Pondering With The President . . . Spring Fever Strikes

This is the time of the year when that unavoidable disease, Spring Fever, reaches out of the atmosphere and lays hold upon us.

Its diagnosis is not difficult: bleary eyes, weakness in limbs, yawning in the morning and in the evening, snoring in class, a general draggy feeling, and acute pain at the sight of a book.

Its cure is not as easy as its diagnosis. The easiest thing to do is to lie down, or to push the books behind the bed and go for a walk, or to relax and sleep at the table, in the classroom, in the midst of company, and everywhere else.

It is better, however, to stiffen the back, prop the eyelids open, sleep at the proper time, and try to finish the year with honor.

Already the schedule of final exams is posted on the bulletin boards of the college. The end of the school year is so near that we can begin to smell the freedom from academic affairs which it will bring.

I suggest the following as a cure for spring fever:

Read the book, even if it does cause acute pain.

Write the term paper so you do not have to worry about it.

Drink plenty of water.

Eat some fruit.

Take exercises at the regular times.

Say, "This Spring Fever, too, shall pass away, but as for me, I shall have completed my school year with honor."
