience to national laws is the only obligation really resting upon them; that so long as they do not hurt the national life they are called upon for nothing more. Whatever they may do for individual development, or in the discharge of obligations to society or the common wealth is done without any appreciation of its effect upon the national life. It is enough for them to be assured that they do not disobey the laws of the Republic; that when called upon, they render the personal services demanded, and that their character and the conduct and behavior springing therefrom are such as to keep them out of the police court. It never dawns upon them that the prosperity and safety of the country depends at all upon their personal efforts. They eagerly turn over to others the full responsibility of any national improvement. They are satisfied to take what comes, and doing nothing beyond the bounds of propriety, are ready to believe that they are numbered among the best products of the nation.

Such men need to be awakened to sense of activity. By their very indifference they invite the advances of ignorance and oppression. It has been well said "Morality, religion and education are the three main pillars of the State, and the substance of all private good." A community where these are unknown is but a hot bed of anarchy, and promulgates the lowest forms of degeneracy. Therefore they should be given the place of primary importance. Law is not necessarily law because it is a command, but rather because it points out the general rule of action, from the very nature of the thing to which it is directed. It only attaches consequences to violations. The law making body of the State simply prescribes a rule of procedure with certain penalties for its violation, leaving it to the will of the citizen whether he shall observe it or not, and with the executive department of the State to enforce obedience.

When the State adopts the Divine Law, "That all men shall have liberty and safety," it recognizes the moral principles that a man who will destroy the happiness of another, must be a man of corrupt morals, who has a selfish heart fatally bent on mischief, who is devoid of all social relations and duties.—That community which permits the sale of intoxicants has not rationally considered its effects upon men. They ostracise the man who is reeling down the street, and proudly beating their breasts they pride themselves that "They are not as other men are". They have not stopped to consider they are directly responsible for this man's condition.

It is true indeed, that "The law was not made for the righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient." An ignorant man may be compelled to accept a statute; a bad man may be forced to obey a law. But in either case the work of the government must be done by men who govern themselves

The morality of the State determines her strength and good Government. When the Legislature passes a law it must be made for some purpose. Laws that are not enforced, only obstruct the machinery of government.

The conscience of man is the light by means of which he may know what is right, and what he ought to do, or ought not to do. If the conscience is pure and clean, it will lead him from the evil to the good; it will teach him to maintain the truth, to live peaceably with his neighbors and to establish justice. Our individual self is determined by things we love and admire. The public life of a nation cannot be better than its private life. No government was ever more effective than the people made it, nor more corrupt than the people suffered it to become.

Shall our nation stand for an external display only? Our apparent grandeur as a State is a mere pretention if we ignore those essential principles of morality and of law that give life to a Nation. The electric current may carry our messages to the ends of the earth; our country may be adorned by magnificent palaces; the stars and stripes may float on every breeze; yet all must fall and crumble away unless it is bound together and strengthened by those moral principles that are the foundations of an enlightened citizenship. When corrupt principles are allowed to influence public acts and selfish considerations to turn the people from upholding the laws and from giving their best efforts to the public good, our highest interests must suffer.

Every great movement must have its small beginnings. In all ages men have opposed new movements of progress. But by continued agitation on the part of a few, these movements have constantly been held before the public until finally they have overcome public criticism and led to the overthrow of some great evil. So today the Prohibition party must be a constant protest. Perhaps many may think this an unwise policy to follow, but the solution of the liquor problem will depend upon the persistent efforts of the few to bring the actual conditions before the public.

It is the office of the Civil Law to enforce the principles of the Divine and the Moral Law against those persons who are a harm to themselves and a menace to the public. The standard of duty in the State is the same as that which receives the sanction of the Christian Religion. The State has adopted this standard and should compel its obedience. She being commissioned for a moral purpose it follows that every officer and citizen must feel the weight of a high moral obligation. Our executives are bound under a moral duty to remedy all invasions upon right. The State has within itself ample power to do all things essential to the welfare and happiness of its citizens, whether it concern the conduct of the individual or the community.

