ANNUAL PUBLICATION OF THE STUDENT BODY

Back to School we go---

As the flame is to the moth, so is McPherson College to her sons and daughters from the cotton fields of the South to the lakes of Minnesota, from the West's craggy grandeur to Virginia's wooded hills.

Every September finds old friends as well as new acquaintances meeting at the End of Euclid, each with the hope that this year will be equal to his anticipation. Back to school each student goes with his dreams of the life he looks forward to at McPherson!

To the Bittinger Family

When the Bittinger family came to McPherson College's campus in the fall of 1940, they made for themselves a place which had not been there before. Now that they are gone, they leave a spot which can never be filled. This page set aside to the Bittingers' is more than a dedication of a book; it is a thank you from a student body.

Concerning the Bittingers, the very fact that their own interpretation of the good life is of more importance to them than their being McPherson College students' ideal family, accounts for the place they have won in the hearts of all. The lives of those who were in Dr. B.'s classes, who saw and knew his family will be brighter because of that experience.

From 6:30 in the morning when the light in Professor Hess' room winks at the darkness, until curfew sounds at the end of Euclid, Sharp Hall is the hub of a very busy wheel. From the knotty walled Student Union room in its basement to the chambers of higher learning on the upper floors, the Ad building attracts all.

Thoughts of McPherson College are not complete without a vision of Sharp Hall. Its tower is the apex of Euclid Avenue; within its walls is the sanctuary of our president; through its doors passes the life of the institution; under its roof many a chapel program is received and digested; in its files are records of students, past and present, perfect and imperfect; on its bulletin board have been posted announcements innumerable; through its halls flock a veritable drove of Spectator seekers every Friday noon; on its third floor a Quad office floor parts company with its nearest baseboard. For these reasons, this patriarch of the College's buildings merits recognition.

President of The College

President Peters has become an institution at McPherson College. Since he has come to the college he has proved himself an able leader and a competent executive during a period when the chair of the presidency has been anything but a comfortable seat.

Dr. Peters has been a tireless worker for the betterment of the resources of the school. Results of his efforts are nowhere better shown than in our excellent enrollment records.

He has become a part of that "certain something" that we are pleased to call true "Bulldog Spirit". Our Prexy is the friend of every student, the man behind the men and women who give McPherson College her good name.

Dean of The College

Dean Boitnott is a classroom wit of fine turn and rare ability. His grace and charm, a product of the South, are keystones in his adeptness as an advisor to students. His expression "you've got to dig in" is well worth a sophomore's second thought. Our dean is a purposeful organizer.

Annual Conference, McPherson, 1943

The 157th recorded Annual Conference of the Church of the Brethren was held at McPherson in 1943 with W. W. Peters, Moderator, Wm. M. Bealim, Secretary, and A. C. Baugher, Reader. Standing Committee members numbered 71, church delegates 376. Of the 13 living Moderators at the time of the conference, 12 were present and of these, five have or have had direct relationship with McPherson College. All of the living presidents of McPherson College except one and all of the pastors of the McPherson Church of the Brethren were present.

Outstanding events and acts at the conference of historical significance were the following: (1) The appearance on the same program in the Church of the Brethren of representatives from the three larger branches of the German Baptist Brethren Church; (2) The putting into operation of a retirement plan for ministers and missionaries, and a rural rehabilitation plan; (3) The initiating of a comprehensive study of the colleges with a long-time view to their continued improvement; (5) The building of reserve funds to be available for the work of missions and for agencies of reconstruction when peace comes again to the world.

Women's Council

To orientate awe-struck freshman girls in the fall, Women's Council promoted a welcome tea for all campus sisters; to accustom Macleggians to the dignity and finesse of formality, the Men's and Women's Councils collaborated in the giving of the formal banquet, and in honor of Leap Year sponsored an all school party in January. In February hushed whisperings of the girls announced that Heart Sister Week had arrived, and above all, not forgetting those outside the sphere of the campus, the Women's Council sponsored weekly meetings of the Red Cross.

Women's Quartet

Whether entertainers of ladies' clubs and school folk, or a part of an inspiring worship service, the girls' quartet harmonized convincingly. Elsie Mast saw her first action as first soprano; Eloise McKnight, second soprano, Lucile Harris, first alto, and Jean McNicol, second alto, had served previous terms.

