

THE CO-EDS TO SEEK A HAPPY HOME WHILE THE YOUNG MEN LOOK TO THE BUSINESS WORLD

In Ten Years Many Of The Fairer Sex Hope To Be In Their Own Homes—Some Don't Know What They Will Be Doing Ten Years From Now—Many Give Reasons For Coming To McPherson

By Edna Nyquist

It takes all kinds of people to make a world—and a college. The other day in the library a variety of students answered two character-analyzing questions. One was "How did you happen to come to McPherson College?" and the other was "Where do you expect to be in ten years?"

An attractive senior girl with brown eyes and brown hair said with a hint of oratory in her voice that she came because it was a small Christian school and in ten years she frankly expects to be doing domestic work. At the other end of the table was another senior this time a boy, hailing from Idaho, who came because his brother had attended school here and it was more or less a family tradition. He expects to be in some kind of legal business in a decade or possibly in congress.

Next was a sophomore girl with wide blue eyes and plenty of talent. She came because the influence of a Christian college is good because this is an inexpensive school. She doesn't want to be an old maid school teacher and of course matrimony is the easiest way to avoid that.

A senior minister attends because he is located here and the educational standards are as good as any other college. He prefers attending a small school because mass education does not enter in. In ten years he will still be in his chosen profession.

A little junior girl with a curly-framed face came principally on the inducement of a teacher of hers in high school, a graduate of M. C. She, too, expects to be married in ten years.

A senior man with possibilities and a spark of nature's fire said he entered college here because his folks sent him. In ten years, he said, he expects to be digging ditches and selling needles on the side. He will do in bachelors quarters and write a book on the merits of a college education in his spare time.

A girl with a saintly face and blond hair came because of family connections, and she expects to teach Latin. Ad infinitum. At least those are her present plans.

A Colorado young man came because he liked the student body and because Dr. V. F. Schwalm came to his town and asked for students. In ten years he expects to be teaching. A native of the Sooner state considered McPherson as the college he liked the best. He expects to be in Africa doing mission work in ten years or preaching somewhere in this country.

A laughing sophomore girl with dark hair attends college here because it is close to her home. She has aspirations in the field of interior decoration and hopes to be in a city in that work in a decade.

A pretty blond from a short distance east, came because M. C. has a better faculty than most small college. She doesn't know where she will be in ten years so she picked Kentucky at random. Beside her was an equally pretty brunette from the Silver state. She journeyed here because her brother did before her and because M. C. attempts to develop four-fold life. She would like to have a nice home of her own after she has taught four or five years.

A senior with wit and brains said he was following the line of least resistance when he came here—he had to go home every week-end to see his girl. He expects to continue to follow the line of least resistance for the next ten years at least.

A little girl with curly hair was brought down by her daddy. She has started to hitch-hike westward and homeward several times but she has always come back. She has a mental picture of herself in ten years—hair pulled back tight, ruler in hand, little black apron, and presto! she has changed to an old-fashioned kind of teacher.

Still another young man said it was the best college close to his home. Perhaps he will be in Wichita in business in ten years. Still another said, "I'll bite! But I guess I came through the influence of an M. C. graduate. He thinks he will be in McPherson in business in future years.

McPherson has always been the school one M. C. co-ed contemplated attending. She, too, is hoping for a happy married life. Another with the same wish for the future, came because her two brothers and both of her parents attended school here.

M. C. is a growing institution and it's headed some place, according to a young man in this college and that is the reason he came here. He has ambitions to be in the African mission field in a decade.

A rather quiet young lady, much interested in religious work, is in McPherson because of the type of social life one finds in a religious institution. She is also quite interested in a married career.

Sometimes the answers were jokingly given but if we would look seriously into the matter we could look behind even the veil of jokes and say, "Why is each one here and do they have a definite goal? Or is that yet to be awakened?"

HERSHEY LECTURES ON SYNTHETIC DIAMONDS

Also Shows Slides And Movie Films Of Work

Thurs., Feb. 12—This afternoon Dr. J. Willard Hershey and several of his chemistry assistants explained and illustrated by motion pictures the making of the world's largest synthetic diamonds.

Dr. Hershey read a paper relating the fundamentals of the structure of the diamond, and a brief history of attempts to make artificial diamonds. Scientists have been attempting to make artificial diamonds for several centuries. Finally in the latter part of the 19th century the French chemist Moissan, succeeded in producing several minute synthetic diamonds, however these were too small for any practical use.

A set of slides showed the work of diamond production in South Africa. Large numbers of men and costly machinery are used to find and sort out the natural diamonds. Another set of several slides showed some of the apparatus used in the laboratory for the making of the synthetic diamonds. The electric furnace and carbon crucibles used are ones especially made to Dr. Hershey's specifications.

The moving picture reel showing Dr. Hershey's production of the world's largest diamond, was taken on the campus, and in the chemistry laboratory. The largest diamond made by Dr. Hershey is four times as large and 64 times as heavy as the largest ever made by Moissan.

After the reel was shown, the meeting was dismissed. Those present were permitted to see the world's largest synthetic diamond thru a microscope. The electric furnace used in making it, was on the table for inspection.

Dr. Hershey and his assistants are at present working to perfect a method of producing larger synthetic diamonds.

"THE BURGLAR"

A Play In One Act

Time: Sunday night, 7:30 o'clock.
Place: Kitchen girl's dormitory.
Characters: Hero, Heroine.

Heroine: (As Hero comes in the lobby door) Oh, Hero. Come here. There is someone in the kitchen.

Hero: Sure. (He goes to her side). Now let me go first. I am a man.

(They cautiously creep down the steps to the dining hall and make their way thru the darkness to the kitchen door).

Hero: (With his ear to the door). I don't hear a sound. (Pushes the door open and walks into the kitchen). Ah. There he is in the storeroom. See the light beneath the door.

Heroine: Oh, do be careful for one can never tell what these burglars will do.

Hero: (Turning to Heroine) I am going in there Heroine but there are a few things I must tell you first. I have the sweetest little girl in the world, to me, back in Pennsylvania and if anything should happen to me please tell her that I died a brave man with love in my heart for her. And my parents.