With the enlightenment of the present civilization, the State should fulfill its sacred mission by passing all the necessary laws to safeguard and promote Christian morality. She should illuminate her statutes with those precepts of right which are taught by the Christ himself, and which have been cradled in our homes, fostered in our schools, and nurtured in our churches. If these laws are not observed or enforced, it is the fault of the people and their public executives that stand behind the administration of all law. If results are not up to the standard, it is due to the malicious indifference of the individual connected with the particular cases of bad government. The State, as one of God's highest agencies, and its officers His ministers, it follows that the best men should fill all public places. The citizens and officials alike have moral obligations to perform for the well being of the highest demands of justice.

When all public stations are occupied by none but pure men, and there is full, active and hearty cooperation by the citizens, then justice will be upheld and maintained according to the Law of God. When our laws are strictly enforced by public sentiment, our Ship of State will stand out in new beauty. Her soil will be enriched by righteousness, and men will do right because they love the highest standards of integrity.

Prof. S. B. Fahnestock,

McPherson, Kansas.

Dear Prof. Fahnestock:—

I have just received word that I have been elected a member of the Stanford Chapter of the scientific honor society Sigma Xi. You know the society is to scientists what the Phi Beta Kappa is to literati. This comes as a result of my research on a pedagogical problem in the psychological laboratory, which I did at Stanford for my M. A. degree, I suppose. My Thesis was "Formal Discipline from the Standpoint of Experimental Psychology," and my degree came from the Psychological Department.

Sincerely,

J. E. COOVER.

J. E. COOVER, M. A.,
STANFORD UNIVERSITY,
was born March 1872. In Sept.

1900 he attended the McPherson College taking Arithmetic, Grammar, Penmanship, Stenography, Typewriting, Vocal Music, and Literary Society Work. (Stenography 100 words per minute.)

He next entered the the U. P. railroad office in McPherson and learned telegraphy. Speed 80 words per minute.

He next learned the printing trade in Longmont, Colo.

In 1894 he entered the State Normal, Greeley, Colo.

In the summer of 1896 he gave penmanship lessons.

He was graduated from the State Normal in the spring of 1898. In Sept. 1898, he was elected as principal of a two room school in Como, Colo., and in Sept. 1898 he entered Stanford University.

Prof. Coover took charge of the Commercial Department of the Tuolumne County High School last fall at a salary of $1000. Recently he has been promoted to the principalship at $1500 per year, and is applying pedagogical laws every day and fully expects to be seated in the Normal School Chair of Psychology before many years.

He has risen to where he is through adverse circumstances—always having to earn his own way.

He says, "but this eating and sleeping was all subservient to my professional aims. I had first to get an Academic education then the Professional training qualifying me to teach.

Prof. Coover sent us $100 for the McPherson College Carnegie Library. This shows that he is trying to help others as well as himself. He says, "my aim in teaching Normal School Psychology is based upon the influence for good which a man can have in that position."

In reading this brief sketch you can readily see how a poor boy may rise to prominence and usefulness.

ALUMNI NOTES

'08 Lester Williams spent a few days with his brother last week. He is a successful farmer at Belleville, Kans., and a loyal supporter of his alma mater.

'02 E. D. Baldwin was poisoned by eating canned salmon at Kansas City and was dangerously ill for a couple of weeks. He is now at home recuperating and hopes soon to resume his work at the Union National Bank.

'03 J. J. Franz made us a very pleasant call and promised to return for commencement week. He and P. C. Hiebert are contemplating an evangelistic tour of the Pacific States during the summer. Mr. Franz will have charge of the singing which is a very important feature in religious work.

Joe Shirkey and daughter of Belleville, Mich., renewed his acquaintance at his alma mater and visited his brothers. Joe successfully operates a farm and finds time to teach and preach and thus uses his education for the good of his fellows.

Dr. J. C. Klepinger enjoys a large and lucrative practice at Herington. Recently while on his way home from making a professional call he was confronted by two footpads. He quickly gave the first a right hand upper cut and setting down his case soon dispatched the other.

S. J. Miller has received a letter from D. H. Arnold, who is personally superintending the work of the Mountain View Mining and Milling Co. Mr. Arnold stated that the machinery is now in position and the stamp mill will soon be in operation.