Men's Council

Service as a "go-between" for the men of McPherson and the college faculty is the main purpose of the Men's Council. This selected group of men from each class under the leadership of the Dean of Men meets regularly and in these particularly difficult times attempts to establish and maintain a normal pace of life on Macampus. A quiet organization this council, but there is strength in its unobtrusiveness, and these men do much to keep the entire student body on an even keel in spite of turbulent outside factors.

Men's Quartet

With three lettermen serving as its nucleus, and Kent Naylor as top tenor, the men's quartet last fall set a pace which it has never let down. Their performances have been a credit to the college.

Berths other than that of first tenor have been filled by Keith Burton, second tenor, Eugene Lichet, baritone, and Alvin Klotz, low bass.

Kent Naylor, Keith Burton, Eugene Lichet, Alvin Klotz.

Student Ministers

McPherson College is the Christian institution that it is largely because of these men. These are the men who believe the ministry to be the highest calling of man, and are here preparing themselves for service.

The student ministers are not an unorganized group of aspiring preachers, but are a systematized fellowship with leaders, a regular meeting time, definite objectives and duties. A steering committee directs the activities of the organization with the help of the faculty sponsor, Dr. Metzler. This year's steering committee is composed of Edward Murray, chairman, Edwin Rodabaugh, and Charles Dumond.

The group has been especially interested this year in sending deputation teams into the churches near McPherson. Their men's chorus has done some concertizing for programs. Seven of the student ministers have pastorates which they serve every Sunday.

Second row: Rodabaugh, Maxe, Lenkley, Dumond, Parris, Thomas.
Third row: Brubaker, Swiger, Erisman, Lichty, Franz.

Basketball

They said it couldn't be done, but the McPherson Bulldogs did it. The possibilities of a good basketball team for the 1943-44 season was just a fanciful vision a year before. Nevertheless, the team's record shows that the potentialities of a freshman team had been underestimated by some. McPherson won 14 of her 16 games. The two losses were administered at the hands of Kansas State College of Manhattan. Had there been a conference this year, McPherson would have undoubtedly been the undisputed champion having handed Baker, Ottawa, Bethany and Sterling, double defeats.

With a lack of college games to be played, Coach Hayden substituted service team games. The first game of the season, against Camp Phillips, found the Bulldog squad with eleven members; nine of them were freshmen. Gene Coach Hayden explains the finer points of the game.

Lichy, senior, and Glenn Swinger, junior, were the upperclassmen. The Bulldogs won the game with Camp Phillips by the score of 49 to 39. This victory was the beginning of a successful season. The annual college Homecoming was climaxed with a basketball game between the Bethany Swedes and the McPherson Bulldogs. McPherson won this game with a 44 point margin, 71 to 27.

The McPherson squad lost three men to the army and gained one from another school. Vance Carlson, brilliant 17.1 point average per game forward, Bobby Barr, starting guard, and Dale Ferguson, substitute and starting forward, were all called to the Army Air Corps after the mid-year mark. Norman Gibbs, substitute guard, transferred from Missouri University in the middle of the year.

Because of injuries and men leaving for the service, the starting line up was constantly being changed. Paul Markham, Bob Lowe, Dale Ferguson, Don Keltner, and John Brown all saw service as first team starters. Fanny Markham, forward, and Glenn Swinger, center, were the dependable mainstays throughout the entire season. Fanny was the smoothest player on the squad; watching him, basketball seemed to take no effort at all. His speed and accuracy gave him a 15.7 point average per game, second in number only to Vance Carlson. Glenn Swinger's aggressiveness was a major reason for our team's success. Although not extraordinarily tall, Glenn's deceptiveness in shooting and handling the ball made him a positive threat for McPherson's opponents.

The McPherson Bulldogs finished the season with a total of 834 points, against their opponents 576. The average points scored per game by McPherson were 52.13, her opponents 36.0.

A great deal of recognition for such a fine team goes to Coach Thomas Hayden. It was he who turned a squad of young and inexperienced players into a victorious team. This year's team was known for its ability to play together. The reason for this asset was the fact that Coach Hayden inspired his players with the idea of being "shipmates". It was a matter of one for all and all for one. Coach Hayden also realized that with a team that was comparatively short and inexperienced, speed and the teaching of fundamentals were necessary. Many hours were spent in learning these fundamentals and in the grueling experience of being trained into condition.

Last but not least, Coach inspired all of the squad to be athletes in every sense of the word. Hard working, hard playing, gentlemen on the floor and off. A college education does not always contain the learning of sportsmanship. Twelve members of a victorious 1943-44 basketball squad have had the privilege of acquiring such an asset under the leadership of a man who converted a dream into a reality.

Dale "Rip" Ferguson, forward, the smallest, but one of the scrappiest members of the squad. He was a fast and accurate forward with a sense of humor.

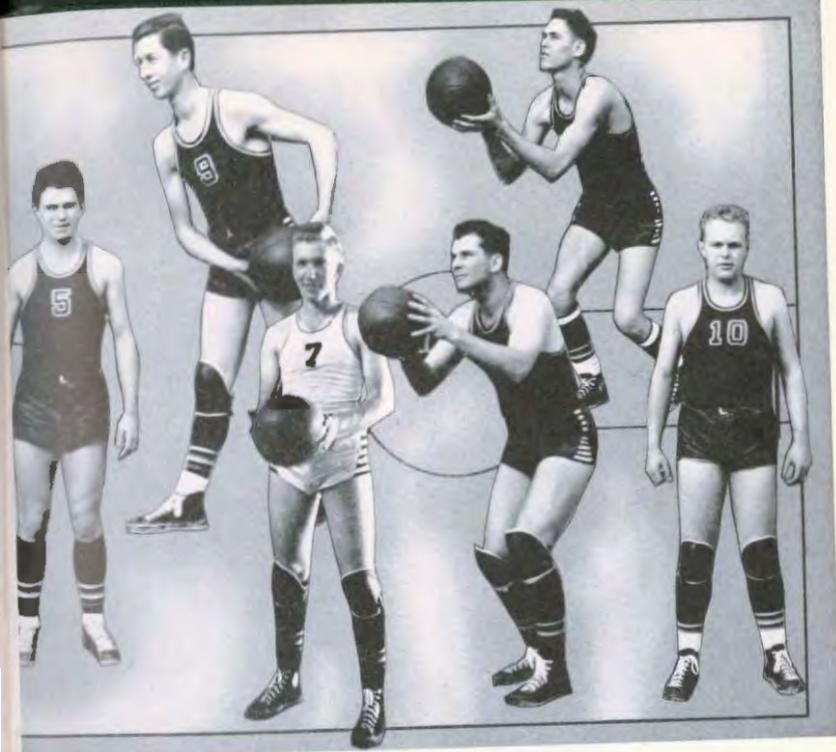

Norman "Slim" Gibbs, guard, transferred from Missouri University and the gridiron in the middle of the year. He shows promise for future seasons.

Bobby Barr, guard, always wore a grin on his face. He left for the Army Air Corps after ten games with a fine playing season behind him.

John Brown, guard, a converted football player, was a good defensive man because of his ability to break up the opponents' passes and dribbling attacks.

Paul Markham, forward, "stuck" to his man like a leech. He used a one-handed push shot with uncanny accuracy. Paul is brother of "Fanny".

Don Keltner, forward, showed true Bulldog spirit, as well as accuracy and clean sportsmanship, in his appearances on the floor.

Louis Rogers, guard, would rather play football, but he shows himself a fast and promising defensive player with a good eye for the basket.

Eugene Lichty, guard, a fast and skilful defensive man. A second year man, Gene is an excellent ball handler with an eye for intercepting the opponents' passes.

Vance "Swede" Carlson, forward, one of the finest rebounders on the court, left for the army after ten games with a 17.1 average per game.

Glenn Swinger, center, a rugged pivot man who always out-faked his opponent, scored many points because of his ability to shoot with either hand.

Francis "Fanny" Markham, forward, is a fast and deft ball handler who averaged 15.6 points per game. He played equally well on defense.

Bob Lowe, center, would rather play basketball than eat or sleep. He was a slow playing center with a good eye for making points.