EDITORIAL

Another vacation is here with its pleasures and its problems. Many of our students return to their homes and assist their parents. Others will engage at various other labors during the summer. A large number will again engage in agency work. This though difficult and for the most part unpleasant, brings good financial returns and gives the student a practical training which fits him for success in business. Most of our successful business men have canvassed. We are pleased that most of our students are planning to be back in September. So far as we know we have not had a student who was dissatisfied with the school and many will bring their friends with them on their return.

ACHILLIANS WON.

About two months ago the college students were divided up into two equal divisions. One was called the Achillian camp and the other the Ulyssian. The purpose of this was to arouse interest in out door games as so many of our students at the close of the year neglect to take proper exercise. As a result the campus has been alive every evening with students. Each one practiced the exercise which he enjoyed best and in which he could excel. Several tennis courts, croquet grounds and basket ball grounds were occupied every evening. The business men gave silver cups and medals for each contest and on Field Day the final contests were held. The Achillians won. As a result of these contests no doctor has been seen on College Hill and every student is ready for his summer's work.

SOCIAL

Prof. H. J. Harnly and his Bible Class gave a reception for the students who are members of the Brethren church. The purpose was to give them information concerning the church and its history together with the bright prospects for her future. Among the speakers were Pres. Frantz, Prof. S. J. Miller, F. H. Crumpacker, Mary Frantz, S. C. Miller, J. H. B. Williams, F. W. Cline, Elder J. J. Yoder, Mrs. F. H. Crumpacker, and Prof. Harnly acting as toastmaster. Among the things learned were the following: The Brethren church had a Sunday School in America several years before Robert Raikes did in England. They have always stood for a simple life, opposed war and slavery and intemperance of every sort and the world is now learning these lessons. The future of the S. S. work, Ministerial, Missionary, and Educational are possibly brighter than any other church.

A three course supper was served and at the close the class presented Prof. Harnly with a token of remembrance.

NEWS NOTES

Levi Andes of Newton, contributed $5.00 worth of books to the college library.

Dr. W. H. Fahnestock and wife spent a couple of weeks with their son Charles and Prof. and Mrs. Fahnestock. They left for Dayton, Ohio.

Mrs. C. M. Beachy of Newton and Miss Katie Olinger of Pennsylvania, visited several days with the family of J. M. Snyder.

The Baptist people of the city are erecting a $2500 parsonage.

Julius Caesar was played at the Opera House, May 8, by The Sanford Dodge Company.

O. S. Vaniman and Matilda Quilhorst represented our Sunday School at the State convention at Lawrence and gave us an excellent report of the meeting. They also attended the meeting of the State Volunteer Band.

Mary Mohler and Della Vaniman were sent as delegates from our Volunteer Band to the State convention at Lawrence.

Our new catalogue is being prepared and will be ready for mailing about June 20. It will contain several new cuts and promises to be the best catalogue yet issued. The past year has been one of unusual prosperity for the college.

We are pleased to announce to our friends that Prof. J. A. Clement will again resume his place at the head of the department of Pedagogy and History. Prof. Clement will receive a hearty welcome from all his former students.

C. H. Slifer one of our collegiate graduates who has been principal of the East Building the past year was unanimously re-elected at an increased salary. Mrs. Lillian Matthews, Bertha Colline, Nellie Hinkson, Grace Wright and Edna Suffield have also been chosen as teachers in the city schools.

The Y. M. C. A. have had a very prosperous year. They gave a farewell meeting for the Senior boys. Short talks were made by each Senior. At the close of the meeting a collection of $80 was taken for the delegates to Lake Geneva.

The musical department of the college has had a very prosperous year. Several large chorus classes have been kept going during the year and the graduates are fully up to the standard set by former graduates.

Rev. J. Witmore and wife, who have been spending the winter in California returned home for the summer.

Mr. J. R. Engle of Emporia spent several days with C. H. Slifer.

The Y. W. C. A. gave a farewell to the Senior girls on May 20. Prof. Miller addressed them on "Woman's Place in the World." Some of the best workers are going out but others have been carefully trained to take their place, and the work next year will even surpass the excellent record of the present year. They have selected their delegates to the Y. W. C. A. conference at Waterloo.

WILL BE SUPERINTENDENT.