The womanhood of McPherson

College this year have taken on duties which never before entered a well coiffed head. This change has not been a voluntary relinquishing of the reins by a group of cowed men students, but rather an arrangement brought about by necessity. Nearly seventy per cent of the college's enrollees preface their names with "Miss".

The new roles of these girls have ranged from the more menial tasks of janitoring college buildings to the intellectualism of manning the editorial staff of the weekly news organ.

In both endeavors, as well as in others, McPherson's bells were expendable.

In this section of the 1944 Quadrangle is found one of the largest assortments of male students of the civilian variety to be found in any Kansas church related college this year.

A total of forty-two examples of young manhood braved the onslaught of superior feminine forces to enroll last September. During the year, time, tide, and Uncle Sam each took its toll of this male constituency.

Although small in number, it may be truly said that they were mighty. McPHERSON's sons were conscientious students, shoulderers of many responsibilities, men of varied interests, upholders of old traditions so far as their diminished ranks would permit. Their acceptance of work enough to keep a group twice their number busy, has been noble.

Student Council

This legislative and executive body of student government states, interprets, and enforces its laws. Not a mere figurehead or spacemaker in college catalogs, the Student Council is a vital, working organization in whose hands student problems are unravelled. Through the work of this group faculty-student misunderstandings are at a minimum.

No small amount of credit for the smooth working of the Council goes to its officers. After Wayne Geisert, president, left school, his duties were taken over by Maxine Ruehlen, vice president, although he was chosen honorary president for the remainder of the school term. Ruth Shoemaker was treasurer of the organization, and Betty Burger its secretary.

Work of the Student Council reaches each student, whether he realizes it or not. Every student who participates in an extra curricular activity owes the council a vote of thanks, for the activity to which he belongs gets part of its funds from the council when, in the fall, the activity fee is apportioned to the various groups. Every student who ever reads a Spectator, a Growl or a Quadrangle is indebted to the Student Council and the Board of Publications directly under it, for they are responsible for publications. Supervision of elections is another of the Council's jobs.

During the school year of 1943-44, the Council has revised the administration of the Student Union Room, and has worked on a plan for putting up a curtain on the stage of the Student Assembly Room.

Recreational Council

The Recreational Council is an organization made up of members chosen by its own body, whose purpose is to learn the techniques of recreational leadership in order that the churches and communities in which its members later find themselves may have trained leaders to help carry on programs for constructive leisure. Their experience is in fields which will fit them for conducting inspirational worship services, directing camp activities, and planning worthwhile and wholesome parties.

Throughout fall, winter, and spring, the "rec" council, as they are known, met every Monday evening and planned frequent social events in which the whole school might participate. In addition, individual members have been cooperative in conducting parts of programs for other groups.

As any organization needs its leaders, so with the Recreational Council. Its executive powers are invested in a steering committee composed of three members. Wayne Parris has served as chairman of the steering committee, and the other two members have been Betty Burger and Eunice Swank. Much credit for the success of the work done by the Recreational Council is due Professor Dell for his interest and helpful leadership.

The work of the council proves beyond a doubt that constructive use of leisure is one of the attributes of the good life.

Keith and his pin-up girls, one might say! It has fallen the lot of these four to guide the policies of the upper half of the lower-classmen. Their duties include the apportioning of a budget and the collecting of same from class members, planning the social activities of their class, and in general, being Sophomore leaders. In spite of the general "trends of our time", these class officers have managed to keep the social ball rolling.

Freshmen

Contrary to indications printed above, members of the Freshman cabinet are not washouts! Rather, they and their fellow classmates are standouts. They have played a vital part in campus life this year. Theirs has been a new and unfamiliar job, but they have, in cooperation with other organizations, kept the calendar of events revolving smoothly. Freshman initiation safely weathered, they were able to enjoy the other social activities of the year.

Student Christian Movement

The Student Christian Movement, which is long for S. C. M., has this year, as in past years, attracted to its ranks more members than any organization. Its broad scope of interests, its humanitarian ideals and objectives, and its inspirational leadership have made it a potent force on the campus.

New commissions have been organized which have definite bearing on personal, community, national, and international life. Studies concerning personal relations, camp leadership, race relations, and current events added a note of variety and their timeliness made the endeavor doubly worthwhile. Student Volunteer commission was again active in guiding service-minded individuals.

The major undertaking of the S. C. M. this school year was the sponsoring of five Nisei students here on McPherson's campus. These three boys and two girls have, by their presence, given students an accurate picture of the average American-Japanese youth. The college is broader because they have been here.

Heretofore unheard of, the cabinet now has a meeting place which is exclusively its own. At the blast of the eight o'clock whistle on Friday mornings, the cabinet assembles in its newly renovated room in the basement of Sharp Hall. In addition to commission meetings, S. C. M. leaders have concerned themselves with conferences, chapel programs, and social events.

At the helm of the S. C. M. this year have been co-presidents Lucile Harris and Eugene Lichy.

Thespians

"All the world's a stage," but the Thespians prefer to think that a more pointed version of life as presented via footlights, grease paint, props, and clever quips is more entertaining than the common details of existence as one sees them every day.

A search for new members was the first concern of the Thespian Club as it looked forward to the 1943-44 season. Tryouts were held in September. They were stiff, but three women and three men came through the grueling experience to win coveted places in the club. They were Blanche Geisert, Susan Ikenberry, Norma Lea Jones, Dean Hoeffle, Don Keltner, and Marvin Reeves.

Although assured of membership the fledglings were forced to undergo an initiation at the hands of their senior members. The rites were performed at the Warren Hotel Blue Room at the annual Thespian banquet on October 4. Hilarity reigned when, the banquet consumed, those present rendered new versions of old classic selections. The success of the formal banquet proved to be the starting gun to a winning season.

Under the leadership of Maxine Ruchlen as president, work at a high level of achievement was begun and completed. Early in the season Rotter's and Vincer's "Letters to Lucerne" was chosen as first semester vehicle to be given in collaboration with the play production class, tryouts were held, the cast chosen, and rehearsals begun. As an added Homecoming attraction, it was given on December 10.

The play as a whole was well cast and convincingly interpreted. Its moral teachings prompted more than a second thought. Of special interest were the roles of Erna Schmidt, the German girl whose "letters to Lucerne" furnished the conflict of the drama, as played by Maxine Ruehlen; Felice Renoir, French antagonist as interpreted by Betty Burger; Sally Jackson, an American from the deep South, by Norma Lea Jones, and Keith Burton and Alice Mac Boyce in their character roles of French gardener and cook.

As a second semester project the club voted to sponsor three one-act plays and throw tryouts open to non-Thespians as well as seasoned dramatists. The decision was well received, and a sufficient number of students tried out for parts to make casting difficult.

The three comedies which were given were: "Lavender and Red Pepper," "The Exchange," and "Cinderella Married". Experience in directing was given to Thespian members Blanche Geisert, Maxine Ruehlen, and Betty Burger. As the old fashioned lavender and red pepper grandmother, Mary Beth Loshbaugh endeared herself to the audience; Freda Aurell's "Imp" from "The Exchange" had others as well as herself doubling up in mirth; Louis Rogers as Cinderella's country bumpkin lover out-yokelled all yokels.

This year has seen a revival of interest among Thespians in Alpha Psi Omega, national dramatics fraternity. Maxine Ruehlen, Betty Burger, Jean McNicol, Annette Glaster, Lucile Harris, and Wayne Geisert became members.

Betty Burger vice presidented the followers of Thespia this year, and Annette handled their debits and credits.

Debate

Praise from within ranks is of highest value and the McPherson debaters have among other colleges the reputation that they are a squad with which to be reckoned.

Illness, draft boards, and unforeseen circumstances have changed the personnel of the teams for each tournament but the Bulldog spirit has remained invincible. The sonorous voices of men debaters and the clipped speeches of the women have upheld McPherson's tradition of making an enviable record.

First event of the year was the interclass debates from which the Senior team, Betty Burger and Wayne Geisert, emerged victorious. Soon after, the tryouts followed, and varsity teams were selected: Maxine Ruehlen and Blanche Geisert, Anna Mae Tinkler and Annette Glasier, Wayne Geisert and Wayne Parris, Charles Lunkley and Robert Yoder.