Prof. George Edgecomb, a graduate of our Normal class, was nominated for County Superintendent at the recent county Republican convention. Mr. Edgecomb is a wide-awake, energetic educator and will fill the office with credit to himself and his Alma Mater. The Canton School Board will not let him off but have raised his salary and have induced him and his wife to remain for another year.

Mrs. H. J. Harnly and son and daughter returned from a two months' visit at Long Beach, Cal. They report a very delightful time.

The college chapel was crowded to its fullest capacity Sunday evening at the Baccalaureate services.

Promptly at 8 p. m. the graduates, numbering over fifty marched in and took the front seats in the center of the chapel. Pres. Frantz chose for his text, Luke 12.48, "For unto whomsoever much is given much will be required." Every sentence was a gem of thought.

Elders Mohler, Mannon and Eller who constitute the Visiting Board of McPherson College spent a few days with us. They were largely pleased with the work of the school.

A number of the students attended the Messiah at Lindaborg.

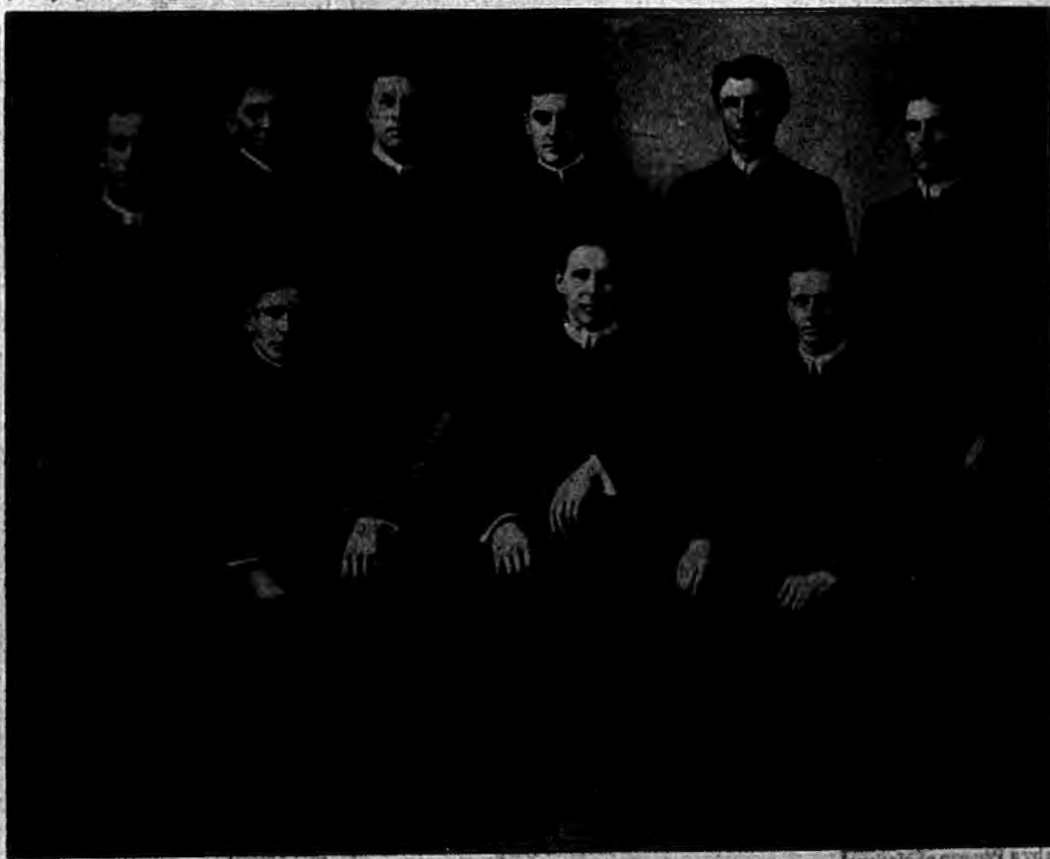

The ball diamond is now in fine shape; look out for a game.

High vaulting, shot and hammer putting are the order of the day at present.

Miss Gift of Smith Center visited the Institution recently.

E. J. Frantz of Conway Springs one of our old students was here on a visit not long since.

Prof. H. J. Harnly and S. C. Miller returned from Holton. They did not bring home the prize, but