The Bethel Invitation Tournament at Newton was the first intercollegiate event of the year, and on January 8 was held here the McPherson Economy Tournament. Eight Macalegians made the out of state trip to Lincoln, Nebraska, to attend the University of Nebraska Speech Tournament on February 25 and 26. Again on March 30, McPherson was the scene of activities when the Kansas Inter-Collegiate Debating League met here.

During the first semester the debate squad was under the leadership of Desmond W. Bittinger, and during the second semester James M. Berkebile took his place. As governor of the Province of the Plains for Pi Kappa Delta, Maurice Hess has guided McPherson debaters throughout the year.

Barkerettes

Off with the old and on with the new! The Pep Club of some several years vintage in the fall of 1943 changed its face, and the basketball team heard a newly energized organization cheering them on to a successful season.

It was early in the year that Gertrude Conner, president, Evelyn Wilson, vice-president, Shirley Wyckoff, secretary, and Betty Kimmel, treasurer, started making plans to revamp the old Pep Club. Their efforts were noticed in the metamorphosis which resulted in the Barkerettes. Barkerettes are now an exclusive, all-girl organization who appear in a body at half games in white sweaters with bulldog monograms, and red skirts. Under the new set-up a constitution was drawn up and adopted, and regular meetings were held. Membership was restricted to those voted in by old members.

Cheer leaders are automatically Barkerettes, but the cooperation between Barkerettes and cheer leaders is not so automatic. A well synchronized yell is the result of practice, and does not happen by accident. Regular meetings of Barkerettes for special practice resulted in a nucleus of solidarity for the whole cheering section.

Through the efforts of cheer leaders Bob Mays, Annette Glasier, and Keith Burton, as well as individuals within the Barkerettes, clever original pep assemblies were held before games. Olie's funeral on the day before the tussle with the Swedes, and the all-girl Swedish Sympathy Orchestra were examples of Barkerette participation.

Chemistry

The Chemistry Club, one of the largest organizations on the campus, was formed and chartered by the late Dr. J. W. Hershey, former head of the chemistry department. Its purpose was to draw a large number of the students together as a unit for interesting and special instruction in the recent developments in chemical research and closely allied fields; also it is a unit for entertainment. The club has been active continuously since its inauguration and is progressing as usual this year under the direction of the new department head, Professor J. M. Berkibile.

In addition to being enlightening, its bi-weekly meetings are entertaining and wholly enjoyable. At four o'clock on the Tuesday afternoons when Chemistry Club meets, the chemistry lecture room witnesses a nice blend of the formal and informal. The movie which the Chem Club goes see is instructive and constructive, but the atmosphere in which they find themselves is convivial.

Out-of-town trips which are usually a highlight in the Chemistry Club's year of activities have had to be curtailed this year because of transportation difficulties.

Dr. J. Willard Hershey

Choral Club

Wednesday evening from 6:45 until 7:45 found Macampus in the Student Assembly Room, for it was on that evening that the Choral Club, the largest musical organization of the college, rehearsed. Its purpose was to give all who have a desire to lift their voices in song a chance for practical experience under the baton of a gifted conductor. Results prove that it was a worthwhile undertaking.

At the beginning of the season, Professor Nevin W. Fisher, Choral Club director, boasted a chorus of nearly sixty voices. Since then members have come and gone, but the membership of the group has remained in the ranks with the colleges' largest choral groups of all time.

Throughout the year the chorus has worked on a variety of sacred and secular numbers, but the climax of their year's endeavors was "The Rose Maiden", a secular cantata by Frederick Cowen. It was given in the city auditorium on April 16. Soloists for the performance were Eloise McKnight, Lucile Harris, Harold Bean, and Clarence Burkholder.

Tending the executive end of the work were Wayne Parris, president, Joan Blough, secretary-treasurer, and librarians Ernest Ikenberry and Rex Wilson. Gertrude Conner has done an excellent job as accompanist.

Choir

All colleges have certain favorites among their institutions. The A Cappella Choir of McPherson College, in its twelfth year this season, is one of the favorites of students, faculty, townspeople, and alumni. This year's Choir, under the direction of Professor Nevin W. Fisher did not betray the confidence of its supporters.

Contrary to precedent, the Choir of this season sang not only unaccompanied numbers, but also selections with piano accompaniment, thus broadening the scope of its repertoire. Leora Dobrinski has served throughout the year as accompanist for the group.

A spring concert is usually the main objective of the A Cappella Choir, and the whole season is spent in preparation for that concert. Taking a cue from the increase in production in other fields, this year's Choir climaxed their first semester's work with the rendition of a Christmas cantata, "When the Christ Child Came", by Dr. Joseph Clokey, in addition to their concert on May 5. The cantata, with its poignant lyrics from the poem by Laura Spencer Porter, brilliant accompaniment, and novel chord combinations, was presented in the local Church of the Brethren and in a church in Lyons, Kansas.

The McPherson High School auditorium was the scene of the annual spring concert. Traditionally, the program was begun and closed with the Choir's theme song, Franz' "Dedication". Other unaccompanied numbers included Negro spirituals, selections from early church music, and a Russian number. Their most pretentious accompanied number was Harvey Gaul's musical arrangement of Walt Whitman's poem "I Hear America Singing".

Band

With a semester's experience as band leader carefully tucked in his belt, Alvin Klotz last fall started rounding up the remains of his last year's band and recruiting new members from the freshman ranks to give the 1943-44 athletic season a pep band to end all pep bands. The season was well worth his best efforts.

Even though the band was small in number, enthusiasm ran high and the din made when Klotz lifted a conducting hand was terrific. Without the pep supplied by the band, there would have been very little punch at ball games or in pep assemblies. Whether at home games or abroad, from the time "A Hot Time in the Old Town" was off to a rousing start, until the last strains of "All Hail to Thee" had faded away, the band set a high pace to follow.

By the roar of the tiger in "Tiger Rag", and the sound of "The Claxon", there could be no doubt concerning the night of the band's rehearsing, for on Monday evenings the portion of roof over the northwest corner of Sharp Hall fairly vibrated.

Two different instruments made their debut in the band this year. They were the piano accordian that Eva Mae Klotz played, and Don Keltner's bull fiddle of barber pole colors.

Other members of the band and the instruments of their choice were: trombones, Dale Brown and Eula Wolf; clarinets, Gertrude Conner, and Charles Dumond; cornets, Lloyd Dale and Kent Naylor; tenor saxophone, Evelyn Bentley, baritones, Alvin Klotz and Keith Burton; cymbals, Ila Verne Lobban; snare drum, Marilyn Sandy; bass drum, Helen Burkholder; bass horn, Don Scofield.

it's The QUAD Staff

College yearbook editors come and those same editors go, and each bemoans his own particular trials and tribulations. Business managers tread many a weary mile on Main Street convincing business men of the benefits of advertising in "our annual". Photographers snap picture after picture—that is, if they can get the film. Copy editors ponder over verbs, commas, pronouns. Yet the outgoing staff casts a reluctant eye at the last picture as it starts to the engravers, and at that final slug of copy when it finds the Republican copy basket.

and The SPECTATOR sits in clover

Behind four pages of neatly written copy and eye-catching ads which find themselves ready for student consumption by 12:15 Friday noon, there lies a story of consistent effort, week in and week out. The Spectator, long heralded as the best news organ in the conference, sees all, hears all, and tells what the editor deems fit for the public.

Although womanned instead of manned this year the Spectator did not become effeminate. The same direct style of writing about subjects of wide appeal characterized the paper during both semesters. From Ye Eds Blanche Geisert of the first semester and Anne Metzler, second term head, through Berneice Guthals and Virginia Bales as managing and campus editors, down to the most lowly reporter, there was the feeling that "The paper must go on!"

Co-business managers Virlie Howard and Keith Burton, with Lloyd Dale and Pat Kennedy as collectors, helped to make that possible through furnishing a firm financial foundation for the Spec.

Much appreciated by out of town, state, and country subscribers are the efforts of Helen Burkholder, circulation head and her staff of unheralded heroines.

Our Pledge To You—

During present wartimes - - -

For coming peacetimes - - -

To provide you both at your college and in your homes, whether they be in McPherson or the surrounding rural districts, with the best of water and light service, difficult even though it may seem at times because of the present conditions and restrictions.

To do our utmost when peacetimes finally arrive to continue that same high quality of service and in addition to so have planned in advance for postwar activities that you will derive even greater benefits from your own water and electric utility.
